ACADEMIC COSTUME

In 1895, the Intercollegiate Commission, a group of leading American educators, introduced an academic costume code which by design of gowns and hoods would indicate the various degrees, and which by colors would identify the various faculties.

Three types of gowns are indicted by the code. Those worn by the bachelors have long, pointed sleeves. Those worn by masters have long, closed sleeves with the arc of a circle near the bottom. Doctor's gowns are faced with velvet. The sleeves are full, round, and open with three bars of velvet on each sleeve. The velvet facing of the bars on the sleeves may be black or the same color as the binding of the hood.

Hoods are made of material identical with the gown and are lined in the official academic color of the institution conferring the degree (e.g., green and white for MSU; burnt orange and white for the University of Texas; blue and gold for UCLA). If the institution has more than one color, the chevron is used to introduce the second color. Colored velvet or velveteen binds the hoods and indicates the department or faculty to which the degree pertains.

The color of the velvet of the hood is distinctive of the subject to which the degree pertains. For example, the trimming for the degree of Master of Science in Agriculture should be maize, representing agriculture, rather than golden yellow, representing science. Generally, the code for the velvet of the hood is the same as listed below for tassels.

At Michigan State University, it is customary to identify the candidates graduating from the different departments of study by tassels of the official department color as established by the Intercollegiate Code.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

Michigan State University, one of the nation's leading land-grant universities, was founded in 1855 as the first agricultural college with only six faculty members and three buildings to provide youths with an education in farming. Now, 140 years later, MSU continues to strive for excellence in providing a diverse student body with a broad and rich combination of liberal and practical education.

Today, the East Lansing campus looks quite different than it did in 1855. More than 5,200 acres of land encompass more than 400 buildings, and more than 3,000 faculty and staff are engaged in teaching, research and public service. More than 40,000 students — 85 percent from Michigan — attend the University's main campus.

Our student body represents every county in the state, every state in the nation, and 107 foreign nations. Minority students comprise more than 14 percent of the campus population, and our campus includes the largest number of African American students among all Big Ten schools.

Michigan State University's commitment to diversity and multiculturalism in its student body, faculty, staff, curriculum and outreach programs is exemplified through world-wide services in numerous research, extension, and international programs.

More than a century after its agricultural beginnings, Michigan State has a Graduate School and 14 colleges: Agriculture and Natural Resources, Arts and Letters, the Broad College of Business, Communication Arts and Sciences, Education, Engineering, Human Ecology, Human Medicine, James Madison, Natural Science, Nursing, Osteopathic Medicine, Social Science and Veterinary Medicine.

Today, three colleges represent the central academic disciplines which most universities refer to as the liberal arts and sciences: Arts and Letters, Natural Science, and Social Science. These colleges also provide outstanding undergraduate and graduate degree programs with majors in traditional disciplines while also providing special programs that enable students to obtain a broad, multidisciplinary education. The College of Education collaborates with the colleges to help prepare students to become teachers in the secondary schools of Michigan as well the nation. Our residence hall system is designed to complement and enhance the learning experiences of our students.

The Honors College, which attracts fine young scholars nationwide, enables students to waive standard graduation requirements and undertake enriched academic programs. MSU has produced 13 Rhodes Scholars, six Marshall Scholarship winners, and 11 Churchill Scholarship recipients. These British scholarships are among the most distinguished and prestigious academic award that an American student can receive.

Multimillion dollar, sponsor-funded programs support a wide array of outstanding research activities at MSU. Major facilities include the Pesticide Research Laboratory, operated with the U.S. Department of Energy as a national plant biology center; and the MSU/W.K. Kellogg Biological Station, which has been designated as a National Research Preserve. In collaboration with both the National Science Foundation and the U.S. Department of Energy, the National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory at MSU is able to study the nuclei of the heaviest elements.

