NEW AGRICULTURAL BUILDING AS IT WILL APPEAR WHEN COMPLETED.

THE NEW AGRICULTURAL BUILDING.

This week we present to our readers a cut of the new Agricultural building as it is to appear when completed. It will occupy the site of the old farm barns just east of the veterinary laboratory and south of the old agricultural building and will face the west. In size it will be 190 feet long by 86 feet wide, and five stories high including basement and finished attic. It will be constructed of Bedford stone and paving brick with interior concrete construction making it fire-proof throughout. In addition to the main building there will be a stock judging pavilion, 45 x 110 feet, one and one-half stories high, extending to the rear. This will be so arranged as to admit of dividing it into two separate rooms when necessary and will have a gallery along all four sides for the accommodation of visitors.

The basement will be given up to the department of farm mechanics and meat demonstration. Laboratories for farm machinery, cement laboratories, rooms for meat cutting and artificial refrigeration and other smaller rooms will occupy this floor.

The ground floor will contain the offices of the department of animal husbandry in the southwest corner and the director's office in the northwest corner. The balance being given up to class rooms with a total seating capacity of 400.

The second floor will be given over to the department of agronomy and will contain offices, laboratories and storage rooms for work in soils and soil physics.

The north side of the third floor will be occupied by the laboratories of the experiment station, and the balance for the use of the department of farm crops.

The fourth floor will contain a large assembly hall for the use of large special classes in agronomy, etc.

Work has already been begun and will be pushed along as rapidly as the weather will permit. It will be ready for occupancy at the beginning of the school year 1909.

CLARENCE LANGDELL ALLEN.

A gloom of sadness was cast over the College community Saturday by the death of Clarence L. Allen, a freshman agricultural student from Tacoma, Washington. Mr. Allen was born in Yates Center, Kansas, in 1886 and later moved with his parents to Tacoma, Washington, where his father is a teacher in the High School. After completing the eleventh grade in High School he entered Washington State College where he attended one year, coming to M. A. C. last fall to continue his agricultural education.

Several weeks ago he was attacked with a peculiar case of typhoid which, though at times seemed to be yielding to medical treatment, finally developed complications which caused his death. His mother and younger brother, who arrived here some time ago, left Sunday morning with the body for Tacoma. A representative of the Eumonian Society, of which he was a member, accompanied them as far as Chicago and saw them safely started on their long, sad journey.

PROF. J. D. TOWAR OFFERED PRESIDENCY OF AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Prof. J. D. Towar, '85, who, last summer, was elected Director of the Experiment Station at Laramie, Wyo., has been offered the presidency of that institution. Prof. Towar's past experience is varied and extensive and will be invaluable should he accept the position tendered him.

Williams hall has received some much needed repairs during vacation.

N. S. Mayo, '88, of Santiago de las Vegas, Cuba, in renewing his subscription to the RECORD, states that he has been spending some time in the southern states selecting live stock for the Cuban government.

R. S. Baker of the above class is now at his home in East Lansing where he expects to remain during the summer. In the magazines of the current month we notice three articles from his pen, two in the American Magazine and one in Century.

'89-'92.

Elmer F. Wolcott, '89-'92, North Lansing, has been with the Condensed Milk Factory for 13 years, and during this time superintendent for the last five years. He must be a man of steady habits.

'91-'92.

In the current issue of the Review of Reviews appears an article by Guy Elliott Mitchell, '91-'92, entitled, "To Farm America's Swamps." In this article he states that there are upward of 100,000,000 acres of fertile but now useless swamp lands, and further that of the two classes of internal improvements, drainage is likely to prove even more popular, as a public issue, than irrigation, for the swamps are scattered throughout the already well-settled portions of the country and the engineering problems involved in their drainage are comparatively simple and the cost considerable less than that of irrigation.

P. V. Ross, lawyer, is engaged in his profession at Los Angeles, Cal. His address is 923 Pacific Building.

Under the heading "Sterling's Grandest House of Worship," the Sterling, Ill., Gazette gives a three-page illustrated write-up of the new Methodist church recently erected in that city under the leadership of Rev. W. W. Diehl, of the above class.

In speaking of Mr. Diehl the Gazette speaks in part as follows:

"Rev. Wilbur W. Diehl, who has been the pastor of the Fourth Street Methodist church for the past seven years, has, in the building of this grand house of worship, accomplished a feat that will make his name prominent in the history of this church as long as the organization exists. The pastor is a man in the very prime of life and in the flower of his best ability. He is a man of force and the key note of his effort is 'accomplishment.' Whether in the pulpit or in the direction of the work of building a church, which has occupied much of his time for the past three or four years, he is the same energetic, resourceful, practical and sane man."

COLLEGE SPIRIT.

