Our Jobs Are Similar

You take a freshman, who according to your loft seniors, is one of the lowest forms of animal life, and after a period of boning, razzing and polishing, you deliver him F. O. B. his life job an honest to God man and a credit to your college.

And we take rough boards, and plane, shape and sand them, and they perhaps are part of a building wherein freshmen stutter, sophomores pose, seniors strut, while proxy raises his corrugated brow.

The world judges us both by the product we turn out.

So C'mon gang—let's all be a credit to our institutions.

Capitalizing the Instinct for Athletics

New Course to Develop Instructors Among Those Who Prefer Thrills of Physical Competition to Triumphs of Academic Pursuits

For four years he was an outstanding athlete on the campus. He played freshman football for a year and then became a mainstay on the varsity eleven. He was active and above the average in basketball. Even in the spring, those lazy days of the school year, he won monograms in track. Sir, in his four years stay at State we won some six or eight or maybe nine major sport letters, and then . . .

Graduation days had past. This athlete, this sterling Spartan fighter, was out into the world again. He loved sports and his first thought was to jump back into the game as a coach or an athletic director. He made applications, one after another, and they all failed to land that job he craved. They said he failed to meet the state teaching requirements, and he did.

A year passed. He got work that meant only a little swelling of the pocketbook to him. His heart was not in the work. Occasionally he took a fling at professional sports, but always as just a fill-in. Another year passed, and still he. Finally his vision was dimmed and, * * * he worked solely for the "holy dollar" and, . . . maybe he was content and maybe he was not.

Now, State College officials are working on a plan which they hope will bring to an end the influence that might hamper the progress of sport lovers whose names are great names on the school roster. A course in coaching has been added to the College curriculum. It meets the teaching requirements of the state. It has been approved by every necessary official body on the campus. The State Board has sanctioned it, and now it is ready to be put into operation when the winter term opens.

The new course puts the prospective coaches and athletic directors, graduating from State, on a par with those produced by the state university and the normal schools of the state. So far, only state institutions are making this offer.

With the education department and the department of athletics co-operating, sponsors of the new course hope to claim the best trained men produced from the school. The curriculum will be heavily strewn with elementary biological courses and electives, besides the courses in education and physical education. Practice teaching will not be omitted. Work stressing general administration work will also hold a prominent place in the program of training.

The athletic department will be included within the department of education with Dean John Phelan as general administrator of the course. To Director Young, however, will be left most of the work of actually producing the coaches and physical education directors. Working with the largest coaching staff in the history of the school, Mr. Young will find it possible to offer a varied course with efficient instructors. Miles Casteel and Barnard Traynor are qualified to teach football theory and practice. Ralph Leonard, a new addition to the State staff, is a specialist in wrestling and soccer, and has also coached lacrosse. W. Sterry Brown, another newcomer, is an expert on swimming matters and is nationally recognized as an authority.

John Kobs specializes in hockey and baseball, and Benjamin Van Alstyne, although well acquainted with other major sports, devotes most of his time to basketball. L. D. Burhans directs the classes in general gymnasium work at the College and has had years of experience along these lines. Several part-time instructors, Prof. C. D. Ball in tennis and Morton Mason in cross country and distance running, round out the staff. L. L. Frimodig, assistant director of athletics, would fit into the staff, as would Jack Heppinstall, trainer.

To leave a considerable number of electives open to the coach in training and to make him thoroughly acquainted with at least one other line of study besides that taught by Mr. Young and his staff, are the foremost aims of Dean Phelan. Thus, he explains, a man faithfully following the new curriculum will be among the best trained graduates. He will be acquainted with administrative problems of both the class room and of athletics. He may even be qualified to administer properly in the business world if he chooses. The problems of organized play in connection with industrial concerns will not be foreign to him.

The story thus far has dealt solely with men, but a new day in women's athletics is dawning. Already Miss Helen Grimes has organized the co-ed sports on a sound basis and her interests will not be forgotten under the new plan.

