State Board To Assume Burden Of Financing Record, Sent To Every Graduate

In this, the first Record issue of the year, the State Board of Agriculture, administrative officers, and faculty of Michigan State College wish to extend cordial greetings to all alumni. We seek a continuance of those fine cooperative relationships which have existed in the past, and which the best interests of the institution require in the future.

Hitherto, the Michigan State College Record had been published by the Alumni Association, subsidized financially from the College treasury and distributed only to a paid subscription list. This list last year reached only about twenty-five per cent of the graduates of the College—some twenty-five hundred out of a total of nearly ten thousand. On July 1, 1935, because the income of the alumni office had fallen so considerably during the depression, the Board assumed responsibility for the financing of all alumni office activities. The Record is, therefore, to be issued under the direction of the Department of Publications and Journalism and to be distributed to all graduates free of charge.

* * *

For financial and other good reasons, it was decided to issue the Record this first year in the form of a quarterly, with the editions appearing just following the close of the football season, after Farmers' Week, at the opening of the spring term, and at Commencement time in June. If this experiment proves successful, the publication may be extended to nine issues throughout the college year.

President R. S. Shaw

In taking this step it was the purpose of the administration to establish a more closely-knit relationship between the College and all of its graduates and to eliminate the unpleasant activities involved necessarily in the maintenance of a paid subscription list. The Record will act in a large measure as a news-agency, taking the College and its activities out to all members of the great Michigan State College family.

* * *

Under the new set-up, Alumni Secretary Glen Stewart, has been called upon to assume additional administrative duties and is this year largely responsible for the administration of NYA funds, which have assumed considerable proportions. A major portion of Mr. Stewart's time is being devoted to alumni secretarial work, and at the present time he is also assisting those issuing the Record, since the department is bearing a heavy burden because of Professor Nelson's death.

* * *

Responsibility for the Alumni Recorder has been delegated to the Registrar of the College, but the records and files are being maintained and continued in Mr. Stewart's office. It is not the intention in any way to curtail the normal activities of the Alumni Secretary in his relations with off-campus organizations.

* * *

All of these shifts in organization, as well as other changes which have taken place since July 1 and are mentioned elsewhere in this issue, have presented intricate problems which are not likely to reappear when all readjustments are made. During the transition period we hope the alumni may be patient and cooperative, to the end that the experiments now in progress may be supplanted by a very definite and effective program.

Michigan State Pays Tribute To John Farrell Macklin By Naming Gridiron In His Honor At Homecoming

John Farrell Macklin, who distinguished himself as an athletic coach at Michigan State College more than twenty years ago, returned to the campus on Saturday, November 9, to participate in the dedication of the Spartan stadium in his honor. Macklin Field, as the gridiron will be known in the future, was thronged with a capacity crowd of enthusiastic fans and alumni who came to pay tribute to the State eleven and to the man, credited with having put the college teams on a national rating two decades ago.

Macklin, who arrived in East Lansing on a special train with his family and many friends from Philadelphia, made his first appearance before the student body at a convocation in the college gymnasium. Here he was officially welcomed by administrative officials of the school and local athletes who had played under his direction in the days of the "Fighting Aggie" teams.

The dedication was marked by an impressive ceremony between halves of the Marquette-Michigan State Homecoming football game. Provided with a military setting by one of the local R. O. T. C. units and the college military band, Macklin was presented with the key to the college. Speaking through a public address system from the center of the gridiron, the chairman of the program, "Pete" Bancroft, of Lansing, introduced President Robert S. Shaw, who officially christened the field.

"In naming the College stadium, 'Macklin Field,'" said President Shaw, "the State Board of Agriculture desires to honor John Farrell Macklin for his achievements as a distinguished athlete, coach, and exponent of the worth of athletic training as preparation for after-college activities."

At a signal from the President a large tablet, with the new name upon it, was unveiled at the north end of the field, and Macklin was greeted with a great ovation as he stepped before the microphone.

"I am not unappreciative of the high honor conferred upon me in naming this field for me," he said. "It means that my name will be connected with this grand, old institution and written upon the annals of her history for all time to come. This fact, together with what we are witnessing today, would stir the deepest feeling of gratitude of any one."

