THOUGH tuition is only one of several items a student must meet when he enters college, it is a charge that varies in various institutions from almost nothing in state universities up to $450 at Princeton. Amherst charges $300; Yale, Cornell, and Brown, $350; and the following, $400: Harvard, Dartmouth, Williams, Wesleyan, Johns Hopkins, Lafayette, Lehigh, Bryn Mawr, Smith, Vassar, Wellesley, Swarthmore, and others. State universities and colleges ordinarily have no tuition fees at all or else make only nominal charges.

IT WAS REPORTED last week that Chase S. Osborn, of Sault Ste. Marie, former governor of Michigan, had given Purdue university 5,200 acres of timber land in the upper peninsula of Michigan. President E. C. Elliott of Purdue stated that Mr. Osborn's interest in the institution was due to the fact that the donor was born near the university.

THE INSTINCT TO PLAY

IT IS a common expression of sentiment among the ladies that men are but "overgrown boys." This may appear to be stretching it a trifle, but a closer consideration of the accusation, if accusation it is, will show it to be a reasonably sound one.

The play instinct in men seems to be always potentially active. Given the sheerest opportunity it comes to the surface with an almost facetious vigor, and manifests itself in no end of activities. We may take golf as an example. No person will insist that the real thrill of the game lies in any one phase of its technic, nor in the pleasure that accrues in proficiently following the ball over an eighteen hole course. A good score, of course, is satisfying to one's vanity, but the good score alone will not satisfy fully.

The open sky above, the green grass under foot, the invigorating air and the long "walk," the friendly contacts with other golfers, the engaging experience of doing a bit better than last time,—these and the forgetting of the storm and strife of every day life, are golf, and play.

And it is the same in every other game. Football, our national collegiate sport, is but a game after all. Its supporters and followers should not lose sight of that fact. So this fall when our boys gather spirit, momentum and action they should not be lashed by organized fussing. We may lose some game but whether our machine registers a perfect score or not the victor should be hailed for superior action and the loser cheered for effort—even if it be our own team.

Spartan followers have been lauded by opposing teams for their generous sportsmanship. The tongues of the fans have not always been in true accord with the Spartan creed when defeat has stared the team in the face, but there has been a minimum of this spirit at Michigan State as compared with that of many institutions. May it ever be so.

Alumni will always have the instinct to play. True sportsmanship in the outdoor game—golf, baseball, tennis, football,—they are the surest way to bodily refreshment and mental relaxation,—a retreat, for the time being, to the most wholesome instinct in man, the instinct to play.

COLLEGE PAPERS

THE publication of college student newspapers has come to be a business the extent of which few people realize. There are more than 400 college papers published at least once a week, with an average of some 25 students working on each paper. There are 32 college dailies in the country, about half of which use the telegraph service of some nationally-known news-gathering organization. About 35 college papers are published either twice or three times a week. More than 300 colleges have weekly newspapers, and nearly a hundred more small colleges have papers coming out less often than once a week but more often than monthly. Academic credit for work on college papers is the exception rather than the rule.

Twenty-four out of twenty-five dailies reported financial compensation for the editor and business manager, while seven divide the profits among the members of the entire staff. As for the money the staff members are paid, in about 40% of the cases the amounts are based on the percentage of profits.

THE NEW COACH CALLS

"SLEEPY" JIMMY dropped in at the Union building for a chat the other day. If you aren't up on your college football you probably don't know that we refer to James E. Crowley, new head football coach announced to the alumni celebrants on Alumni Day by Director Ralph H. Young.

"I'm here to stay," announced Jim as he threw his hat down and started to talk over prospects. "You may tell my friends, especially the alumni and athletes and any others who may be interested in Michigan State that East Lansing and the College looks mighty good to me. I am glad that I have settled into such a berth as exists here.

"For the benefit of the alumni I want to say that the football camp opened Monday, September 9. This is one week earlier than usual. I needed that extra time to get thoroughly acquainted with the boys. I asked every fellow back who thought he could play football. I am starting with a clean slate and so far as my knowledge reaches now, every place on the club is open. Pass the word around that we are ready to go to bat at M. S. C."