Two Prominent Alumni Pass On

Dick J. Crosby, '93, Noted for Work On Education and Dr. John Wesener, '87, Active In Chicago Association Die During Month

(Contributed)

Dick Jay Crosby, '93, was born Oct. 2, 1866, at the Cabmoasa government school in the Ottawa-Chippewa Indian reservation, now Elldridge, Oceana county, Michigan. He was the son of Daniel W. and Agnes Comstock Crosby. After receiving his early education in the district school, he taught eight terms and then attended the Flint Normal school for six months.

In 1889 Mr. Crosby entered M. A. C. as an agricultural student. In spite of the fact that he worked his way through school, he was active both in a social and scholastic way, claiming membership in the Union Literary society, serving as chairman of the J-Hop program committee and graduating in 1893, fourth from the top in his class.

After graduation, he acted as instructor of English and rhetoric until 1899 and edited the M. A. C. Record from 1895 to 1900. Resigning his position in 1900 to pursue graduate work at his Alma Mater, he received his master's degree in 1901.

In 1902, he was married to an old classmate, Mary Lilian Wheeler, and to this union were born three children—Ruth, 1904, Alan Wheeler, 1905, and Richard Collier, 1909. The home was saddened in 1913 by the death of the beloved wife and mother.

From 1901 to 1908, Prof. Crosby was assistant in the office of the experiment station of the United States department of agriculture. In this same department he served as specialist in agricultural education service from 1908 to 1913. Leaving Washington at the end of this work, he operated a farm in western New York state for a year. During this time he was married to Adelaide J. Irwin.

In 1915 Prof. Crosby was called to Ithaca as professor of extension teaching in the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell, and this position he occupied until his death. During his stay at Ithaca, he was in charge of extension work on Indian reservations (1920), teacher of advanced students in extension methods, organization and policy, acting director of extension (1922-23), and research expert in extension methods

Dick Jay Crosby, '93

(1923-26). Of the latter he said:

"After nine months' sabbatic leave from Cornell university studying means of stimulating scholarship in land-grant colleges, I returned to investigate and teach methods in extension work; the investigation is being made from the point of view of the men, women and children living on farms."

Prof. Crosby published numerous articles as bulletins of the United States department of agriculture, and in the year-book of this department. As secretary of the committee on instruction of agriculture, home economics and mechanic arts of the Land-Grant College association, he wrote most of the annual reports of the committee (1906-1926) published in the proceedings of the association.

The war period saw him in service as secretary of New York state food commissions.

Two brothers of Prof. Crosby, Matt A. and Mark G.—and one sister, Mamie L., attended M. A. C. in 1898, two of whom graduated in 1902—Matt and Mamie.

The life and activities of Dr. John A. Wesener (with '87) of Chicago, who passed away Nov. 17, 1926, make up a striking example of my feeling that "once an M. S. C. man always an M. S. C. man."

A freshman from Owosso with a jovial disposition and great ability with the slide trombone, he made himself known easily, to both faculty and students. He left us to enter the medical course at the University of Michigan, where upon graduation, he next studied at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Chicago, taking a degree in pharmacy.

From 1891 to 1896 he was professor of chemistry in the medical department of the University of Illinois.

Together with several scientific associates, he founded the Columbus Food laboratory in 1894. This is located in the Columbus Memorial building, 31 State street. It was the first laboratory of its kind in the country.

In the years since its establishment, there have been many important contributions made to the knowledge of our foods. The technology of flour manufacture and baking methods have been intensively studied; in fact, Dr. Wesener's inventions for maturing flour and the preparation of cereals through the wet process are valuable additions in this line of work.

Dr. Wesener had a national reputation as a medico-legal expert and toxicologist, having figured as scientific expert in several famous murder and government trials.

Among the men of our college who have worked in this laboratory are W. L. Rossman, '87, F. W. Robison, '98, O. H. Skinner, '02, George L. Teller, '88, and A. A. Towner, '07.

