Listening In

AT the entrance to the Campus of Michigan State college stands the imposing Union Memorial building, that is sometimes mistaken for the administration building, the library, a dormitory, a public information bureau or even the Weather Bureau station.

This four-story brick building besides serving as the permanent clubhouse of alumni and undergraduates is the headquarters of the Michigan State College Association, more generally known to the public as the Alumni Office. Located in several unfinished rooms off the second floor ballroom lobby are the offices and departments conducting a continuous program of service for the alumni family of the College.

Questions often asked are:

"What is the Michigan State College Association?"

"What does it do?"

"How is it financed?"

If the inquirer were to delve into the bound volumes of the Association's publication, he would find his questions answered in this manner:

The object of the Association shall be to promote and strengthen the mutual friendship of graduates and former students in the College and in each other; to promote the general welfare of the College; its purposes shall be limited to such activities as are educational, social, or charitable.

DURING the months of September and October, when football is in the air and the teachers of the state hold the so-called "institutes," the public becomes acquainted with one of the activities of the Alumni Association. These annual reunion meetings represent one of the larger items in the Association's annual budget. Throughout the year, however, the Alumni Association is following a definite program of services intended to substitute organized alumni loyalty for unorganized good will and to secure the maximum of efficiency for every ounce of alumni effort invested.

If one were to study closely the specific lines of endeavor in the alumni organization he would find the following services:

Records—The alumni recorder is charged with keeping the equivalent of alphabetical, geographical, class, subscription, necrological and biographical folder files. This alone is a stupendous task and with the growing list of alumni each year is an invaluable asset to the College.

Publications—The Michigan State College Record was founded as the official alumni magazine in 1896. Each month it gives the alumni body informative stories of the College, news of alumni meetings and many personal class items. The alumni catalogue published last year was the most extensive project ever undertaken by the Association. A new song book was placed upon the market by cooperating with the undergraduates.

Who's Who Among the Alumni

Ray A. Turner, '09 Ag. is a senior extension agriculturist in the office of Cooperative Extension work, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Following graduation, he acted as instructor in dairy laboratory at Michigan State, then for eight years was instructor in agriculture at Hillsdale high school. During this time he was twice elected president of the Michigan Association for the Advancement of Agricultural Teaching. From 1918 to 1924 Mr. Turner was state 4-H club leader with the extension service at Michigan State college. Since 1924 he has been in charge of boys' and girls' 4-H club work in the thirteen central states for the United States Department of Agriculture. He is the author of several publications dealing with this phase of cooperative extension work. Mr. Turner has always been active in alumni and civic affairs and has served as president of the Washington M. S. C. alumni association. He has always maintained his interest in musical affairs and during recent years has become well known to radio audiences through his broadcasts with the United States Marine band. In 1912, Mr. Turner married Irene A. Rorison of Evart, Michigan, and they have one son, Phillip, aged 16. They reside at 213 Baltimore avenue, in Washington, D. C. (To the right)

Florence L. Hall, '09, H. Ec., M. H. Ec. (Hon.) '32, supervisor of home economics extension work in the twelve eastern states for the United States Department of Agriculture preceded her present duties with notable work in similar fields. For eight years she taught in the East Jordan and Lansing, Michigan, high schools, leaving in 1917 to supervise special home extension work at Penn State. In 1922 she was called to Washington, D. C. as milk utilization specialist in the U. S. Department of Agriculture. After six years of service she was appointed to her present position. Miss Hall is affiliated with numerous national home economics organizations and for a number of years has been an active member of the M. S. C. alumni club in Washington. At the thirty-second annual meeting of the Washington alumni club held February 20, Miss Hall was elected president. She was one of four prominent alumni to participate in the 75th anniversary program on Alumni Day this year and was the only alumna of the College to receive an honorary degree at the Commencement exercises. (To the left)

Dillman S. Bullaock, '02, Ag., has cast his lot and found a noble lifetime work down in southern Chile, South America. Conscience and not consideration of cash or selfish advantage has caused him to spend twenty of the past thirty years in that country. During the period of 1912 to 1916 he taught in an agricultural school at Marinette, Wisconsin, and later became a livestock specialist in Wisconsin. His work there led to the formation of the National "better sires, better stock" campaign by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. In 1921 he went to Buenos Aires as agricultural trade commissioner of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. In this work he travelled extensively in Uruguay, Argentine, Chile, Bolivia, and Peru. He resigned in October 1923 to return to mission work in Chile, under the Methodist Episcopal church. He is located at Angol, Chile, as director of a practical school of agriculture on a farm of 3,800 acres. The institution is self supporting—the farm, dairy, nursery, gardens, and orchards maintaining the school. In 1906 he married Katrina Kelly, a Canadian missionary teacher in the school at Temuco. He received his M. Agr. from M. S. C. in 1911 and his M. S. from the University of Wisconsin in 1920. His hobby is collecting. His collection of Chilean and Argentine birds and mammals in the College museum attests to his enthusiasm along this line. He says he has always been lucky in his collecting. A new species of fish, a moss, a mollusk, and more than twenty-five new insects have been described from his collections. (To the right)

The College Library Emerges From a Summer of Reorganization

By JACKSON E. TOWNE
Librarian, Michigan State College

THE summer just past has been an exceptionally busy one in the College library, for, while serving a record summer school enrollment of more than 800, our nine staff members and nine veteran student helpers have reorganized many phases of the book service for the opening of the fall term.

In comparison with the maintenance budgets of other state college libraries, ours at Michigan State has been reasonably adequate in recent years, so we have been able to carry out a considerable program of reorganization, although far from a complete one.

The work of each department of the library has been carefully routinized in accordance with the most recent practice in college library administration. Daily, weekly, monthly, and annual functions of each of the department heads have been determined and fixed.

LIBRARY STACKS REVISED

TO provide for the expansion of the collection it has been necessary to shift all the books in the stacks. This was a real undertaking, for more than 99,500 bound volumes, over 90,000 fully catalogued, were involved, on six stack tiers. The stacks have been clearly re-labeled and a check of missing books taken in the following fields: general works, philosophy, religion, philology, fine arts, and useful arts. Only 303 titles were found missing in these fields. Next summer the book check will be completed when the social sciences, literature, the pure sciences, and history are critically examined.

