ACADEMIC COSTUME

In 1895, the Intercollegiate Commission, a group of leading American educators, introduced an academic costume code which by design of gowns and hoods would indicate the various degrees, and which by colors would identify the various faculties.

Three types of gowns are indicated by the code. Those worn by the bachelors have long, pointed sleeves. Those worn by masters have long, closed sleeves with the arc of a circle near the bottom. Doctor's gowns are faced with velvet. The sleeves are full, round, and open with three bars of velvet on each sleeve. The velvet facing of the bars on the sleeves may be black or the same color as the binding of the hood.

Hoods are made of material identical with the gown and are lined in the official academic color of the institution conferring the degree (e.g., green and white for MSU; burnt orange and white for the University of Texas; blue and gold for UCLA). If the institution has more than one color, the chevron is used to introduce the second color. Colored velvet or velveteen binds the hoods and indicates the department or faculty to which the degree pertains.

The color of the velvet of the hood is distinctive of the subject to which the degree pertains. For example, the trimming for the degree of Master of Science in Agriculture should be maize, representing agriculture, rather than golden yellow, representing science. Generally, the code for the velvet of the hood is the same as listed below for tassels.

At Michigan State University, it is customary to identify the candidates graduating from the different departments of study by tassels of the official department color as established by the Intercollegiate Code.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

Michigan State University, a leading land-grant university and the first agricultural college in America, strives for excellence in providing students a broad curricula of liberal and practical education. MSU also serves people of the state, nation, and world through its numerous research, extension, and international programs.

Now in its 134th year, Michigan State University has grown from three buildings and six faculty members to one of the largest universities in the nation. It has more than 3,000 faculty/staff engaged in teaching, research, and public service; more than 400 campus buildings; and more than 5,200 acres of land, of which some 2,100 acres are in existing or planned campus development. More than 42,000 students now attend the university at East Lansing, of which some 86 percent are from Michigan.

Founded in 1855 to educate youth for the major occupation of that day — farming — MSU has broadened its offerings to meet the educational needs of today. The university now has a Graduate School and 14 colleges — Agriculture and Natural Resources, Arts and Letters, Business, Communication Arts and Sciences, Education, Engineering, Human Ecology, Human Medicine, James Madison, Natural Science, Nursing, Osteopathic Medicine, Social Science, and Veterinary Medicine.

At the center of all major universities is a cluster of disciplines that constitute the liberal arts and sciences. At MSU, this center consists of three colleges — Arts and Letters, Natural Science, and Social Science. Providing outstanding undergraduate and graduate degree programs with majors in traditional disciplines, these colleges also have special programs that enable students to obtain a broad multidisciplinary education. In addition, in collaboration with the College of Education, the three colleges prepare students to become teachers in the secondary schools of Michigan and the nation. These colleges touch the lives of all undergraduate students at MSU by providing the general education that constitutes approximately one-quarter of the undergraduate program. The Honors College, which enables superior undergraduate students to waive normal graduation requirements and undertake individual programs, attracts many of the nation's finest young scholars. MSU is proud of its record in producing Rhodes Scholars, a total of thirteen (ten in the last sixteen years); the university also has provided six Marshall Scholarship winners. These British scholarships are two of the most distinguished and prestigious academic awards that an American student can receive. Michigan State University also is a prominent sponsor of National Merit Scholars.

MSU adds to the store of knowledge with a wide array of outstanding research activities that are supported by a multimillion dollar sponsor-funding program. Some major facilities include the Pesticide Research Center, which presents a model program of multidisciplinary research and teaching; the Plant Research Laboratory, operated with the U.S. Department of Energy as a national plant biology center; and the MSU/W. K. Kellogg Biological Station, which has been designated as a National Research Preserve. In collaboration with both the National Science Foundation and the U.S. Department of Energy, the National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory at MSU is examining the nuclei of the heaviest of elements.

Benefits of the university are brought to the public by the Agricultural Experiment Station, Lifelong Education Programs, and the Cooperative Extension Service. Their programs provide technical information and formal course work for many Michigan citizens. The Kellogg Center for Continuing Education, one of the finest conference centers in the nation, annually hosts nearly 60,000 adults who come to the campus for some 600 conferences and other educational meetings.

The university's land-grant concept of service is international. Supported by grants from the federal government and private foundations, MSU maintains research and educational assistance projects on a worldwide basis. International projects have given many faculty members overseas experience, adding a new dimension to their teaching.

Michigan State University is a member of the Association of American Universities, National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, American Council on Education, American Council of Learned Societies, International Association of Universities, Association of Graduate Schools, Council of Graduate Schools, and the Committee on Institutional Cooperation.

M.S.U., we love thy shadows
When twilight silence falls,
Flushing deep and softly paling
O'er ivy-covered halls.
Beneath the pines we'll gather
To give our faith so true,
Sing our love for Alma Mater
And thy praises, M.S.U.