One of the strongest local organizations of M. S. C. graduates and former students to be found is the Chicago M. S. C. Alumni association. Dr. Wesener took a very active interest in this organization.

Dr. Wesener's health became seriously affected due to heart disease last summer, and the end came Nov. 17. He is survived by his widow, Lila Patti Wesener, a cousin of the late President Harding, and one brother, Hugo G. Wesener.

ALUMNAE COUNCIL

During the past year the women of Lansing and East Lansing through their alumnae council have carried on several projects endeavoring to raise a fund to purchase furniture for the women's lounge room in the Union Memorial Building. From donations, a tag day, and a benefit bridge $1,421.00 has been secured.

At the present time the funds of the Union Memorial Building will not permit the finishing of any large rooms in a permanent way, except where those funds come from individual donors for specified purposes.

The executive committee of the alumnae council at a recent meeting decided it unwise to proceed buying permanent furniture now unless the room itself were finished. The floor needs cementing, a twenty-five foot square being sunken for the carpet. The space surrounding the carpet or rug will be flagstone tile, and the room will have a ten inch marble base. The interior trim on the ten windows and doors, the chair rail, plate glass for the doors, permanent lighting fixtures, drapes and panels on the walls will put the interior of the room in proper condition for the furniture as suggested by the architects. The total cost of finishing will be approximately $1,000.00.

As the room when completely finished and furnished will be open to all women the alumnae council wishes that there might be started a finishing fund for the women's lounge, to be raised by contributions from groups of women all over the country. The women of Lansing and East Lansing council with their limited number of active workers have averaged between $10.00 and $15.00 per capita, outside of donations received by letter. It has been suggested that in other cities where the Union Building is not so familiar to the women that the amount of money that could be raised per capita would be somewhat less, perhaps one-half. Ways and means of working out a money raising campaign will necessarily have to be studied locally by each group. Alumni members of various sororities often meet in Detroit, Grand Rapids, and other cities. These smaller groups of eight, ten or fifteen women would possibly work out a plan best suited for their own conditions. The Lansing and East Lansing women will continue their efforts to enlarge the furniture fund, and very enthusiastic about the response given them so far.

If a number of small groups pledge themselves to contribute to the "finishing fund" for the lounge, it might be possible for some of the money from the furniture fund to be loaned for finishing purposes. This money would later be returned to the "furniture fund" when the money for finishing comes in from the other groups. The advantage to this plan would be the immediate starting of the finishing work. Concrete base, tile floor and marble base work takes time, and the labor costs will be somewhat less at this time of year.

With the assistance of a large number of small groups the women's lounge room can easily be finished and partially furnished by commencement, 1927.

The officers of the local alumnae council are Elizabeth Palm, president; Frances Kirk Patch, vice-president; Lou Butler, secretary-treasurer. They will be glad to furnish you with additional information on the project. G. O. Stewart, alumni field secretary, will cooperate with the group leaders while traveling among the various branch alumni clubs.

Mrs. Mary E. Jenison of East Lansing has donated the piano from her home to the Women's Alumnae Council. Miss Elizabeth Palm, '11, president of the local group, states that it is very acceptable and will be used in the women's lounge room of the Union building for the present.

UNION RECEIVES GIFT

Secretary M. S. C. Alumni Ass'n
Dear Sir:—

The Western Pennsylvania M. S. C. Alumni Association has held no meetings for several years and is practically disbanded.

As treasurer of the Association I hold in my hands the sum of $23.75 as there is no prospect of the Association resuming its activities and the members have become scattered. Acting on the advice of some of the former members and according to my own judgment, I have decided to donate the amount now in the treasury to the M. S. C. Alumni Association, to be used in the purchase of a chair or other article of furniture for the Union Memorial Building.

Very respectfully yours,

MAY BUTTERFIELD NICHOLS, '05

Views and Comments

On the one hand we have the student charging the alumnus with attempting to wreck the machinery responsible for the athletic policies of the institution, and even going so far as to say that the latter takes but little interest in the college, while on the other there is the alumnus who places the blame for athletic reverses upon the lack of student spirit. It is a serious situation, one which demands clarification and one which must be remedied if either body is to achieve for the common good.