SOUTH ENTRANCE OF NEW LIBRARY

A number of new pictures have been hung in various rooms of the library. The periodical reading room now boasts two sequences of large portraits of Presidents of the United States.

NEW READING EXPERIMENT STARTED

THE State Board of Agriculture authorized the addition of more than six hundred dollars worth of wall shelving. The book budget is large enough to undertake three or four experiments in recreational reading, and a portion of the new wall shelving has been placed in the assigned reading room. On this shelving a special browsing collection of European travel is now displayed to remind students that the books containing assigned readings are not the only ones available in the library. Miss Lois Bower, the attendant in the assigned reading room, is in charge of the new reading experiment.

Dormitory libraries have been established in each wing of Mary Mayo hall. Some of the books were chosen from new lists which have been used in the new dormitory libraries at the University of Chicago.

Prompt notification of faculty members of duplication of their orders, of receipt of their books or of delays caused by out-of-print orders, together with daily sending of orders, constitute some of the reforms which have been put into effect in the library order department, efficiently presided over by Mrs. Marjorie Himebaugh Bowman.

A much closer check is to be kept on the percentage of orders received from each department of instruction. Hereafter the order department will be relieved of all details concerning subscriptions to, and binding of, current journals, this responsibility being now assigned to the periodical department.

CHARTS AND POSTERS USED

THE Michigan State college library is a full depository for the documents issued by the United States government and these have been rearranged on the basement floor of the stacks in strict accordance with the classification numbers used by the U. S. superintendent of documents. The arrangements is carefully explained by posters and charts. Hereafter, the receipt as well as the circulation of federal documents will be in charge of Miss Lois Brumbaugh, reference librarian.

We hope to put a new policy into effect this fall regarding the departmental books scattered in the various buildings on the Campus. We have had a check taken of the books involved and have drawn up recommendations for new administrative rulings. Of the 3,700 books in the departmental libraries, we found 553 either missing or not immediately available between the dates of July 5 and 16. If the new rulings are passed by the faculty, our head cataloger, Miss Charlotte Jackson, and her assistant, Mrs. Mary Nelson, will have over 800 departmental books to catalog in addition to the accessions which will come to us as a result of our regular orders throughout the year. Miss Jackson will welcome the added responsibility if the departmental library problem can be brought nearer to a satisfactory solution.

Miss Ruth McKinley, chief of circulation, and her assistant, Miss Alice Rasmussen, plan to watch circulation statistics with special interest in the future to learn what various classes of books are proving most popular.

A system of fines for penalizing delinquent student borrowers was approved by the college faculty late last spring. Since the fines are minimum ones, comparatively speaking, we expect that the students themselves will welcome the new ruling.

GRADUATE STUDY ROOM IMPROVED

WE hope that the popularity of the graduate study room will increase now that the shelves are lined with stimulating books selected for the more serious sort of browsing. The library's collection of college and university administrative material has also been transferred to the graduate study room. Miss Norma Schmitt, of the regular library staff, is now in the graduate study room, as full-time attendant.

Neither the lowly basement nor the distant attic has been neglected in the library reorganization which has gone forward this summer. The basement contains 98 fire-proof steel cases and probably the most important material housed in these cases at present is the collection of college catalogs. Many institutions from every state in

“CLOSE BESIDE THE WINDING CEDAR”

Seventy-five years ago this year the first students enrolled at this old College. This fall hundreds of sons and daughters, and even grandsons and granddaughters of alumni are enrolled. After all, it's the same old school though the name has been changed some and the Campus of today looks not at all like the dense wooded plot which stretched out from old College hall in 1857 when President Williams, Professors Tracy, Fisk, Weeks, and Holmes took up their duties with the first 61 students in attendance. Yet dozens of alumni who have followed them through the College have decided that with the same old standards in scholarship, social conduct, and morality the old College is still the best place in the country for a young man or young woman to be a student.

Last year the Campus sod began burning up soon after the Fourth of July. This year it was a different story. On Labor Day visitors found the Campus sward and shrubbery green and verdant. "I never saw the Campus looking more beautiful than now," was the word pronounced by many grads from week to week. For the first time in many seasons there was no new building or ditch diggers at work on the grounds.

Old Man Depression limited the usual summer building program on the Campus but in spite of the shortage of cash college heads were able to do a bit of necessary patching. New eaves-troughing and cornices have been added to old Abbott hall, former coed dormitory, now housing part of the music department. The same additions are now under way on the old armory and band hall. State's mammoth parade grounds in front of Demonstration hall, familiarly known as the "Plains of Sherburne" is in the process of reseeding, while wider and smoother road beds across the grounds will greet State's football visitors this fall when they approach the stadium. Contracts have just been let for a $19,000 overhauling of wiring and plumbing in the Dairy building.

Hank and Frank, long-time proprietors of East Lansing's most famous barber shop, and familiar figures to most of State's alumni, have taken over the Union "tonsorial parlor." They promise to provide choice of haircuts and "long" stories in their new stand as they were noted for in their old.

Louis Graveure, noted American tenor, who has served as head of the M. S. C. Institute of Music vocal department since February, 1928, resigned April 1, 1932, it was learned when the State Board of Agriculture accepted his resignation at the regular August meeting. No successor has been appointed as yet.

Acting Dean of Liberal Arts E. H. Austin resumed his post as head of the college department of education on the expiration of Prof. E. H. Ryder's two-year leave of absence from the deanship. Dean Ryder was re-appointed following his recovery from a lingering illness.

Dean H. B. Dirks, of the engineering division, was elected to the governing council of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at the society's 40th convention at Oregon State college, June 29-July 1.

Regardless of how certain classes in economics proceed this fall Uncle Sam has summoned First Lieut. Fred M. Thrun, assistant professor of economics, to report to Washington for active military duty. He reported last week at the national capital.