THE HAPPY WARRIOR

ALL that a modern state-university president has to do is to produce, every few months, a learned paper to dazzle the countryside, manage the intricate machinery of his several-million-dollar corporation, keep his army of temperamental, absent-minded, under-paid professors cheerful and alert, understand what the university's archaeological expedition is doing in southeastern Abyssinia and raise money for it, deliver occasional uplifting chapel talks to the student body, attend the ball games, lunch with the rich alumni who might give new dormitories or laboratories in honor of their favorite maiden aunts, entertain the visiting English lecturers (and arrange for the deans to entertain the Americans), keep in touch with the members of the state legislatures who are making up the budget for next year, and with the bright new assemblymen who hope to make the headlines by denouncing frills in education, and lecture occasionally to the Norfolk County Cheesemakers Cooperative association, the Suffolk County Grain Exchange, the Wessex Central Trades and Labor Council, and the Essex W. C. T. U., as well as the State Chamber of Commerce, the Steuben Society, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, pointing out to each and all how the university serves every citizen of the state and notably assists them in their particular tasks and problems—New York Herald Tribune.

Teachers and Alumni to Again Renew College Friendships at Fall Meetings

IN the fall, more than any other season of the year, alumni and former students meet to renew old friendships, especially those formed at M. S. C. But these friendships are not all renewed at the entrance to stadia. The precedent set by our alumni in the teaching profession by holding an alumni gathering in connection with the various district teachers' meetings, and by inviting in all local M. S. C. people, has gained momentum year by year.

Your M. S. C. Association and the chairmen of the various districts urge you, whether a teacher or not, to plan and attend one of the alumni meetings listed below.

True enough—college friendship, loyalty, and enthusiasm may be by-products of a college course; they are, however, precious personal qualities and quite as valuable an asset as intellectual power. So remember, if you're absent, chances are someone will be asking about you.

Green Caps Blossom

SMALLER, more verdant than ever, green caps have appeared atop the heads of freshmen again this fall. In size the caps approach the well known infinity as to insignificance, being brought into prominence through hue, not size. The buttons on the top designate the division in which the wearer is enrolled, although they are soon removed to decorate the first page of the scrap-book. Some first year men ink their class numerals across the bills of their caps, to make it plain they are not seniors, we presume.

Urge Placement Bureau

THE executive committee of the M. S. C. Association at the last regular meeting urged the establishment of a placement bureau in connection with the alumni office, for helping new graduates and alumni of the institution to find opportunities for employment and advancement.

President MacKinnon, '95, of the alumni association, in discussing the matter with old grads on Alumni Day stated that "to be successful this service must have the full cooperation of

Public Impressed With Report of College Finances

President Credits Staff With Good Showing

THE FINANCIAL STATUS of the College according to the audit made public last week, shows that in a little less than two years the deficit of nearly a quarter of a million dollars has been changed to a "rehabilitation fund" of nearly $100,000.

Alumni and taxpayers of the State of Michigan have awaited with interest the present financial showing, knowing that it has been the aim of the present College administration to adopt exceptional economical management, well within appropriations, and without crippling the institution in any manner.

The books of the College which are open to any alumnus and taxpayer of the state show that the deficit in the College funds on June 30, 1923, were $1,279,408, and a year later the deficit had amounted to $224,708.17. Four months after the marked controversy between the governing board and the former president, the above deficit was reduced to $65,405.32. On June 30, 1929 the College had a surplus of $98,235.31.

President Credits Staff

President Shaw in his recent talks to alumni has indicated that there will continue to be a surplus as long as he is president. In a recent statement he was quoted as saying "No one should try to run a business without a reserve fund of at least 3 per cent. The surplus really is a rehabilitation fund with which we may undertake and complete some of the things deferred during the period of financial stress."

Credit for the present healthy condition of the College finances the president shares with the staff of the institution. "When the members of the staff realized the financial condition of the College they tried to help," President Shaw asserted. "The result was that the departments did not spend all money allotted them by the board, and at the end of the fiscal year there were unexpended balances in the funds."

The administrative heads of the institution point out the following reasons for the improvement of the College finances:

The reduction of administrative and operative overhead costs.

The voluntary curtailment of expenditures by department heads.

The increase in receipts and enrollment.

In the meantime it has been pointed out that the staff and faculty members have not suffered salary reductions. On the other hand some salaries have been increased a little and the faculty has been slightly enlarged. Where economies have seemed advisable they have been practiced, but there has been no disposition to impede the work of the College by a desire to make a financial showing.

The public announcement of the surplus, and consequent absence of further anxiety about administration, has given rise to a condition of smoothness on the campus. The College awaits opening this fall with perfect accord existing throughout the entire organization.

"An alumni fund is a continuing agency devoted primarily to the raising annually of unrestricted gifts to a college or university from its former students."—American Alumni Council.