It is not peculiar to Michigan State College that alumni take a close personal interest in athletics, that they are critical of policies and individuals; neither is it a local characteristic that the students are charged with a growing weakness or a reversion from the so-called redblooded type of the old days. On the street corner, in the smoking car, in the hotel lobby, in the city clubs, any group of college men, from whatever institution may be represented, can tell you just what would have won the big game for alma mater. They are all sincere in the belief they are offering certain cures for existing "evils," although their diagnoses may vary widely. Most colleges and universities have arranged that alumni sentiment be represented on the board controlling the department of athletics as a regular avenue for expression of the opinions developed. The college has undertaken to reorganize the present board so that there will be a better representation; in this the authorities are working with a general committee of alumni and the report should be complete in the near future.

A feeling of mutual distrust can result in no good to the institution or to either students or alumni. There is no basis for either group frowning upon the other. There is too much at stake for a division of effort. A common cause is lost when its supporters allow animosities to grow among themselves. The noisy minority always yaps at the heels of progress.

With the close of the year there passes in review the accounts of the organization. The matter of annual dues is a small one to the individual member but, in the aggregate, a great problem to the association. Find time before the close of the year to fill out the blue slip and write a check for the amount indicated on the bill with which it was enclosed.

Horticulture at Purdue university was under the direction of Michigan State men for the first 33 years the course was offered. James A. Troop, '78, was the first professor of horticulture teaching the subject in 1884. He was succeeded in 1912 by C. G. Woodbury, '04, who held that position until 1917. A review of Indiana horticulture issued in connection with the dedication of the new horticultural building at Purdue this fall describes the progress made under the direction of these men. Troop is still at Purdue, although he is not now connected with the horticultural department. Woodbury is secretary of the National Cannery association at Washington, D. C.

Washington Greets College Delegates

Association at Capitol Gathers With Alumni at Land Grant Meeting; Prominent Speakers On Annual Program

Once every two years the Washington M. S. C. association is honored with the presence of many out-of-town alumni who come to attend the meeting of the Association of Land Grant Colleges. This year Washington was also the meeting place of the American Country Life association which brought many former students to the city. A meeting was scheduled for the evening of Nov. 10, and the Hamilton hotel was selected for the gathering. Members came early to greet old friends, for reminiscences of "auld lang syne," and for answers to the query, "What are you doing now?" About 60 guests assembled for dinner, and the oldest class, that of 1874, was represented by Donald Macpherson. Music by the orchestra included old college songs.

Following the dinner all adjourned to another room for the speaking program. Ray Turner, president, called attention to the fact that both the president of the land-grant colleges and the president of the American Country Life association are M. S. C. men, a distinctive honor for the old school. President Turner announced that reminiscence had its place, but at this time he thought all would be glad to learn "What steps the colleges are taking to meet agricultural problems."

Dr. Butterfield (also president of the American Country Life association) and Dean Burnett, of Nebraska (president of the Association of Land-Grant Colleges), gave talks on this subject. Dr. Butterfield stressed two points of rural life need: greater economic effectiveness, and the maintenance of the quality of the life of the people. He said that the burden of raising rural standards must not be borne entirely by the farmer. He reminded us that standards of living are not necessarily natural consequences of prosperity; that the existing conditions are largely due to the speed in the development of urban industry; that we must go farther in both economics and research; and that a type of assistance much needed by the farmer is in organization, especially in the making of state and county programs. This means applying methods used by scientists and by business men. The work of training farmers, teachers, and country preachers for leadership must go on, as well as the "adult education" or "continuing" education of the farmers themselves.