Lieut. Col. Dorsey R. Rodney, commandant of the R. O. T. C. post here, served as executive officer at Camp Custer, Battle Creek, this summer for the annual training for members of the R. O. T. C. and the C. M. T. C. in the mid-west. The College cavalry unit, consisting of 57 mounts, rode to Camp Custer. The infantrymen also attended Camp Custer while the artillery cadets spent the same period at Fort Sheridan, Illinois. The summer camp is for advanced military science students and is attended between the junior and senior years.

As one of a host of improvements inaugurated by Jackson E. Towne, new librarian, the College library will issue a monthly news bulletin, embodying innovations in library personnel, books, system, etc. The first copy issued last week announces that W. B. Kershaw, '31, a graduate of the Columbia University School of Library service, will assume the duties of evening reference librarian for the coming year.

When State's upperclass hordes returned to classes last week they noticed fewer staff changes in the faculty than is usual fall term. To replace temporarily Mrs. Mary Hendricks, head of the history department, who is seriously ill, Harry H. Kimber was appointed at the last meeting of the State Board of Agriculture to act as assistant professor. Frank Leahy, former Notre Dame gridiron star, will act as assistant line coach for Jimmy Crowley during the pigskin season. A. E. Damon replaces Sergt. J. Foley as custodian of war department supplies at Demonstration hall.

Two new army officers have arrived in East Lansing to take up leave for instruction at the R. O. T. C. post of the College. First Lieut. C. H. Crimm will replace Capt. K. P. Flagg as coast artillery instructor. He comes here from Fort Totten, New York, and has seen foreign service in the Philippine Islands. Captain Flagg was detailed to the Hawaiian islands. First Lieut. H. F. Newell comes as an infantry instructor direct from the Hawaiian Islands to exchange places with First Lieut. L. H. Rockafellow.

Spectators and players, alike, have had a lot of fun out of the early season football practice this fall. Coach Jim Crowley has a happy knack of getting a lot of fun and giving everyone a big laugh out of his gridiron remarks. Hundreds of fans were sorry to see that big white sign hoisted at the entrance of Old College field last week which read "Secret Practice Today."

As The Record goes to press the Spartans defeated Alma 93-0.

Beal Pinetum Thinned By Hatchet

FAR-SIGHTED forestry department officials are taking steps this fall to prevent the death of the magnificent pines that make a campus shrine of M. S. C.'s beloved Pinetum. The very popularity of the spot has drawn so many visitors that many of the trees are in danger of dying from too-closely packed earth about their roots. According to Professor P. H. Herbert, head of the forestry department, a process of mulching must soon be adopted to allow the pines, planted by the late Dr. Beal, sufficient moisture.

In addition, Professor Herbert pointed out, a large number of the pines must be thinned out, else the struggle for existence in crowded quarters may kill them all. He admitted that he hated to mar the symmetry of the rows, but said that if the majority of the growth is to be saved there is no other course open. He indicated that if such a policy had been observed in regard to the pines Dr. Beal planted in the Arboretum that many of those would today be standing.

The opinion of the forestry department is that State alumni would rather see part of the grove saved for the memories and traditions it embodies than that it should all die from a natural struggle for existence.

COLLEGE LIBRARY EMERGES FROM A RE-ORGANIZATION

the Union are represented. New request postal cards have been sent out to 550 addresses. Hereafter, the college catalogs will be requested and checked in by Miss Adele Ewell, the assistant in charge of periodicals.

Miss Ewell also has charge of completing the lists of the duplicate periodicals which we have stored at present in both attic and basement, and which we soon hope to offer for sale.

The Ph. D. theses at M. S. C. are printed and one hundred copies of each are deposited with the College by the authors. Correspondence leading to interesting exchange relations with both American and foreign colleges and universities has been initiated by the library.

The Michigan State college library is still a comparatively small collection, but it contains complete runs of 11 of the 21 basic scientific journals, a fairly good showing. In the field of botany the library can challenge national attention.

Due to the fact that reorganization costs will be less next July, more money can be spent for subscriptions to periodicals as yet not taken, for filling in the large number of gaps in our present bound periodical files, and for the additional binding which will naturally be needed. Our periodical list, in particular, needs re-building.

MRS. LANDON PRAISED

AS I have said before, I came to Michigan State college when I learned that the institution had been allocating about $20,000 a year for books. My library training at the land-grant University of Illinois; my library experience at the University of Iowa, which made possible a number of visits to Iowa State college when its brilliant library program was in the early stages of development; and my years as secretary of the college and reference section of the American Library association have all tended to make me look forward with pleasure to library work in an institution of the large state-college type.

I cannot conclude this brief report of our library reorganization of the past summer without paying tribute to my veteran predecessor, Mrs. Landon, who served the College as its head librarian no less than forty-one years. Mr. Severance, the librarian of the University of Missouri, has published an excellent brief history of his library and it will be extremely interesting this fall to collaborate with Mrs. Landon and College Historian Kedzie in the editing of the story of the library of Michigan State college, modeled somewhat upon the Missouri study by Mr. Severance.

None of our work accomplished since last April would have been possible but for the firm administrative foundations laid by Mrs. Landon years ago and kept intact throughout these years. In many colleges the librarian is regarded as outside the administrative group. Such a college may reform, but even if it hires the most effective new librarian in the world, his will be an uphill struggle, for the tradition of the insignificance of his position will need to be combatted every step of the way. This difficulty does not confront me here, thanks to Mrs. Landon.

Station WWJ of Detroit will broadcast the State-U. of M. game Saturday afternoon, October 1. Tune in at 2 o'clock, E.S.T., if you cannot attend.

Pauline Scott's Hobby Is Writing

PAULINE SCOTT, '28, called "Polly" on the Campus, was always keenly interested in dramatics, and sometimes took the "leads" in Professor E. S. King's Little Theater plays. She is a member of Theta Alpha Phi, honorary dramatics fraternity. Her hobbies, however, have always been riding and writing. During her college years she rode in several horse shows, sponsored by the R. O. T. C.. In vacation months she carried her "hobby" still further and served as riding counsellor at Camp Interlochen, a girls' camp near Traverse City, Michigan.