College spirit is difficult to describe. It is a real thing, but it is intangible. It may not always manifest itself in the same fashion.

It seems to me that in general it may be said to be the community idea with the college as the concrete object of devotion, as over against the personal and selfish interest. It is the expression of the thought "not what I can get, but what I can give." It has several prominent characteristics.

1. Loyalty to the best interests of the college. The true college man will not only work for the fame of the institution, but he will in some measure at least govern his own acts with reference to the credit of the college.

2. A sense of honor which craves a reputation for the college based on real merit.

3. A spirit of co-operation which shows itself in a willingness to work with other students, with alumni with faculty, and with trustees for progressive steps.

4. The tossing off of an undue spirit of criticism and an undue spirit of independence.

5. Enthusiasm for college activities and college triumphs, not only in athletics, but in scholarship and in all the work of the institution.

6. A real affection which personalizes the college, and which brings men back to it full of sentiment and of real devotion. Out of this should spring a spirit of sacrifice, not only in the college, but in future days, and a willingness to help whenever the college needs help.

SOLDIERING IN CUBA.

From a letter from A. Boettcher, with '10, we quote the following:

"We are getting a taste of real soldiering now; sleeping in the open air without tents and only a blanket between us and the sky. Oh, its great. I enjoy it all even though the heat is at times almost unbearable. I am fully resolved to come to Cuba to live when I am an old and battle scarred hero on the retired list.

"Last Sunday I spent in Havana. In the morning I took in the church there, then I tried a Sphigeti Cafe for dinner and by the aid of signs and a mixed Spano-English managed to get a good meal under my belt. From Havana I crossed the bay to El Moro. I think its garrison numbers about 75 men. No one hindering I wandered about from roof to the deepest dungeon and incidently lost myself quite frequently in the tortuous passages. The view from the roof of the Morro is something most beautiful. As far as the eye can see in one direction is the sea rolling along and dotted here and there with a few sails. Then to the east and south hills succeed one another in long, green, rolling lines, topped with waving palms and finally melting away in the blue distance. Then to the west lies Havana. The view of that city is the most beautiful sight I ever saw. The bright tile roofs, long colonades, the padros and white buildings all lend themselves to make a most perfect picture. I wish I had the command of English necessary to adequately describe the beauty and splendor of the city as seen from an elevation.

"The entire armament of Moro consisted of three or four old pieces. The place was littered with cannon balls, hand grenades and projectiles of various sizes and weights. I picked out an old Spanish grenade as a souvenir.

"From Moro I walked over to Cavanhas fortress also on the bay. This is the place where Spain kept her political offenders. The inscription on the drawbridge at the outer works says that it was built during the reign of Carlos III. Its walls, glowing with pink and red colors, seem to suggest thoughts of the dark deeds done within. I was fortunate enough here to secure as a guide a big black Ravale corpora whose scant English consisted mainly of prodigious oaths. I asked him if he had ever been in the United States which he took as a compliment to his good English. He said 'no' but that he had worked as a coal heaver under a Yankee boss and had a good opportunity to pick up the language. We wound our way around among the small, dark, dirty cells where at times they were so low that we had to bend nearly double and with the drip, drip of the water oozing through the stones presented a fearful sight. From the cells we went to the 'dead line.' This is a wall against which condemned prisoners stood facing a firing party which fired the fatal volley at 10 paces. The wall was honeycombed with bullets bearing mute evidence of Spanish workmanship. Against this wall the Cuban government has placed a bronze base relief depicting an execution with an angel hovering over the firing party and expiring victims. It is a splendid piece of art and, being designed and cast by a Cuban, the people take an especial pride in it. The pink of the wall here seemed changed to a deeper and more sinister red, appearing almost bloody. * * *

"We have a Cuban battery accompanying us for the purpose of instruction. They have their own guns, but use our horses. These hard mouthed, rough old plugs of ours are giving the Sphigettas fits. 'American Caballo army laco heap jumpy, jumpy' is their whine. They are used to the easy, rock-me-to-sleep gait of the Spanish pony, and therefore ride our horses like a recruit at his first drill. Their bugle calls are weird sounds like a cross between the shrieks of a dying rat and a spanked baby, but they are anxious to learn.

"We have a hard day before us tomorrow, as we cross the highest mountain range with the most unpronounceable name in Cuba. * * *

"With best wishes to the fellows I am,

BOETTCHER."

APPRECIATION.

The Eunomian Literary Society wishes to express publicly its feeling of deep loss at death of their brother Mr. Clarence Langdell Allen. He proved himself a valuable member of our society. In his classes he showed an excellent mind and studious habits. As one of the boys he made innumerable friends. In character he was a man of highest Christian type. His death deprives the Eunomian Society of a most promising member, deprives the College of a student who would have honored her, and deprives the students of an example of noble manhood.