"Dotty" Enters M. S. C.

DOROTHY, beloved by Skeezix Time children at radio station WJR, Detroit, for her long association with "Uncle Neal," gave her farewell party Saturday, September 14. The next week found her on the Michigan State campus registered as a member of the class of 1933.

Dorothy is a daughter of Neal Tomy and made her first radio appearance more than seven years ago when she was ten years old. On many occasions she has conducted Skeezix Time unassisted for several weeks at a time and has been with her father frequently. She will probably not return to the air before Christmas vacation.

August Weather

THE OUTSTANDING feature of the month of August around the College was the severe drought. The total rainfall for the month was but 0.29 inches, following a light rainfall in July. By the close of the month all farm crops were greatly curled and dried up, new alfalfa and clover seeding mostly killed, and all growing crops more or less ruined. Beans were being pulled, having prematurely ripened and the crop greatly shortened.

Crop damage seems to be greater than it was during the drought of 1927 when the rainfall was about the same. Conditions are the worst experienced since 1894 when the rainfall was even less, none at all being recorded here in August and June and July less than the same months this year.

The temperature averaged about two and one-half degrees below normal but there were many warm days. The highest temperature recorded was 89 degrees on the tenth and the lowest 42 degrees on the sixteenth.

The M. S. C. Alumnae League

MRS. T. H. BROUGHTON
President
M. S. C. Women's League

AGAIN, the M. S. C. Alumnae League, which is an organization of all former women students of the College, has a brief message for its membership. The officers of the League have planned an interesting meeting for Monday evening, September 30, at the Union. Several prominent women on the campus have been asked to speak. The September meeting will be followed by similar affairs the last Monday evening of each month during the school year.

At the present time the League is raising a fund to furnish the rest room off the Women's lounge in the Union, and all former alumnae have been asked to share in the undertaking. Contributions for this project are being received by Irene Patterson.

As stated last month the sole purpose of the Alumnae League is to be one of unity among the former women students of M. S. C. in moulding their thoughts and interests toward their Alma Mater.

The organization is now represented on the executive committee of the alumni association by its president.

Officers of the League for 1929-30 are president, Blanche Evans Broughton, w'17; first vice-president, Gladys Franks, w'27; second vice-president, Louise Clemens, '13; secretary, Helen Hedrick Casteel, '23; treasurer, Dorothy Dorris Frimodig, '17; corresponding secretary, Irene Patterson, '24.

Study the Scholastic Records Before Visiting Your Brothers and Sisters

SCHOLASTIC averages prepared for the last college year from the office of the registrar make interesting comparisons. The women's standings are considerably higher than those credited to the men, and the women's societies and sororities stand at the top of the list by a generous margin. This is the twelfth consecutive year that the women have carried the leading honors, this year the Alpha Chi Omega having topped the Sigma Kappa by a safe lead.

Alumni of the various organizations listed below will be interested to compare these standings with those of 1927-28. Likewise, the table will prove interesting to the many brothers and sisters who like to have their society near the top but give little assistance to the active group in making it better. An even 2.000 is a "C" average, while 3.000 equals a "B."

Following is the list of societies and their averages, with a comparative list for 1927-28:

The state highway advisory board has approved the establishment of a trunk line on the Michigan State college campus. This will include the circular drive connecting with Michigan avenue by way of the River drive and with US-16 over the main entrance to the college grounds and the Farm Lane road.

The board's recommendation for the establishment of a trunk line through the college campus is interpreted as an indication that the winding roads will eventually be paved.

The unusually large freshmen enrollment is causing some concern among College officials due to the lack of houses and dormitories in which the students may live. No definite plan has been advanced to relieve this condition.

THE MICHIGAN STATE COLLEGE MILITARY BAND, now consisting of some seventy pieces, is an integral part of the College. During the fall term its activities center around the football games. In its marching maneuvers the customary M. S. C. formation or large letter "S" brings the spectators to their feet amid loud applause. This innovation, unusual among college bands, shares the praise of football fans second only to the perfect manner in which the band marches in and out of formation, as well as in field parades.

Leonard V. Falcone, director, was born in Italy and started his musical career at the age of nine. He studied band instruments and band technique and conducting under famous masters in Italy and has since directed bands and orchestras in this country and abroad. Mr. Falcone is an accomplished musician, appearing as soloist several times a year over the state. Arriving in this country in 1915, Mr. Falcone later entered the University of Michigan School of Music, from which institution he graduated, receiving an artist's diploma. Mr. Falcone is considered one of the best band directors in America today, and his work at the Michigan State Institute of Music and Allied Arts has been most favorably received.