PAULINE SCOTT,

Writing, an ambition rather than hobby, perhaps, has been with her ever since childhood, but it began in grim earnest upon entering M. S. C. Taking all of the English, journalism, and creative writing courses offered on the Campus, she was determined to write. The "Quill Club," now a definite writers' organization, on the Campus, in its infancy then was a weekly Tuesday gathering eagerly to be awaited. It is really to the fine encouragement of Professor Mullenburg that Miss Scott owes any success she may have attained.

Some few weeks ago The Pink Porcelain Pipe, a fairy tale, was published by Dorrance and company. This is Miss Scott's first book. She is a member of the Ero Alphan sorority. At the present time she is an instructor of English and history at Uaton hall, the Pennington School for Girls at Romeo, Michigan.

That the state of Michigan may not fall below its record of planting 24,000,000 trees last year, the College forestry department is this fall mailing 3,300 copies of its fall price list to all parts of the state. In addition the College is sponsoring a two-day meeting in Munising, Michigan, October 7 and 8, to encourage widespread tree planting over an entire county area. Scientific aid in reforestation for farmers and lumbermen will be handled by a group of experts, including Dr. L. C. Gray, executive secretary of the National Land Use Planning committee, appointed last winter by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, R. L. Schoenmann, director of the Michigan Land Economic survey for the conservation department, and Professor P. A. Herbert, head of the Michigan State forestry department.

SPARTAN GRADS MEET AGAIN AT R. O. T. C. SUMMER CAMP

Fort Sheridan Summer Camp Gives State Men High Rating

THE usual representation of Michigan State college was obtained at coast artillery reserve officers' camp at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, this summer. There was a total of twenty-three, as follows:

Captains, George T. Bentley, '19; Myrl E. Newark, '25; first lieutenants, Amen H. Laxton, '29; Cleo E. Coles, '28; Guy A. Culbert, '28; Leland K. Dewey, '25; William E. Jacobs, '23; Joe M. Newman, '25; Norval L. Offenbauer, '28; Clarence R. V. Shelley, '27; Lawrence A. Strobel, '28; Austin W. Merchant, '29; Stanley W. Luther, '28; second lieutenants, W. C. Betteridge, '32; J. Francis Corr, '30; G. E. Eddy, '30; Hathaway J. Hanes, '29; M. R. Hopkins, '29; Joseph P. Thompson, '30; Lazell J. Wall, '28; Raymond L. Jennings, '30; Arvo M. Niemi, '30; W. S. Butler, '32.

The camp was held from July 31 to August 13. Its location was particularly fortunate, giving opportunity for an encampment in tents on a level piece of ground about eight feet above and overlooking Lake Michigan. Below it there was an excellent beach for swimming. This section of the land shore was free from boat traffic so gun practice was not held up at any time.

In the coast artillery section of the reserve officers camp there were about one hundred men. This was about half the usual total, but the reason was the curtailment of army appropriations in the last session of congress.

Major G. F. Humbert, assigned to duty with reserve officers in the Lansing area, commanded the coast artillery camp. He was assisted by other regular army officers who are also on duty with reserves, Major Pitts of Milwaukee, Major Hawkins of Detroit, and Major Herger of Chicago.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT PRACTICE STRESSED

CAMP was spent in much the usual way, with the days well filled from first call at 5:45 a. m. to mess call at 6:00 p. m. Instruction was given in the 3-inch A. A. gun, 50 cal. machine gun, 30 cal. machine gun, 45 cal. pistol, and the new data computer. Searchlight drill was held one evening.

Classes were held on the various subjects in which an officer should be proficient, and, since the army anti-aircraft has been making tremendous efforts to keep ahead of the air forces, there was plenty of new material for all.

Night firing was not conducted this year because of complaints from residents in nearby towns. The daylight firing was entirely satisfactory and successful. It was conducted by firing at sleeve targets towed above the lake at a safe distance behind an aeroplane. A regular army plane had been detailed from Selfridge field for that purpose.

RECORD MADE BY STATE MEN

MICHIGAN STATE men bested all others in their record practice on the 45 cal. pistol. The 947th C. A. (A. A.) regiment, composed largely of officers living in the Lansing area, and represented in camp almost entirely by M. S. C. graduates, had the highest average of all regiments, 74.6%. Other scores ranged from 72% to 61.7%. Not only that, but the 947th had 95% of of the officers qualify as "marksmen" or better. The two best shots in camp were Lt. Amen Laxton (95%) and Lt. Clarence Shelley (91%), both M. S. C. men, as listed above.

Weather during camp was particularly good. There was relatively little rain, the days were not excessively hot, and the nights were cool. There was an almost continuous breeze off the lake. Fort Sheridan is an ideal place for a camp, so it is no wonder that the regular army is anxious to cooperate with the people in that area in regard to night firing.

Some class secretaries are urging their members to boost their standing in contributions to the Annual Alumni Fund. A bright, red, rosy apple to the winner!

Frosh Change Wells Into Sober Dormitory

NO MORE will Wells hall echo to the belligerent cry "under the bed, Frosh." No more will strapping freshmen football men barricade their legs; husky classmates in the attic and bitterly defend the narrow stairs against sophomoric onslaughts. No more will Campus and State police answer hurried midnight calls to break up smouldering riots within the twenty-five year old brick walls. Wells hall this fall becomes solely a freshman dormitory.

Thus endeth an old chapter in the hall's stormy career, and (so hope faculty men) thus beginneth a new chapter less bloody and less riotous.

Time was when Wells hall was the "spark-plug" of the all campus fights. There rose the first cry, "So-o-ops, all out!" From there the cry flew to all fraternity houses that another bitter battle was on. Back to Wells came the vanquished and the victor late in the night, bedraggled and dirty, to yarn until day break of that and other titanic scraps with blood-foes, the other class. Now all is to be different.

JUNIOR PROCTORS TO RULE

APPROXIMATELY 195 freshmen are to live in Wells this year under the protection of six junior proctors and a full-time supervisor. The plan is innovated in the hopes that by concentrating a yearling nucleus and protecting it from upperclass interference better class morale and better scholastic showings can be induced.