Dean Burnett, of Nebraska, discussed the next step for the agricultural colleges, saying that the point of view has changed. It was formerly thought that development of technology was most important, now it is essential that we have a broader point of view. The colleges need to recognize the many opportunities for the man who has a broad grasp of world conditions. They should reorganize on a larger plan; should get contact with the "big business" of farming. Cultural and broader subjects should be stressed to a greater degree so that students can get bigger contacts. Dean Burnett prophesied that this will result in contact with new and larger groups and will put the agricultural college in a more responsible relation to the public than heretofore. He mentioned the bankers' agricultural conferences being held in various localities as an example of the new move.

It was with deep regret that the members learned that Dick J. Crosby, '93, one of the charter members of this association, had passed away at his home in Ithaca.

Dr. Butterfield extended an invitation to all to be present at the 70th anniversary of the college next spring and also to attend the meetings of the International Country Life association there in August.

The College was represented by Pres. K. L. Butterfield, '91, Prof. J. F. Cox, Dean Jean Kreuger, Dean G. W. Bissell, Dean John Phelan, Prof. E. H. Ryder, Prof. B. A. Walpole, Prof. J. D. Willard.

Others present were: Donald Macpherson, '74, C. P. Gillette, '84, E. A. Burnett, '87, W. A. Taylor, '88, J. R. McColl, '90, F. B. Mumford, '91, Mrs. F. B. Mumford, Dr. Howard Edwards, W. D. M. T. Rainier, '74, writes of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. William Cook, "This is the first of our class of '74 to reach the golden period and is worthy of note and will be gladly welcome to the boys in that period of College history, for I think I can truthfully say there was no man in College during the years I was there that was more highly respected by everyone than Will Cook. He was our first class president and I think we were the first to organize and elect officers. He was also our class poet".

Football Awards Granted; Smith Elected

Varsity Bows to Haskell's Weight and Skill in Final Game of Season; Twenty-one Letters Given to Squad

The report that signaled the close of the Spartan-Haskell Indian football tilt brought down the curtain, on a sorry looking team of battered men, and a 40 to 7 Spartan defeat. Yet, holding faith with the sturdy fighters whose name they carry, the boys in Green and White fought royally until the end, though the odds were mightily against them.

State had the first chance at the ball and swung into an offense that seemed to overwhelm the redskins. They cut and passed through and over the 200-pound Indian line with a vim that would have swamped any other team appearing in the home stadium this year. The big quarter-ton Indian tackle seemed their easiest bait and even the Haskell captain who played the other tackle lost all sense of humor before the game was over and was put off the field for foul play. It was that combination of head work and fight that gave Bohn Grim a chance to get away on an intercepted pass for State's only counter early in the game. When a man ties a world's 75-yard dash record on the cinder track he doesn't propose to get caught on the gridiron, especially when he is toting a football.

Though the score was hard against the Spartans, and was so for most of the game, the game never became dull. Every effort the Indians made was met with all the fight the State men could muster. Spartan after Spartan was helped from the field in the last half, victims of the heavy red men's onslaught, but their ranks were continually filled with sterling stuff from the bench.

The coaches' awards for fall term sports included football letters, and a larger number of minor awards. Included in the latter class were 25

Paul Smith, for two years a veteran of varsity football and a graduate of Saginaw Eastern high school, was elected captain of the 1927 football team. The honor awarded him came as a recognition of the superior work done by the Saginaw fullback. During the season just passed Smith proved himself to be the team's outstanding player.

football yearlings, the cross-country men who won the Central Inter-Collegiate run on the day of the Haskell game, beating out Notre Dame, Butler and Marquette before that football crowd of 7,500, and the many men who received service sweaters for their faithful work of the past three months.

Heading the varsity football list is the name of Captain Martin Rummell. Although this leader did not play in a single game or take active part in any practice session he was on the field every day, on the bench every game and led the team, though crippled. An automobile accident last summer kept the red-headed Spartan leader out of the rough work all season.

In making the football awards Coach Young declared that almost every man on the squad played a better game against Haskell, the closing engagement of the year, than he had at any time in the year. The stellar performance of the day perhaps, in Coach Young's estimation, was the playing of Johnny Anderson at left end.