John Gould, '30, drum major, deserves great praise for his expert handling of the band both at football games and parades. Very few college drum majors can be compared to Gould for excellency in wielding the baton.

During the winter the band will turn its attention to concert work, for it is no longer only a marching organization, but a fine concert band as well. Alumni clubs and civic organizations are already booking the famous Spartan band for future engagements.

Gardner, '05, Reports Mediterranean Fly Caused Southern Bank Failures

THE Mediterranean fruit fly, a harmless appearing little insect, which was discovered in the United States for the first time on the final day of last March, caused nearly a half-hundred banks in Florida to close their doors and brought tremendous property loss and expense to the people of Florida and the United States. Victor R. Gardner, '05, professor of horticulture and director of the college experiment station, reported recently.

Professor Gardner was one of the seven men selected to a committee by the United States department of agriculture to investigate the serious situation brought about by the insect which has long been common in tropical parts of the world outside the United States.

The fly has been given much publicity since it was discovered in Florida. Mr. Gardner stated on his return to the Campus several weeks ago. "It is a pest that resembles the common house fly and it is innocent in appearance. It is, however, a serious pest as it lays its eggs on fruit and when the young flies hatch they bore their way into the fruit and ruin it. The pest also attacks vegetables," the professor said as he described this new invader.

Harmless in North

"The latter part of this year's citrus crop of Florida was not marketed because of the fly and this alone caused tremendous loss to the people of that state. One million bushels of fruit were destroyed, which cost the state and the federal government $2,000,000.

"The fly could do no harm in northern states as it is only a tropical pest, but it could do much damage in states adjoining Florida and if not stamped out it might spread to California, Professor Gardner reports.

"For a time it appeared as though the entire 1929-1930 Florida fruit crop would have to be destroyed and this would have represented a loss of $100,000,000 to the state, as Florida has only two industries of note, citrus fruit and the tourists.

"The state appropriated a million and the government gave an additional three million dollars to stamp out the pest and the battle was on. The farmers realized that their next year's income was shattered and this started a run on the banks, which had millions invested in farm lands, that would be abandoned because of the fly.

Situation Improves

"An arrangement has been made, however, whereby the fruit can go through a certain process and be marketed and this condition has checked the bank failures and is bringing the state back to normal," according to Mr. Gardner.

The government will now spend $30,000,000 to stamp out this pest and this is a small amount when compared with the annual value of the California fruit crop, which would be threatened if the pest had a chance to spread.

DEATHS

NELSON R. CARR, 1921

Coming as a shock to his many friends is the word of the death at Tucson, Arizona, on April 29, 1929, of Nelson R. Carr, 21.

WARREN HENRY GOSS, 1882

Warren H. Goss, '82, passed away April 10, 1929, at Bangor, Michigan. His entire life was lived in Van Buren county, and the following excerpt from the local newspaper testifies the regard in which he was held. "Thus lived and died Warren Henry Goss, but the real record of his life is found in the official documents of the county and state. For several years he was county surveyor, and he followed his calling of civil engineer for more than forty years. Hundreds of surveys and plans bear his signature, and will ever stand as a monument to his accuracy and fidelity. He followed his work to the very end. An unfinished plat on his desk bears silent testimony of an industrious life spent in laying foundation stones on which others may build. The tripod and chain of the surveyor are laid aside, but his achievements endure. One other side of Mr. Goss' nature should be mentioned. The woods, rocks, hills, streams, and boundaries; to him they were 'footprints on the sands of time'. They spoke a language which he understood; to him the voice of nature was the voice of God telling of another land to be discovered and surveyed. A faithful worker and kind and generous man has left us. Were he to speak, his parting message would be—'Remember all the best of our past moments and forget the rest'."

Other members of the class of '82 who have passed away recently are John F. Evarts who died in February, 1928, at Mendon, Michigan, and Fred E. Delano, who died at Westerville, Nebraska, November 7, 1927.