C. A. Rosenbrook, '30, took office this summer as full time supervisor and under him will co-operate six responsible juniors, one in each ward. Rosenbrook has an office in the building itself, from where he may personally overlook the welfare of the new class of '36.

Last winter's lengthy dispute over the management of a Wells hall boarding club has resulted this fall in a faculty decision to abandon permanently the traditional eating club in the basement of Wells.

Now the frosh may study without interference from better oriented upperclassmen. Now they may have a breathing spell on entering college that is hoped will make them better collegiate citizens and much better scholars.

Once a training school for rough 'n' touch class fighters. Now a sober dormitory and study hall. That is the evolution of Wells.

Keep in touch with alumni headquarters at the College; faculty members' visits to local communities can often be forecast and meetings arranged.

From Ox-cart to Airplane Described by Reminiscing Old Grads

THE classes of '67, '76, '80, and '85 strolled in dreamy, reminiscent leisure between the shade trees on the Union lawn. It was Alumni day and the old, old timers were living again the heyday of their youth, warmed by the affection and esteem that M. S. C.'s newer alumnus held for that which was stooped and mellow.

There was J. W. Gunnison, "the only man living who saw the dedication of the College." Daniel Strange, State's oldest graduate; Liberty Hyde Bailey, internationally noted horticulturist; they were all there, enjoying one happy day lifted from the long shadows of the past.

The New and the Old, but the Old, outnumbered, held the center of the stage that day. Well the New realized that soon there would be no Old and that a rich and colorful chapter in State's living history would be forever closed. So the classes of '67, '76, '80 and '85 visited under the shade trees and younger men attempted to draw them into conversation.

"The only man living to see the College dedicated in 1857"—that is J. W. Gunnison, class of '66. He never graduated so he loses the title of the "oldest graduate," but no one can take his other distinction from him. He was ten years old at the time, and it was immeasurably thrilling and even terrifying for so young a lad to see so many people gathered together in one place at one time. Later he came back as an undergraduate in 1862 and lived the stark, hardy life that young men knew as college in those days. Three hours work a day cutting timber for the first buildings. The class of '66 were truly pioneers.

Mr. Gunnison remembers the white picket fence that used to run parallel to the road south of where the Union now stands. That, he says, was to keep the cows off the Campus, for fencing laws weren't to be enacted for more than twenty years.

An Old Timer in reality. Ransom E. Olds, when still a boy of fourteen, used to come and sit by the hour in his carriage shop in Lansing a few years later. And Gunnison said he saw Old's first "gasoline buggy" long before it was brought into the open for public jeers.

Those were the days when a smooth toll road of planks ran from Lansing to Detroit, and racing post carriages used to make the trip, with frequent changes of horses, in twelve hours. Pioneer days of a great institution—and this man lived them.

ALUMNI CANE CARRIED BY STRANGE

A THICK set man, with snow-white hair and a glossy white imperial, stooped, hesitant, proudly bearing a curiously carved cane—Daniel Strange, State's oldest living graduate. Eighty-six years old—the class of '67, and one of two men living from the first ten graduating classes. Truly a grand old man.

He bears so all may see and admire a carved Mexican cane with his name engraved upon it in gold. It was purchased in Mexico by Dr. R. C. Kedzie, father of Dr. Frank Kedzie, college historian. The cane was donated to the alumni association by "Uncle Frank" in 1931, and will be handed down to each succeeding "oldest graduate."

J. WARREN GUNNISON

—the only former student living who witnessed the dedication of the College.

When Mr. Strange came to M. A. C. the Campus was a sea of stumps from the Union site to the river. Still the students were putting in their three hours a day with an ax, and it was his job to plant most of the huge pines that still stand on the Campus. He asserts that a few of the giant oaks growing here yet are remnants of the primeval forest. Old College hall and Saints' Rest stood then, and he was the mail boy who brought mail each day from Lansing.

But it is hard to talk to Mr. Strange, so many claim his time. So many stop to finger that handsome cane, and to admire his clear eye and precise speech.

COLLEGE PRANKS RECALLED

LIGHTER memories came from the lips of F. A. Gulley, the class of '80. He too remembers the manual labor expended each day on farm plots, southwest and southeast of where the Union stands, but that day he is more interested in the good times he and his classmates had yelling jokes at farmers going by. He tells them and laughs as richly as he must have in '74 when he first matriculated.

There was no class spirit in those days, he recalled, but sometimes the seniors had to use force to keep "the young ladies" they sought in Lansing. Those were all the girls they had in those days.

Terms lasting from November till April . . . muddy roads through the woods to Lansing . . . college pranks . . . they are indelibly typed in his mind.

OX-CART TO AIRPLANE WITH BAILEY

IF IT was hard to talk to Daniel Strange, a moments conversation with Liberty Hyde Bailey was almost an impossibility. A tall, striking figure, hawk-faced, piercing pioneer eye. Add to that a wide-brimmed Stetson, and a white vest—a picture to attract the personality-hunters.

From ox-team to airplane—that is the life span of Liberty Hyde Bailey, onetime State student and professor, nationally known educator and horticulturist. He came here in '77, shortly after Saints Rest was burned, and lived in Old Wells hall, which also went by fire. What is called "Faculty Row" was standing then and also part of the present physics building, the old yellow brick structure that housed the first chemistry building.

In 1886 he came back as a professor and lived in the hort residence that stood where now stands the Union building. The same two giant hickories that stand on either side the walk to the south door to the Union stood then, he recalled, and with the trained instinct of his profession he spoke of the peculiar colorings it effected then, and does now, under the influence of frost.

From ox-cart to airplane . . . that might be the epitaph of all these old, old timers, an epitaph that probably is more extensive in human activity than any again will experience for a long time.

Little groups in that corner, two bent, weather-beaten old farmers on a sofa . . . how one wishes to secretly listen to their reminiscences, unhindered by barriers of strangeness. William Caldwell, '76, Charles Collingwood, '85, H. T. Wells, '85—a judge and a farmer and a business man . . . laughing comments . . . "The Old Library was the New Library then" . . . "only 150 students and now 3,000" . . . "once in a while a co-ed, a professor's daughter" . . . old memories, . . . old thoughts . . . old friendships . . . Alumni Day.