HONORARY DEGREE

G. D. HSIUNG

You have an international reputation as a scientist and educator. As one of the world's foremost virologists you have done as much as any living person to develop diagnostic virology into an important weapon against disease. Your creative research in viral electron microscopy has made clinical virology laboratories an integral part of major hospitals everywhere. And you have trained literally hundreds of the leading virologists in the United States and other countries.

After receiving your baccalaureate degree in biology from Ginling College in your native China, you came to Michigan State University, where you were awarded an M.S. degree in bacteriology and a Ph.D. in microbiology. You then began your long association with the Yale University School of Medicine and joined one of the few research groups then working on problems of animal and human viral disease. It was this group that pioneered the clinical virology of polio that resulted in the vaccine trials of Enders and Jonas Salk.

In 1960 you became director of the Virus Diagnostic Laboratory at the Yale University School of Medicine. In 1965 you joined the faculty of the New York University School of Medicine and became chief of the Virology Laboratory at the Veterans Administration Hospital in New York. Since 1974 you have been a professor in the Department of Laboratory Medicine at Yale. You are also director of the Virology Reference Laboratory in the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Your devotion to knowledge is attested by your coauthorship of more than two hundred research articles and your textbooks, which are standard sources in diagnostic virology laboratories. Your investigative work has emphasized pathogenesis in animal model systems, and you have discovered a number of novel viruses that are now widely studied.

You are deeply committed to using science in the service of cross-cultural awareness. You have given generously of your time and energy to teach in China, to arrange fellowships allowing Chinese and American scientists to work in each other's country, and to encourage both Asian and American students to find educational opportunities in science.

Although your admirable work may one day end, it will do so without conclusion, for your contributions to science and society have been and will continue to be multiplied through the accomplishments of your devoted students, who have gone on to outstanding careers in science.

In recognition of your brilliant career and the honor that you have brought to this institution, Michigan State University is proud to award you the honorary degree of Doctor of Science.

FRANCO MODIGLIANI

You have achieved worldwide distinction as an economist and educator. Because of your singular scholarship and diligence in the pursuit of truth, you have had a profound influence on modern economic thought. You have used your professional knowledge and your talents as a teacher to enrich the lives and advance the careers of many university students.

After receiving your baccalaureate degree from the University of Rome in your native Italy, you came to the United States and earned a doctorate in economics at the New School of Social Research in New York City. Your exceptional teaching career began at Barnard College, Columbia University in 1942 and, the following year, at the New School of Social Research. Over the next four decades you joined the faculties of the University of Illinois, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Northwestern University, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where you have been professor of economics and finance since 1962. Your students and colleagues alike affirm that the brilliance and vigor of your teaching are enhanced by a warm and generous personality.

The excellence and originality of your research publications have been recognized with many professional offices and awards, including honorary degrees from both American and European universities. You have been a long-time constant to the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, president of the American Economic Association and the American Finance Association, and honorary president of the International Economic Association. The culmination of these honors came in 1985, when you were awarded the Nobel Prize in economic science.

Among your notable accomplishments is the coauthorship of the Modigliani-Miller Theorem, which is basic to the modern theory of finance and financial analysis. You had a major role in building a complete theoretical model of the U.S. economy for the Federal Reserve System, and you were an originator of the Life Cycle Hypothesis of Saving, which is widely used in the study of family and national saving and wealth.

In recognition of your exemplary career in higher education and your outstanding contributions to national and international economics, Michigan State University is proud to award you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

HONORARY DEGREE

ROBERT C. STEMPEL

Your career as an engineer and business executive exemplifies the many ways in which dedication and creative intelligence can influence industrial life in America. During your three decades with General Motors, you have succeeded in a wide range of responsible positions: as Chevrolet's director of engineering, as general manager of both the Chevrolet and Pontiac Motor Divisions, as managing director of Adam Opel AG in the Federal Republic of Germany, and as vice president of the Buick-Oldsmobile-Cadillac group. In 1987 you were appointed president and chief operating officer of General Motors, a distinction that has been widely approved and acclaimed in the automobile industry.

Your educational background includes bachelor's and doctoral degrees from Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and an M.B.A. from the Advanced Management Program of Michigan State University's College of Business. Your continuing interest in education and your generosity of spirit are often demonstrated when, on your visits to college campuses, you meet with students and enthusiastically discuss with them ideas relating to engineering and management.

Because of your technical skill and business experience, you have defined the future needs and requirements of the automotive industry and have energetically responded to them. Under your leadership, General Motors is developing a company-wide quality network, a system incorporating a statistical approach as a common language and framework of ideas for operating, engineering, and management. This innovative undertaking bears the indelible mark of your ingenuity and devotion to the highest standards of quality and production.

As a distinguished citizen with broad interests and a keen social conscience, you have served as an officer or trustee in such diverse organizations as the Detroit Community Day School, the Economic Club of Detroit, the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, the National Industrial Advisory Council, and the Michigan State University College of Business Alumni Board.

In recognition of your outstanding career, your public service, and your contributions to the advancement of the automotive industry in Michigan and the nation, Michigan State University is proud to award you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.