Every member of the society feels the deepest sympathy for the members of his family in this their unpeakable loss.

who bends circumstances to his uses and knows not the meaning of the phrase, to fail.

"Mr. Diehl is a native of the state of Michigan and the son of a farmer. He was born on a farm in Milford county where he grew up. His early education was received in the common schools and he was graduated from the Milford high school in the class of 1883, entered the Michigan Agricultural College, from which he graduated in the class of 1887. Later he entered the divinity school of the Northwestern University at Chicago, from which he was graduated in the class of '91. He immediately became the pastor of the Kensington M. E. church where he served the congregation for two and a half years.

"At the end of this time he decided to take some post graduate work and went to Germany. He first entered the university at Halle where he remained through one semester and then went to the University of Berlin and spent the remainder of the year in that school. His year in Germany was spent in the study of philosophy, systematic theology and political economy. Mr. Diehl is an excellent German scholar, with a thorough command of the language, hence his residence in the great German empire was beneficial in more ways than that which applies to the advantage reaped from the fine system in vogue in the famous schools at which he was a student.

"On his return to his native land he became the pastor of the National Boulevard M. E. church of which he was the head for five years. There he built a fine church during the panic of 1894.

"His next charge was at St. John's church, also in Chicago, where he served two years, and from there he came to Sterling where he has distinguished himself by building one of the finest churches in the state outside of Chicago."

Professors Barrows and Myres were in Belding last week packing the Broas collection of birds and mammals recently left to the College museum. The collection consists of about 500 birds and 50 mammals which, as soon as they can be catalogued and room provided, will be displayed in the museum.

Work has begun on the new agricultural building.

Nixie is dead. Saturday morning, after a life devoted to the uplifting of downtrodden humanity, (she was the only being who for years has added a touch of femininity to the station terrace apartments,) she passed away amid the tears of those with whom she had passed her short but eventful life.

Not wishing to trust the remains to any but loving hands, undertaker Paltridge consented to prepare the body for burial after which for 24 hours it laid in state guarded by burning tapers. Promptly at 2:00 o'clock the next day, accompanied by the strains of the funeral march played by Clark's orchestra, loving hands bore the remains to a slightly place on the hillside where under the spreading boughs of the cat-o'-tree, sexton Kelton had prepared a grave due north and south 3 feet perpendicular and, amid the tears of the mourners, while Parson Lodge made a few appropriate remarks, consigned the lifeless clay to the earth from whence it came, and to mark the spot planted a "Lucky Strike" box at the head of the grave.

If you have business at the Terrace, tread softly. The house is still in mourning for didn't Dick Kelton with Herculean efforts carry a bottle of milk from the dairy to those cats every week and isn't that waste of energy enough to make anybody mourn for the conventional 12 months and a day?

GRANGE LOYAL TO THE COLLEGE.

Wants Agriculture Taught in High Schools.

RECOMMENDS EXTENSION OF COLLEGE WORK.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

The Michigan State Grange has always taken a lively interest in the agricultural college, we have always stood ready to assist it in every way possible and to defend it against its enemies. Whenever the institution has, in our judgment, failed to fulfill to the fullest its mission, we have criticised freely and suggested changes and reforms.

We congratulate ourselves and the people of the state on having today an institution second to none of its kind in this or any other country.

In passing we would acknowledge our indebtedness to Dr. J. L. Snyder, president of the institution, and brother in our Order, for popularizing the institution and for his able and efficient administration of its affairs.

There has been referred to this committee the following resolutions:

Resolved. That we ask for and favor the adding of a short course in domestic science and domestic art to the short-term courses offered by our Agricultural College.

In which we most heartily concur and recommend its adoption. In this connection we recommend the extension of short courses to every department where the same may be made practical.

Whereas, the matter of a Farm Home Reading Course as set forth in the Worthy Lecturer's report, has been a consideration of our State Grange for many years; therefore be it Resolved. That this State Grange renew its urgent request of the college to continue this work more vigorously than before.

We recommend its adoption.

Resolved. That the Michigan State Grange co-operate with the Michigan Agricultural College in the effort to secure the teaching of agriculture in the high schools of our state.

We recommend its amendment by substituting the words "public schools" in place of "high schools" and then recommend its adoption.

Your committee would further recommend that a department be established at the college for the extension of agricultural teachings, said department to conduct short course schools in communities asking for the same and complying with requirements. In this way we hope to bring the college to those farmers who are unable to go to the college.

Whereas; there has been introduced in the constitutional convention, now in session, a proposition to curtail the work of the college, be it

Resolved. That this state grange enter a protest against any such curtailing and eliminating of the work of the college.