Fall Activity Starts Among Alumni Clubs

SELDOM has such great enthusiasm among Michigan State alumni clubs reached the heights it did the 7th of this month when the Grand Rapids men started off their year of activity with a rousing banquet at the Association of Commerce dining room.

Because the men of Grand Rapids have a lot of interest in the athletic program of the College they extended an invitation to every member of the coaching staff. The entire group was present for the meeting and it was pointed out that never before had the whole department attended an alumni meeting at one time. In addition to all the coaches saying a few words, Gilbert Daane, '09, Grand Rapids member of the State Board of Agriculture and C. L. Brody, '04, Lansing, chairman of the Board, and Alumni Secretary Glen Stewart were introduced to the 82 alumni and guests present. Weekly luncheons will continue each Monday noon at the Association of Commerce.

The value of local clubs, not only to the College but the cities in which they are located and to those graduates located there is well expressed by DeGay Ernst, '22, former president of the Furniture City Club.

It is:

"I may say that owing to the rather good publicity we obtain, and to the various meetings we hold, I think we are making Michigan State better known in this locality than ever before. Our meetings are very well attended considering the available number of Michigan State alumni in this section. . . . Some real friendships have been formed among us with alumni whom we would never have known had it not been for our club. . . . I am saying this because I personally feel that our experiment has been a success the past few years, and that I can say to other alumni in other sections where clubs have not as yet been formed, that they will greatly profit both for their own enjoyment and for the good of Michigan State if they will fall in line and get together."

Freshman Awards Made

THIRTY-TWO freshman students at Michigan State received aid this year as a result of the awarding of alumni undergraduate scholarships. The list includes seven girls and twenty-five boys.

The scholarships consisted of the waiving of college fees for the freshman year and amounts to $97.50. The amount of the awards was donated by the State Board of Agriculture.

The scholarships were awarded according to districts into which the state was divided, the number being thirty-two, one for each senatorial district. In each district there was an alumni committee which carried on the work of choosing the individual to receive the scholarship. Their selection, however, was not final, as the lucky applicant had to be approved by a special committee appointed by President Robert S. Shaw and which had final jurisdiction concerning all scholarships. The committee was composed of Professor L. C. Plant, Dean E. A. Bessey, and Dean H. B. Dirks.

Only active alumni organizations within the state were allowed to nominate candidates for the scholarship in cooperation with the high school principals. The students were nominated from the upper one-third of their respective high school classes and their financial circumstances definitely warranted this scholarship aid. A comprehensive examination was also given before the opening of college.

The complete list of those to receive scholarships follows: John Berg, Hamtramck; Charles Riffenburg, Northville; Dick Colina, Detroit Northern; John Vlock, Belleville; William Smith, Hamtramck; Morrell Russell, Centerville; Rose Jones, Cassopolis; Katherine McKee, Decatur; Stuart Melville, Lakeview; Leslie Winchell, Napoleon; Hazel Sikkenya, Muskegon Heights; Dave Seldon, Pontiac; Harrison Neumann, Lansing Central; Helen McIntyre, Flint Northern; Hilda Motz, St. Johns; Frieda Wiener, Muskegon Heights; Charles Andriga, Byron Center; Peter Sofian, Hamtramck; Clayton Lidel, Monroe; Davis Remington, Caro; Lorena Renshaw, Detroit Northwestern; Robert Spæer, Saginaw; Victor Bielinski, Muskegon; Robert Allman, Bay City; Sam Dreyfuss, Greenville; Robert Geeting, Fremont; Willis Wy-song, Traverse City; Wayne Stuve, Harrisville; William Cain, Alpena; Vedo Heric, Ensign; Joseph Heirman, Escanaba; Robert Johnson, Ishpeming.

Teachers to Meet

THE following meetings have been arranged for the district teachers meetings this fall:

District 3, Lansing, Luncheon at Kerns Hotel Thursday noon, October 20.

District 5, Traverse City, Indoor picnic, American Legion hall, Thursday evening, September 29.

District 6, Ann Arbor, Alumni banquet, Michigan Union, 6:00 p. m., Friday evening, October 14.

District 7, Marquette, Alumni banquet, Northland Hotel, 6:00 p. m., Friday evening, September 30.

District 8, Benton Harbor, Alumni banquet, Premier Hotel, 6:00 p. m., Thursday evening, October 13.

There will be no alumni meetings in connection with districts 1 (Detroit), four (Grand Rapids) or two (Saginaw).

These annual alumni meetings are for resident alumni as well as visiting teachers.

Freshman Week Is Preparation Period

AFTER several years of experimentation and change the general setup for Freshman week was this year given a tentative stamp of approval and seems on the road to permanent usage. When an estimated total of 1,100 to 1,200 new students arrived last Wednesday for the opening day of Freshman Week they found a smooth running program of orientation and instruction confronting them.

As a general policy the College is following the lead of other progressive educational institutions in smoothing the way for the hordes of bewildered freshmen who must quickly accustom themselves to college routine in the few days before classes actually start. Believing that the most vital period in a student's career is the opening days of school, when new habits and new situations must be faced, modern educators today leave nothing to chance but rather systematically direct the activities of the incoming class along lines that will leave a beneficial mark through the four college years.

At 8:00 o'clock Wednesday morning the entire class met in the gymnasium for preliminary instructions and the college welcome. Before any of them had arrived in East Lansing they had been divided into sections and given minute instructions as to procedure. Immediately upon the close of the convocation Wednesday the respective along lines that will leave a beneficial three days.

At different times during that period each group was given placement tests in English and individual psychological tests. The procedure of registration and classification that, in the memory of alumni, used to take long hours, now is handled quickly and "painlessly" in small sections. Medical examinations for both sexes, and fittings for military uniforms, photographs of each incoming student for identification purposes, instructive trips in the use of the College library, all these filled the remainder of the program.