The public significantly benefits from the University through University Outreach, MSU Extension Service, and the Agricultural Experiment Station which provides technical information and course work for many Michigan citizens. The Kellogg Center, one of the finest nationwide, annually hosts some 30,000 adults who come to the campus for approximately 600 conferences and other educational meetings.

Service to the international community is equally important. Supported by grants from the federal government and private foundations, MSU sustains educational and research assistance projects internationally. These projects have given many faculty members overseas experience and have added new dimensions to their teaching.

Michigan State University is a member of the Association of American Universities, National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, American Council on Education, American Council of Learned Societies, International Association of Universities, Association of Graduate Schools, Council of Graduate Schools, and the Committee on Institutional Cooperation.

HONORARY DEGREE

BRUCE M. ALBERTS

As a foremost expert on cells, you understand well the principle of community: the existence of an individual cell depends on the community of cells around it. Similarly, as President of the National Academy of Science, you recognize that the pursuit of science cannot exist in isolation from the surrounding society. Thus, in your 30-year career as a researcher, educator and administrator, you have advocated that scientists play a larger role in society, not simply for the benefit of their chosen profession, but for the greater good of the nation.

In your role as President of the National Academy of Sciences, you have been described by The Chronicle of Higher Education as a "fierce activist for science and science education." You have argued forcefully in recent years that we, as a nation, are "severely underinvested in the education of our young people." To rectify this, you have sponsored innovative science education programs in urban schools and encouraged fellow scientists to improve education in their communities. Your program in San Francisco, "City Science," has become a national model for bringing the latest and best science instruction into elementary schools.

Your own interest in science began in your early years in Chicago and continued at Harvard, where you earned a doctorate in biochemical sciences in 1965. You joined the faculty of Princeton University the following year, moving on to the University of California, San Francisco 10 years later. You remained there until 1993 when you left to become President of the National Academy of Sciences in Washington.

Prior to coming to Washington, your career as an educator and researcher brought you many professional appointments and distinctions, including the American Cancer Society Lifetime Research Professorship in 1980, chair of the department of biochemistry and biophysics at the University of California at San Francisco, and more recently President-elect of the American Society of Biochemistry and Molecular Biology. You have also served on any number of prestigious advisory and editorial boards, including the Commission on Life Sciences.

To many of the graduate students in tonight's audience, you are most recognized as the lead author of The Molecular Biology of The Cell, a landmark 1983 textbook that remains a classroom standard today. Reflected in this book is your research work in unraveling the mechanism of genetic replication — how one cell becomes two. This work has been described by experts in cell biology as a "fundamental" breakthrough in the field.

As President of the National Academy of Sciences, you have pursued your role as science advocate within the halls of power. The National Academy of Sciences provides research data to Congress and Federal agencies on everything from astrophysics to urban violence and represents the best work of some 7,000 volunteer scientists throughout the country. Heading up the Academy requires not only the practical skills of a good administrator, but the vision of a leader as well, guiding policy for critical science-based issues such as health care, technological innovation, and environmental protection in the years ahead.

To such a task, you are "uniquely suited," according to your colleagues, because of the "quality and beauty of your work" and your "unselfish devotion" to improving the institution of science at all levels. In recognition of your leadership, I award you the honorary degree of Doctor of Science from Michigan State University.

HONORARY DEGREE

DAMON KNIGHT

You grew up in Hood River, Oregon, the son of the high school principal, and you spent much of your childhood immersed in the world of books and magazines, from Dickens and Dumas to romantic novels and mythology to the early issues of Amazing Stories and Science Wonders. Your first story appeared in print when you were 18 and you have gone on from there to publish scores of short stories, more than a dozen novels, countless reviews, and books on the history of science fiction, on writing fiction, and on Charles Fort.

From your first short stories to your latest novel, Why Do Birds, your writing reflects a keen skepticism of accepted dogmas and an idealism that manifests itself in urbane satire on the all-too-real imperfections of the systems under which we live.