"Anderson typified the fine play of the team against Haskell," said Coach Young. "He played just about five times as well as we had any reason to expect from watching him in practices or other games. It was almost on this great day's work alone that the college wants to honor Anderson by presenting him with his 'S'."

The State mentor had praise for almost every man on the squad. He called Boehringer, who graduates next June, the best quarterback at East Lansing in the last four years, branded Glen Hitchings, the squad's iron man, called Hugo Kanitz' fine play the proof that work and determination will get a football player somewhere, said that Jack Hornbeck probably is the greatest end prospect at Michigan State in years, pointed out that Harry Kurrole fought so hard all year that he was continuously black and blue, and said that Grim, Wenner, Drew, McCosh, Ross, Barratt, Crabill, Deavon, Danziger and Moeller played their best games of the year in the final encounter.

The list of awards follows:

BASKETEERS OPEN FINE

Opening fire on one of the hardest schedules ever confronting a State basketball squad, the Spartans have kept even with the board by registering one victory and one defeat. Though pre-season basketball training had been under way for several weeks Coach Van Alstyne found that most of the really good men upon whom he must depend were men from the gridiron squad. With about a half dozen practices after football season, under a new system and a new coach the team was thrown into action against Adrian. They emerged on the larger end of a 29 to 33 score but only after a close call. In the practice season tilt with the University the Spartans were smothered by a overhead attack to the tune of 13 and 34.

Van Alstyne finds the team lacking in two major points of the game. Because no outstanding center material is available State can not control the tip off. This difficulty linked with the fact that no one with extraordinary basket shooting ability has yet been found makes it tough for the man who must pick the quintette that must meet the high caliber teams scheduled.

As was expected from previous season showing Kenneth Drew is proving to be the neatest guard in the troop. C. Colvin and C. Hood also are making good showings at guard. L. J. Smith and D. C. Dickeson have done good work at forward as have L. Fouts and R. P. Eldred. The ranks of accessible forwards may be increased after the reports from the present term scholastic standings are made known. It is possible that Mocco, Levett, and Edwards will be back in the game next term but Capt. Chas. Frederick cannot return.

The following is the schedule that the Spartans must tackle:

Dec. 8—Adrian College.
Dec. 11—University of Michigan.
Dec. 18—U. of Chicago.
Dec. 20—Northwestern Univ.
Jan. 8—Marquette Univ.
Jan. 12—Albion College.
Jan. 14—Butler University.
Jan. 15—Earlham College.
Jan. 18—University of Detroit.
Jan. 21—Lake Forest.
Jan. 22—Marquette University.
Jan. 29—Notre Dame Univ.
Jan. 31—Butler University.
Feb. 9—Hope College.
Feb. 12—Univ. of Detroit.
Feb. 19—University Pittsburg.
Feb. 22—U. Notre Dame.
Feb. 26—Alumni.

Word comes to us that the Flint M. S. C. club will start the New Year off with a big meeting on the evening of Jan. 18. While definite plans have not been formulated, President Geo. Fryman announces that a speaker from the college will be on hand and the club will decide on a definite phase of work for the ensuing year.

Friday, June 10, has been accepted by the State Board and faculty as Commencement day, and Alumni day will no doubt be held on Saturday, June 11. Groups of classes, scheduled to return for Commencement reunion this year, according to the Dix plan, are, 1870, 1871, 1872 and 1873; 1889, 1890, 1891 and 1892; 1902, 1909, 1910 and 1911; and in addition the class of 1925, two years out.

Besides the above groups there will be the five year classes, 1867 back for its 60th anniversary; 1882 will celebrate its 35th year; 1887 its 30th homecoming; along with '97, '02, '07, '12, '17, and '22.

The attendance this year will be larger than ever and is not limited to those classes coming under the Dix reunion plan.

The 70th anniversary of the founding of the college, will be celebrated in an appropriate manner and everyone is urged to meet with his or her old classmate on the campus at Commencement time. Make your June plans early.