PRESIDENT SHAW SPEAKS

FRIDAY afternoon the traditional President's convocation, at which President Robert S. Shaw welcomed and addressed the class of 1936 took place in the gymnasium. Separate convocations for men and women followed, as well as departmental meetings.

Classes in reality started Monday morning at 8:00 and if the hopes of the administration are realized the new citizens of Michigan State will go to those classes better fitted to cope with scholastic innovations than if they had been tossed headlong into the confusion of opening day as was the former practice.

Spartans Pry Lid Off Another Football Season

Head Coach Crowley Analyzes Squad of Veterans and Reserves

ANOTHER football season stretches in front of a Michigan State college team. Eight games, including five of major calibre, are on the calendar. With such teams as Michigan, Fordham, Syracuse, Detroit, and South Dakota waiting to meet us, not to mention Grinnell, Illinois Wesleyan, and Alma, we have our heart and hands filled with things to do every week-day afternoon between 4 and 6 o'clock.

With nine letter men returning from last year's group of 13, it is immediately apparent that we have a strong nucleus around which to build the 1932 eleven. The first few days of practice indicated to us that the veterans were up to their old marks, generally speaking, and that we would have additional help from the ranks of last year's reserves and the sophomores coming up from the freshman squad of last fall. I consider the present squad as the most evenly balanced in the four years I have coached at State.

CRY IS "BEAT MICHIGAN"

OF COURSE, all alumni, students and friends of the institution are wondering what we are going to do about winning the game from Michigan on October 1. Far be it from me to try telling you how that contest will come out. As most of you know, we have played Michigan to scoreless ties for two years. This fall we have virtually the same team returning to the stadium at Ann Arbor while the Wolverines are to have some new men facing us. This doesn't make our task any easier, allow me to assure you on that point. In fact, it may be even more difficult to prepare for the game because we have never seen many of the Michigan players in action and consequently have no knowledge as to their particular strength or if they have such a thing, any weakness. Michigan knows nine of our men well, having seen them play for two years. On the other hand, we have the bene-

*"Our Jim" will write monthly for the Record in his

COACH JAMES H. CROWLEY

fit of putting a majority of old heads into the battle and they should serve to balance the team very satisfactorily.

For one thing, it seems at this stage of the game as though we would have some good reserve linemen. Last year we were very weak in this respect, only one or two men rating the call for first string relief. Some of the boys are sophomores and look like fine prospects for other seasons. For instance, we have such men as Reavely, Demarest, Roberts, Klewicki, Otto, Bos, Baker, Norton, Dennis and others who are playing pretty generally as reserves but who may develop into regulars before the season is out. The backfield reserve strength is not so great.

TEAM HAS EXPERIENCED LINE

BUT I have been getting the cart before the horse here in telling you of the reserves before speaking of the regulars. You may remember that we have five letter winning linemen and four veteran ball carriers returning. The forwards are Meiers, center; Handy, guard; Brunette and Buss, tackles; Vandermeer, end. This gives an experienced forward wall. Captain Milton Gross stepped out of his left guard position on graduating while Jake Fase is missing from left end for the same reason. We have the guard situation pretty well settled but the end berth is still troubling us and the problem may remain unsolved until near the end of the season. Robert Terlaak, a Cleveland sophomore, is the answer at left guard. He is playing a game equal to that of the best regular linemen. At the end, however, there are a couple of boys struggling for the call.

If Roger Keast, Lansing junior, wins the job, you may be assured of seeing some speed at end. He is the state quarter mile champion, you know, and certainly can get over the ground. Roger played fairly well last year as a relief man for Fase. We have shifted Myrton (Red) Vandermeer from right end to the left side of the line so it's the right end job that is open.

VETERANS AIDED BY RESERVES

I HAVE made a prediction this fall that I wish you would keep in mind. Gordon Reavely, a reserve tackle, is going to be a cracker-jack before he is through here. Reavely is the state heavyweight wrestling champion and played his first football in spring practice. He has taken a keen interest in the gridiron game with the result that he is full of questions. But a year of football should make him a great tackle. Arthur Buss, Benton Harbor junior, is due for a big year as a tackle. He attracted much favorable mention as a sophomore and should go even better this season. We are expecting a good deal from both Buss and Brunette, who plays right tackle. George Handy and Francis Meiers are sturdy football players. The rougher, the better so far as they are concerned. Meiers finds himself facing a new situation this season. We have a player who can relieve him once in a while. Frank Butler, a big boy who weighs 200 pounds or so, promises to see a lot of action. Meiers has played for two years with the knowledge that there wasn't a man on the bench who could relieve him and keep up his end of the fight. Now that there is somebody waiting to help him out, Buddy should give us a great show of football.

PERMANENT LINEUP UNKNOWN

WE have been doing some shifting around of our backfield this fall and Mike Casteel, who coaches the ball carriers, and I have not decided definitely what the lineup will be. We have agreed that Jerry Jones, the Bay City junior, will play quarterback. Jones is strong defensively, has a natural gift of adapting himself to any conditions that may develop suddenly on the football field, is a good blocker and plays hard every minute. We have been grooming young Russell Reynolds, Flint sophomore, for right halfback, keeping Eliowitz at fullback and Monnett at left half. Reynolds has not come along quite as well as we had hoped. He shows unmistakable signs of inexperience, to be expected, of course, and hasn't the fire of the veteran backs.

Joe Kowatch, the handy man of the backfield, is a dependable fellow we can always name to the right halfback job. He will do a good day's work anytime. But Bernard McNutt, burly Allegan junior, has jumbled the setup by showing much improvement. We have tried him at fullback with Captain Eliowitz at right half and Captain Monnett at left half. This combination has great line smashing power. McNutt should be a real star before he is through at State. Other reserve backs from whom we may expect help later are Kircher and Muth, quarterbacks; Liberty and Armstrong, halfbacks; Gilliland, fullback.

Apropos of the intensive preparations we were making for the opening of the season this fall, I must tell you of a remark I overheard one day while walking from the field. Johnny Johnson, a plucky little halfback who has been playing reserve for two seasons, was stepping alongside Ralph Brunette.

"I wish I had gone to Alma college," Johnny said to Ralph.