You have edited over 50 anthologies of science fiction, including the important Orbit series of original fiction. You have translated French science fiction for English-speaking audiences and frequently taken part in international symposia and lecture tours. For more than 40 years, you have shaped the direction of science fiction with the Orbit series and with the literary criticism that you have applied in your reviews and essays on science fiction. You have always insisted on the highest literary craftsmanship, in your own as well as others' work, and in so doing you have helped educate both writers and readers to seek such quality also.

You have given other science fiction writers a much stronger sense of professional community, founding and serving as first president of the Science Fiction Writers of America from 1965 to 1967. A decade earlier, you had established the Milford Writers' Conference for professional science fiction writers, a conference you directed for 20 years.

In 1968, together with Kate Wilhelm and Robin Scott Wilson, you founded the Clarion Workshop in Science Fiction and Fantasy, which you brought to Michigan State University in 1972, where it has flourished ever since. For 27 summers, you taught the crucial final fortnight of the Workshop. With imagination and playfulness, you have required Clarion students to bring rigorous literary standards to bear in everything they wrote. Together with Kate Wilhelm, you have made Clarion what it is today—what has been recognized by other writers "an integral part of the American science fiction community" and "one of the most successful writing workshops anywhere."

You have received wide recognition for your contributions to science fiction and science fiction criticism, garnering such honors as the Hugo Award of the World Science Fiction Society, awarded for your collection of ground-breaking science fiction criticism, In Search of Wonder. You have also received the Pilgrim Award of the Science Fiction Research Association and the Grand Master Nebula Award from your professional peers in the Science Fiction Writers of America, as well as the C.E.S. Wood Award of the Oregon Literature Advisory Council for your distinguished career in letters.

Your work as a writer, scholar and teacher has placed an indelible stamp on contemporary science fiction. To your long list of accomplishments in this field, I add another and present to you on behalf of Michigan State University the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities.

HONORARY DEGREE

LEE S. SHULMAN

As a former Michigan State professor in education from 1963 to 1982, you have recalled "many happy memories of intellectual and professional adventure in the wonderful scholarly community" here. The consensus from your many colleagues and students at Michigan State is that the existence of this community owes most to the vision and hard work of one person in particular: yourself.

You began your academic career at the University of Chicago, where you earned your B.A. in psychology in 1959 and a Ph.D. in Education Psychology in 1963. From there you came to Michigan State, where in the early 1970s, you pioneered work in medical education, revolutionizing how clinical reasoning is studied and taught in medical schools across the country, including at Michigan State.

In the mid-1970s you moved from medical education to teacher education. In 1976 you started the Institute for Research and Teaching, beginning leading-edge research on teaching and teacher learning that continues here today. Your "brilliant" research and writings on teaching, have explored issues such as "discovery learning" and "processes of inquiry," and have contributed to education from the kindergarten to the college level. You have also contributed seminal chapters in the Handbook of Research on Teaching, which was published in 1983 and remains a standard in the field.

Since 1982, you have been the Charles E. Ducommun Professor of Education and Professor of Psychology at Stanford University. At Stanford in the 1980s, you were active in creating the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards, which assesses the competence of master teachers in various subject fields and grade levels. Most recently, you have been focusing your considerable pedagogical expertise on higher education, to see how faculty can create disciplinary communities for the evaluation and support of improved teaching as a form of "community property" in universities.

Throughout your career, you have been the recipient of numerous honors and awards, including a Guggenheim Fellowship and an American Psychological Association Fellowship. You have been President of the National Academy of Education and American Educational Research Association. In 1994, you received the American Psychological Association's E.L. Thorndike Award for Distinguished Psychological Contributions to Education.

As a member of this university community in 1977, you received MSU's Distinguished Faculty Award. I understand from your colleagues and protégés at Michigan State that this is one of your most cherished awards. I hope that this honorary degree of Doctor of Education that I now confer will also be one you hold in high esteem.