After congratulating the institution upon its development, academically as well as athletically, Macklin concluded, "I have always loved football and college athletics generally. If I have rendered a worthy service in this field of activity to our great College, and have contributed anything to the proud position which she has attained, I am thankful and happy.

"I want you to know that I deeply appreciate the recognition of my services here. This for me is a great day, and my memory will recall it with sincere gratitude all the days of my life."

Following the game, Macklin was feted at a banquet at the Hotel Olds in Lansing. L. L. Frimodig, assistant athletic director at Michigan State and a member of Macklin teams, was chairman of the affair. Guests included, in addition

Enrollment Reaches 4,005 Mark

Represents An Increase Of 45.1 Per Cent In a Two-Year Period And 20 Per Cent Over Figures Of One Year Ago

The enrollment of Michigan State College broke all records this fall when the rush of students registering brought the attendance to four thousand and five, with more than four hundred short course latecomers not included.

"Twelve hundred and forty-five more students are on State's campus today than two years ago," declared President R. S. Shaw in discussing the enormous increase before the alumni Homecoming crowd. This increase of 45.1 per cent in a two-year period is more remarkable in view of statistics of enrollment increases in other large colleges in various parts of the country.

In thirty-four eastern colleges an increase of only 3.1 per cent is noted over last year. In twelve institutions of higher learning in the south the average gain was 7.7 per cent and in twenty-two western schools, 10.6 per cent. The average for all those colleges is 6.6 per cent while Michigan State stands out with a net gain of 20 per cent over last fall.

President Shaw has lately pointed out several factors which he believes to be responsible for Michigan State's growing popularity. Among those cited were the following: "The 'A' rating granted the College by the American Association of Universities and Colleges and the recognition of the College by the American Association of University Women; lower educational costs than at many larger institutions; the beauty of the campus; the success of State's athletic teams, and the general acceptance that Michigan State is the friendliest college on the North

Dedication Program

For alumni who cherish memories of the colorful "Aggie" teams, whose performances during the Macklin era brought national fame to Michigan State College; and for those who can still remember vividly the frenzied scenes following Spartan victories over the Wolverines back in '13 and '15, the Publications Department is offering a limited number of dedication programs, published, especially, for Homecoming Day.

The offer includes not only the souvenir program loaded with pictures of the old days at "M. A. C.", but also includes a program of the Michigan State-Marquette University game, with photos of the season's stars, the band, and statistics of both teams.

Both programs will be wrapped in a cellophane envelope and mailed postpaid for twenty-five cents. Money and requests should be sent immediately to the Michigan State College Record and orders will be filled while the supply lasts.

American continent."

The liberal arts division leads in the number of students registered, with eight hundred and thirty-seven, of which four hundred and eighty-three are co-eds. In second place is the engineering school, with five hundred and sixty-three students, followed by the home economics division with five hundred and thirty-three. Thirty-seven are enrolled in the new police administration course added to the curriculum this fall. Out of fifty-seven in the hotel administration course, five are women students.

to the Marquette coaching staff, many former athletes who starred under the direction of Macklin.

Macklin, the first coach who put Michigan State College into the athletic limelight, made an impressive record. In 1911, his initial year on the campus, he developed a powerful team which climaxed the season with only one defeat. In 1912, the team duplicated this performance, and in 1913, for the first time in Spartan history, the home team conquered its most bitter rivals—"Hurry Up" Yost's University of Michigan squad. Continuing its winning streak, the State eleven conquered Wisconsin the following week and finished its season undefeated, for the only time in the football history of Michigan State College.

The Wolverines came back in 1914 to nose out the Spartans, 3-0, but in 1915 the "Aggies," as they were then known, again trounced Michigan soundly, 24-0.

To Macklin must go much credit for developing the athletic plant for which the institution is famous.

The 1935 Homecoming celebration was one of those affairs at which too many things happened too rapidly on too many different fronts for any one person to have experienced all of them.