Detroit Alumni News

MICHIGAN STATE alumni are actively interested in the Intercollegiate Alumni club, Detroit, which has announced its plan of building a fine clubhouse in the center of Detroit's downtown business section. The club is an outgrowth of the Intercollegiate association formed some fifteen years ago, and which functioned as a luncheon club until December of last year. At that time it was decided to change the name and to increase the membership with the aim of building a clubhouse. The name was then changed and the club announced its objective of building a clubhouse in Detroit as soon as sufficient membership had been obtained. Within sixty days over five hundred members had been secured, and, at the present time, membership in the club is considerably past the thousand mark and constantly increasing, so that work in all probability will begin on the new clubhouse some time this fall.

Michigan State alumni who have joined the club to date include: Frank B. Ainger, Jr., '38; George Bentley, '19; Claire L. Brackett; Albert E. Cooney, w17; Samuel M. Dean, '14; Calvin J. Gavesman, '15; E. H. Gunnison, '12; Albert B. Holmes; Charles C. Hood, '17; Nelson B. Hubbard, '09; Hans B. Keydel, '20; Walter G. Knickerbocker, '16; Edward C. Krehl, '08; J. Sterling Lane, '26; Charles W. Lapworth, '09; Lincoln Maire, '17; Richard A. Miller; Russel F. Montgomery, '20; Willard H. Pangborn, '23; Maurice C. Platt, w18; Darius M. Pierson, '14; Philip H. Piper, '19; Matthew J. Quirk, '23; Merrit A. Reeves, '20; Clifford L. Snyder, w13; and Nial R. Townley.

The clubhouse will embody all the attractive features that modern taste in such buildings dictates. Facilities for recreation include handball and squash courts, a gymnasium and a swimming pool. Another feature of the clubhouse will be living quarters for members just out of college, and more spacious rooms for older men.

The clubhouse will provide a center for intercollegiate alumni activity, need for which has long been felt in Detroit.

Hard Work Issued Spartans in Early Sessions

Coach Crowley and Staff Using Irish Tactics

FOOTBALL has been in the air on the old College field nearly every day since September 9, when the early season gridiron camp opened. The biggest first day turnout in recent years greeted James H. Crowley, the new head coach of the Spartans and his assistants, when nearly fifty veterans and sophomores turned out for the initial workouts. This in itself, was a notable feat, for usually the experienced hands do not hustle in getting under the wire for the first day.

"Well they look pretty good," that has been the comment of Coach Crowley, several afternoons as he left the practice field, hoarse from his vocal efforts. "I am especially pleased with the condition that the letter men are in. That shows that they have been thinking about football during the summer months. With the veterans showing the right spirit, some of these sophomores will hurry themselves into good shape. That's what we want. There aren't going to be any loafers on this squad. Anybody who falls behind in his work through lack of interest and courage to keep up will find himself doing something besides playing football."

Linemen Drilling Hard

Crowley's attitude on the subject of

MARION JOSLIN

HAROLD E. SMEAD
Center

SMEAD is a veteran lineman around which Carberry expects to build a solid wall. Weighing 200 pounds at the start of practice this fall Smead is expected to give other contenders a stiff battle for the center position. Spartan followers will remember his hard fighting and never-stop-rushing tactics in the U. of D. game at Detroit last fall.

football has been re-echoed in many pointed remarks shot at the squad by Glen M. (Judge) Carberry, the new end coach. Carberry and "Gob" Wilson have been sending the linemen through drills that leave them gasping for breath and well nigh exhausted. It has easily been the hardest early season practice held on old College field in recent years.

With legal flow of words the spectators can hear Carberry shout out, "Don't think that you can shirk out here. We have good memories. Anybody who shirks now will do it in a game. I know you are tired, but that can't be helped, so get in there and work. Some of you tackles are going to be guards and some of you guards are going to be tackles. The field is wide open. The Notre Dame system demands speed and the guards are going to be race horses. If you want to play any position, get going."

Try Irish Tactics

While Wilson and Carberry have their squads leaping forward on their chests, duck-walking, charging, and indulging in wild sprints, Coach Crowley and Casteel have their charges at another corner of the field giving the backfield men some first hand information about the Notre Dame shift. With Smead, veteran center, passing the ball they keep the backs crow-hopping, jumping, and sprinting, trying to catch the rhythm of the new style of play.

Alumni and spectators crowding the sidelines at various practice sessions are agreed that Crowley and his assistants employ a business-like precision in the manner in which the present squad is being groomed. The athletes have been kept on the jump with regular forenoon and afternoon practice sessions, chalk talks and "inside dope" lectures which finds the men now almost ready to leap into the fray against Alma college, Saturday afternoon, September 28, the curtain raiser for the season of 1929.