HELEN THOMAS

I think it is safe to say that you have begun more sentences with the words "Mr. President" than anyone in America. As White House correspondent for UPI for 30 years, you have interviewed each Chief Executive of the United States since John F. Kennedy. In doing so, you have become famous yourself: first, as a pioneer in what was once a men's-only field; and later, as a fixture in presidential press conferences, embodying the best of the Fourth Estate by asking tough but fair questions and producing consistently accurate and balanced reporting.

A colleague from the White House press corps has said that you have a gift for coaxing the news out of presidents and this news, in turn, "becomes the grist for everyone else's stories and everyone else's thoughts." Your influence no doubt goes further than just your colleagues in the press. You have influenced how every one of us gathered here today thinks of the American presidency.

In a career so marked by "firsts" and "bests," it is impossible to list in a few minutes all your accomplishments. You were the first woman officer of the National Press Club as well as the first president of the White House Correspondent's Association. You have traveled around the world with Presidents Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan, Bush and Clinton. You have lectured on the White House at college campuses and received numerous honorary degrees and awards. You have been named one of the most influential women in America and are a member of Michigan Women's Hall of Fame.

Born in Detroit, you graduated from Wayne State University in 1942 and shortly thereafter moved to Washington to begin to work for United Press International. Although you left this state years ago, you continue to have ties with family in the state whom you often visit. In fact, four of your nieces have graduated from Michigan State.

Your connection to Michigan State also extends to our faculty. One MSU journalism professor remembers your help during presidential races in the state in the 1960s and 1970s. As part of the national press corps, you would often take time to help local women reporters develop stories and gain access to the candidates. You made it easier for her and others like her to cover politics with your encouragement and your leadership.

The kind of hard work, integrity and perseverance you have shown throughout the years is an inspiration not just to women journalists, but to all who embark upon professional careers. True to your profession, you are fond of saying that "You're only as good as your last story." May I say that not only your last story but your entire career has been very good for women, for journalism, for politics, and for our nation. It gives me great pleasure to present to you the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities from Michigan State University.

HONORARY DEGREE

KATE WILHELM

You began writing and publishing in 1956, but you began telling stories much earlier than that, as you were growing up and taking care of your two younger brothers. You retold the stories from books you read, the movies you saw and, when those ran out, you made up more tales—always leaving the end of the story in suspense, to be continued the next day. Like many writers, you read everything you could get your hands on. At the age of seven, you were also enjoying the guilty pleasures of listening to the radio shows Lights Out and Inner Sanctum, sitting on the stairs in the dark since they were forbidden to you because you were “too young.”

You have published over three dozen books, and have repeatedly received Nebula Awards from that toughest of audiences, the Science Fiction Writers of America, honoring your short stories and novellas. Your novel Where Late the Sweet Birds Sang won the coveted Hugo Award, the Locus Award, and the Jupiter Award for best science fiction novel. Another novel, Juniper Time (whose protagonist happens to be a Ph.D. candidate at Michigan State), was a runner-up for the American Book Award and won the Apollo Prize for best science fiction novel published in France.

Your writings are sometimes described as “genre fiction,” from science fiction to mystery to suspense to comedy, and sometimes to mainstream fiction. In fact, they regularly transgress the boundaries of traditional literary labels, and call the thoughtful reader’s attention to the woeful inadequacies of those very labels. What they all share is a penetrating insight into the human psyche and its response to powerful stress, and a complex moral vision of human choices and their consequences. They are often characterized by a chilling psychological suspense as well as by a frequent concern with the effects of bio-technological change on human society and its individual members. You have created a splendid series of strong female protagonists, women who are scientists, judges, linguists, parents and leaders, survivors and storytellers. Like your mother, whom you have called your personal “heroic figure,” they are “strong women all, determined women, unconquerable women.”

From 1963 to 1976, you co-directed the Milford Science Fiction Writers’ Conference with Damon Knight; you have also conducted workshops for young writers in Oregon and taught in the Haystack Writers’ Workshop sponsored by Portland State University. You have traveled around the world to take part in international symposia and international lecture tours.