"Why?" asked Ralph with surprise.

"Well, if I had gone to Alma college I would have had to play you fellows only once a year. As it is I get a dose of you every afternoon."

Tom Ottey Heralded As New Olympic Star

TWO outstanding American Olympic stars this year are favored as the main cogs in M. S. C.'s track squad. Tom Ottey, the first American to place in the 10,000 metre run in 28 years, and Ernest Crosbie, first American to place in the 50,000 metre walk, are State's new addition to cinder-path fame.

Ottey and Clark Chamberlain, another blue ribbon cross country man, motored to Stanford two weeks before the Olympics for the official tryouts. There, in a field of 15 men, Ottey placed first and Chamberlain fourth, the latter thereby being eliminated under a new ruling that allows each nation only three men in the finals. In the Olympics itself Ottey placed ninth, the first American across the line, and the first to place at all in 28 years.

Ernest Crosbie, a newcomer this year at State took eighth place in the 50,000 metre walk at the Olympics, also the first American to breast the tape. Both Ottey and Crosbie have at least two years to wear the Green and White in intercollegiate competition.

Big alumni meetings planned on Friday evening before both the Fordham and Syracuse games. The Old Guard will be on hand.

Crowley Picks Frank Leahy As Assistant

IN APPOINTING Frank Leahy, former Notre Dame linesman, as assistant football coach at Michigan State, Jimmy Crowley set a new precedent in State football history. For Leahy will act as full-time coach during the grid season in place of the usual part-time coaches drawn from graduate ranks.

The innovation is expected to aid materially in perfecting the famous Notre Dame system at State, since Leahy will devote several periods a week to instructing the frosh squads in the mysteries of his Alma Mater, rather than leave the yearlings to the less experienced exhortings of amateur coaches.

Leahy played center and tackle for two years on the Irish's undefeated eleven from 1928 to 1930. Prior to his coming to State he was line coach at Georgetown university, a position he accepted on graduation filled with the knowledge imparted by the late great Knute Rockne.

Paradoxically, it is said that Leahy learned most of his skill in bed, for it was while he was lying in Mayo Clinic with a broken knee, a room partner of Rockne's, that the Wizard Norwegian revealed to him the wealth of football strategy for which the latter was famous. Young Leahy went out to his first coaching job with more of Rockne's secrets than has any other man. He will be a valuable Crowley assistant.

committee is elected by the rank and file of members. Any graduate or former student having completed one term's work may become a member of the association by contributing a minimum of $2.50 to the Annual Alumni Fund. This, of course, includes the alumni magazine for one year.

Like many other institutions, alumni associations have developed in response to assist graduates and their Alma Mater in social, moral, and material progress.

We have assumed that our graduates give universal prestige to Michigan State. Nevertheless, in these get-acquainted months of the fall, amid football games and informal gatherings of old chums, we invite a broader participation in enlarging our alumni institutional consciousness.

Exhibiting its tons of prize-winning, blue-blooded horse flesh at the Michigan State fair in Detroit, Ohio State fair, Saginaw county fair, and the international livestock show this summer, the College added materially to the many ribbons and trophies won in recent years. Ralph Hudson, '07, was in charge of the livestock exhibit.

Campus old-timers are watching with anxiety the condition of the pine tree ridge behind Demonstration hall, where a crowded planting is beginning to kill off a fair share of State's tree population. Planted in 1914 by Thomas Gunson the pine grove has since been one of the beauty spots of the Campus. Eighteen years ago Gunson and a friend, aided by three students, planted 19,000 seedlings in one day on a hitherto uncultivated sand dune in an effort to check the "sand storms" that used to sweep the Campus in a high wind. Nearly six acres were beautified that day, and though the stadium and subsequent road-building has cut that area, still the spot stands as one unique on American campuses.

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

My dear Mr. Stewart:

I would like to express my deep appreciation of the honor conferred upon me by the alumni of Michigan State college in extending to me honorary Life Membership in their Association.

It is a tribute of which I am very proud to have been deemed worthy, and I thank you all.

Loyally yours,

LINDA E. LANDON.

September 7, 1932.

A recent issue of the Science magazine contains the following paragraph: "Engineers who two centuries ago first attempted to master the Mississippi river, should have begun at Cairo, Illinois, where the lower Mississippi begins, and not near New Orleans, where the river reaches the Gulf of Mexico, it appears from a report by Professor Floyd Nagler of the University of Iowa. If engineers had started at Cairo with their dikes and levees and proceeded down-stream, the folly of trying to exclude the Mississippi from all the surrounding plain would have been apparent. As it was, he states, they began at the river's mouth and a full century of argument has been required to demonstrate conclusively that the Father of Waters must have several outlets into the gulf. The problem, Nagler concludes, has been made one of flood protection where it should be one of flood passage." This is an excerpt from "Mastering the Mississippi," an address by Mr. Nagler at an evening meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in New Orleans, last December. Nagler recently was appointed director of the

IN MEMORIAM

ALBERT EUGENE BULSON, 1888

ALBERT EUGENE BULSON, '88, was born December 16, 1867, at Chicago, Illinois, and died July 17, 1932, at his home, 406 West Berry street, Fort Wayne, Indiana.

After leaving this institution he received his M. D. degree from Rush Medical college and did post graduate work in Philadelphia, New York, and Europe. He had practiced his specialty, ophthalmology and otolaryngology, in Fort Wayne, since 1892. In his work he became eminent and possessed an unusually large clientele.

Of late years Dr. Bulson held a professorship in the Indiana University School of Medicine and since 1928 headed the department of ophthalmology. As a practitioner, writer and teacher, he was easily a leader. He had had fourteen years' experience as editor of the Fort Wayne Medical magazine when, on December 15, 1907, he accepted the editorship of The Journal of the Indiana State Medical association. He continued in this position until his death.

His business associates accorded him honors of distinguished service for his unusual clarity and vigor of statement in dealing with medical politicians. He accepted no advertising for his magazine except of the highest order and devoted his life to arousing the medical profession of Indiana to an understanding of its right to scientific freedom.

He was a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity and many other clubs and professional organizations.