Homecoming October 26

WITH vacation trips just out of the way many fans will be looking around the corner for the next glimpse of the campus, but more especially for the first campus alumni holiday this fall. Homecoming Day has been set for Saturday, October 26, when the North Carolina State eleven invades the Spartan camp. The sixth annual Boy Scout day will be observed when Alma starts the season here. Alma comes back to the schedule after an absence of almost ten years. Coach Crowley looks for a stiff argument.

Large Freshman Influx

REPORTS from the registrar's office were verified when freshmen in a large number started to arrive in East Lansing last week, preparatory to the events of Freshman week, September 18 to 21.

While details are not complete as the Record goes to press it is predicted that the probable registration of the class of 1933 will pass the 1200 mark, exceeding previous records.

Freshman week, an innovation rather new in many institutions, has been tried with success here for several years. During this period the new student registers, attends regularly planned meetings of his class, familiarizes himself with the layout of the campus and the town, in general he orientates himself in the new environment before the busy days start.

Add to Staff

THE STATE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE at recent meetings approved the appointment of two new members to the staff in the physical education department, namely, Glen M. Carberry, as an assistant coach, and Fendley A. Collins, as wrestling coach and instructor in physical education.

Mr. Carberry is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame, class of 1923, with a law degree. While at Notre Dame he played three years at left end, and was captain his last year. He was a member of one of the same teams on which Crowley played.

Carberry served two years in the United States army during the World war and was honorably discharged as a first lieutenant, infantry. While in the army he played end on the 38th Divisional football team, coached by Major John L. Griffith.

Following his graduation at Notre Dame, Carberry became coach at St. Bonaventure college, Olean, New York, where he coached all sports for three years. For the past three years he has been in a law office at Rochester, New York.

Mr. Carberry is 33 years of age, weighs 195 pounds, is 5 feet 11 inches tall, and is a single man. While he has spent all his time in the East since his graduation from Notre Dame, his home is in Ames, Iowa.

Carberry will work with the linemen and ends, and will be at East Lansing just during the fall season and spring practice.

Mr. Collins was a three letter man while at Oklahoma A. & M. He won letters in football, wrestling and track. While wrestling for Oklahoma A. & M. he was undefeated in the 158-pound and heavyweight class in intercollegiate competition. He was 160-pound National Champion in 1927.

During the past summer Collins has been attending the coaching school at Springfield, Massachusetts, taking some additional work in his line of sports and also in physical education. He will assist Mr. Burhans and Mr. Daubert, with the required physical education classes.

Russian 'Cellist Engaged

ALEXANDER SCHUSTER, Russian 'cellist, has been engaged as head of the 'cello department at the Michigan State Institute of Music and Allied Arts. Mr. Schuster has made Berlin his headquarters for several years and was hailed as a new master of his instrument by German critics when he gave his first concerts there. He was a member of the Huberman trio, has been first 'cellist with several of the leading symphony orchestras in Europe, and for four years acted as concert master of the Schlesischen orchestra at Breslau.

Mr. Schuster's studio at the Institute which now occupies the old weather bureau building will be adjoining that of Michael Press, head of the violin department and a close friend of his. These two distinguished musicians with a third, Zinovy Kogan, Russian violinist, who came to take charge of the violin department at the Lansing branch this fall, and Ralph Rose, Jr., will make up a string quartet, a brilliant prospect for the institute, Michigan State college and the community.

Masons Honor French

PROOF of the sincere sentiment held for the late Prof. Walter French by the Master Masons of Lansing was evidenced on Wednesday evening, September 11, when Claude E. Furgason, as worshipful master, was given the gavel of authority of Walter French Lodge No. 557, F. & A. M., U. D.

For several months the idea of an additional lodge of Freemasons was discussed by men representing various business and industrial activities. Many of the charter members were closely associated with Professor French in religious and civic enterprises, and it is felt that no more fitting name could have been chosen than that which will go down into posterity honoring a man who dedicated his life to his vocation and fraternal affiliations.

Ranier says: "Some years ago when he was first elected to that position he soon discovered north of the city the possibility of a large lake and beautiful addition to the parks of the city. He was advised by his friends not to push the matter as the expense would be so great he would lose his position if he were to suggest such a thing. But he did, and in spite of great opposition succeeded, and now there is nothing Mitchell boasts more than 'The Lake.' I can remember when the College itself had to fight for an existence against great opposition, but it has won the battle and the best part of it to me is that it has been able to impart to so many of its grads the spirit of perseverance against obstacles."