In 1968, together with Damon Knight and Robin Scott Wilson, you founded the Clarion Workshop in Science Fiction and Fantasy, which you brought to Michigan State University in 1972, where it has flourished ever since. For 27 summers, you taught the crucial final fortnight of the Workshop. With passion and tact, you have required Clarion students to bring the highest artistic standards to bear on all their writing. Together with Damon Knight, you have made Clarion what it is today, a training ground for young writers who have themselves gone on to publish widely and win awards, ranging from Hugos and Nebulas to the prestigious MacArthur Fellowship.

Your career testifies to the ability of words to transport us to other worlds, enriching our own along the way. For your contributions to American fiction as both a writer and teacher, I bestow upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities from Michigan State University.

1996 DISTINGUISHED ALUMNI AWARD

SALVADOR ALEMAÑY-PLANELL

Salvador Alemañy-Planell has distinguished himself as a professional in agriculture and in education. A recipient of a BSA from the University of Puerto Rico and a diploma in Advanced Studies in Agronomy from North Carolina State University, he was awarded the M.S. degree in Agricultural Economics by Michigan State University. He completed the academic requirements for the Ph.D. before increased demands on his talents by the University of Puerto Rico interrupted his program. In 1994, the University of Puerto Rico awarded him an honorary doctorate.

Sal Alemañy has spent his professional career at the University of Puerto Rico. His duties in the College of Agricultural and Mechanical Arts encompassed teaching, research and service, and culminated in his appointment as Dean of the College of Agricultural Science at the Mayaguez campus. Appointed Chancellor in 1979, he also served as consultant to the President of the University of Puerto Rico, member of the Board of Trustees, and ultimately, Acting President of the University.

Alemañy has been a frequent consultant on issues of higher education and agriculture. He collaborated with Professor Emeritus Raleigh Barlowe in publishing Land Resource Economics: The Political Economy of Rural and Urban Land Resource Use. He serves on a number of national commissions dealing with research and training in tropical agronomy. The recipient of notable awards in agriculture and education, he is a member of the honor societies Gamma Sigma Delta, Phi Kappa Phi, and Alpha Zeta.

NATHIEL BURTLEY

Dr. Nathiel (Nat) Burtley currently serves as assistant athletic director in the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics at Michigan State University. A native of Cairo, Illinois, he completed a B.A. in political science and M.S. in speech pathology at Southern Illinois University. In 1974, he received the Ph.D. in educational administration and urban education from Michigan State.

Recognized nationally as a leader and consultant in school reform, Nat Burtley has been described as a risk taker, visionary, innovator, consensus builder, and humanitarian. Under his leadership, the Flint Community School District became a leader in school reform, utilizing a systemic approach to implement planned change. Among its innovations were early childhood education with day care in the high schools; non-graded elementary schools; a community education program advocating on behalf of the students in areas such as health and safety; privatization of school busing and maintenance; and site-based decision making.

Dr. Burtley has been honored by the Fortune 500 Education Summit, the Frederick Douglass Award, Partners in Community Service, the National Multi-Cultural Leadership and Involvement Award, and the Donald Reigle Community Service Award.

1996 DISTINGUISHED ALUMNI AWARD

DONALD B. KECK

Donald Keck received his B.S., M.S., and Ph.D. degrees in Physics from Michigan State University. He subsequently joined the Research, Development and Engineering laboratory of Corning Incorporated, where since 1986 he has been Director of Optics and Photonics Research.

Dr. Keck was a key member of the Corning team that invented low-loss optical fiber, which was instrumental in the development of the Information Superhighway via fiber optics. His research areas include molecular spectroscopy, gradient index and aspheric optics, guided wave optics, fiber sensing, passive fiber optical components and optical fiber waveguides. In the latter area he did some of the pioneering work on waveguide attenuation and dispersion and the measurement of the optical properties of fibers. Dr. Keck has authored more than 85 papers and publications, and holds 27 patents. He is co-author of portions of five books and has been the subject of other books.

Dr. Keck has served on numerous national and international committees addressing optical fiber communications. He was editor for the IEEE/OSA Journal of Lightwave Technology, and chair of the Technical Council for OSA. Co-recipient of the Technology Achievement Award of the International Society of Optical Engineers, he was also awarded the Engineering Materials Award. He received the IEEE/OSA John Tyndall Award (1992), and the U.S. Department of Commerce American Innovator Award (1995). The National Inventors Hall of Fame and the National Academy of Engineering elected him to membership in 1993.

He serves on boards of directors of the OSA and National Inventors Hall of Fame, the Corning Chapter National Red Cross and Corning Salvation Army.

DRAYTON MCLANE, JR.

Drayton McClane is Chairman of the McClane Group, a family-owned holding company responsible for managing the Houston Astros, Astrodome U.S.A., M-C International, M-Group, McLane International, Inc. and Classic Foods. Growing up in Texas, he earned the B.B.A. at Baylor University and a Master's degree in marketing at Michigan State University. He returned to the McClane Company to master all facets of the business, becoming President and CEO in 1978. Following a merger of the McClane Company and Wal-Mart Stores, he assumed additional responsibilities as Vice Chairman of Wal-Mart.

McLane's leadership in the food industry was punctuated by his service as president of the Texas Wholesale Grocers' Association and chairman of the American Wholesale Grocers' Association. Actively involved in community and charitable organizations, he currently serves on boards of directors of a number of hospitals, banks, and civic organizations. He is a trustee of Baylor University and the South Texas College of Law.

Drayton McClane has been widely honored for his accomplishments by civic organizations such as the Boy Scouts of America as well as by food industry organizations. He was inducted into the Texas Business Hall of Fame and received Entrepreneur of the Year awards from both Texas A&M and Venture Magazine. He has been honored with the Baylor University Distinguished Alumni Award and the W. R. White Meritorious Service Award.

ANDREE LAYTON ROAF

Andree Layton Roaf, a former scientist who dwelled on insects and microbes, is the first African-American woman, and only the second woman, to serve on the Arkansas Supreme Court. She received a B.S. degree in Zoology from Michigan State University and a J.D. degree with high honors, from the University of Arkansas.

Following graduation, Andree Roaf worked as a Bacteriologist for the Michigan State Department of Health and subsequently as Research Biologist for the Food and Drug Administration and Biologist for the National Center for Toxicological Research. In 1975, she decided to go to law school. After passing the bar, she served as an instructor at the University of Arkansas and then became a partner in Walker, Roaf, Campbell, Ivory and Dunklin, a general practice with emphasis on bankruptcy, real estate, probate, wills and estates, and domestic relations. In 1995 she was appointed by Governor Jim Guy Tucker to the Arkansas Supreme Court. In her professional life, Judge Roaf has published a number of legal and scientific articles.

In addition to her professional roles, Judge Roaf has a history of being involved in civic activities. These include service to the Winthrop Rockefeller Foundation, Friends of KRLEFM, Arkansas for the Arts, and the Arkansas Code of Ethics Commission.

Judge Roaf comes from a family of Spartans, including her mother, sisters, and husband. She proudly maintains that her family, including two sons and two daughters, is her first priority. We honor her as one who represents proven achievement in all of her multiple roles.

ALMA MATER.....Traynor
M.S.U., We love thy shadows
When twilight silence falls,
Flushing deep and softly paling
O'er ivy-covered halls.
Beneath the pines we'll gather
To give our faith so true,
Sing our love for Alma Mater
And thy praises, M.S.U.
(The MSU Wind Symphony and Audience)

RECESSIONAL
The MSU Wind Symphony

We would like to express our appreciation to the Students for State and staff for their assistance at the commencement exercises.
The audience is requested to remain seated while those in the processional are entering and leaving the arena.