With preliminary attractions well under way, the curtain on the main act—the dedication of the stadium as Macklin Field—was raised at a convocation Friday forenoon as more than two thousand five hundred students filled every available place in the gymnasium to welcome John Farrell Macklin, of Philadelphia, back to Michigan State. The hour's program was climaxed with Mr. Macklin's interesting review of athletics at the College from 1911 to 1916.

A radio broadcast, group dinners, and finally a pre-game pep meeting and smoker at the Downey Hotel in honor of Macklin were well staged and directed by L. L. Frimodig, general chairman, and his assistants.

WKAR's special Homecoming broadcast Saturday noon from the lobby of the Union Building was adapted from the inquiring reporter type of program. Prominent alumni were selected around the Union lobby by Secretary Stewart, and the announcer popped questions at Mark "Stacey" Griggs, '14, of Texas; Saul Semenow, '16, of Pittsburgh; W. G. Knickerbocker, '16, of Detroit; Ruth Simmons James, '28, and Louis Snider, '30, of Flint; Warren "Deak" Atkinson, '31, of Huntington, Indiana, Keats Vining, '13, of Grand Rapids, and others.

man's Spartans and Coach Frank Murray's Hilltoppers of Marquette University took the main ring before 18,000 fans. The game, itself, was sensational and spectacular, with the cash customers gasping for air as fleet backs tore up the traditional turf until the final whistle, ending the battle in Marquette's favor, 13-7.

The testimonial banquet for Mr. Macklin at the Olds Hotel Saturday evening was well attended by alumni varsity men who played during the 1911 to 1916 regime of the honored guest. Norm O. Weil, '17, of New York City, was toastmaster of the evening and presented an interesting group of after-dinner speakers. Mr. Macklin was the recipient of a wooden block "S" and sash from the student Varsity Club, represented by Sid Wagner, M. S. C.'s All-American guard candidate, a white football, autographed by the coaches and entire squad, came from the hands of Charlie Bachman, and the "Distinguished Service Award," given to former Coach Macklin by George "Carp" Julian, '15, later referred to by Macklin as "one of the greatest fullbacks who ever donned football togs at this college," came from the Alumni Varsity Club.

Professor Albert H. Nelson Dies

His Duties Included Head Of The Journalism And Publications Department And Director Of Summer Session

Professor Albert H. Nelson, 43, head of the department of publications, director of the summer session, and professor of journalism at Michigan State College, died at his home in East Lansing, October 18, after an extended illness.

Professor Nelson, whose many duties ranged from planning publicity for college functions to aiding rural students in the writing of news stories, served Michigan State for sixteen years, having come to the college following his discharge from the army after the War.

After receiving a grade school education in his birthplace, Wolcott, Indiana, Mr. Nelson enrolled in Wabash College in the same state in 1909, and earned his bachelor's degree in 1913. A member of Phi Beta Kappa, he continued with graduate work at the same school and in the spring of 1914 received his master of arts degree.

Professor Nelson's first teaching position came late in 1914 when he was engaged as an English instructor at Oklahoma A. and M. College. The outbreak of the World War ended his teaching career temporarily. Before his first year of teaching ended he enlisted in the 33rd Division of the A. E. F. as a private.

After obtaining his honorable discharge from the army in 1919 with the rank of sergeant, he resumed his teaching duties, but this time at Michigan State College where he joined the staff of the department of English, and soon attained the title of assistant professor. During his service with this department he was often called upon to assume the duties of head of the division in the absence of Professor W. W. Johnston.

College training in journalism and experience gained through summer employment on the staff of the Worcester Telegram in Massachusetts brought about the transfer of Mr. Nelson to the department of publications in 1929, when he became associate professor of journalism and assumed many duties in connection with college publicity and bulletins. In February of the same year the State Board of Agriculture added the direction of the summer session to the rapidly growing list of activities. Under Professor Nelson's guidance the school developed into a well-known summer educational center.

In December, 1932, Professor Nelson was given complete charge of the publications department, serving as acting head. The duties of this position were many and detailed, including, in addition to all classes in journalism, the publication of college booklets and bulletins and supervision of all student publications. An act of the State Board in 1934 conferred upon Mr. Nelson the official title of head of the department of publications.

Along with his departmental responsibilities, Professor Nelson was named to many important faculty and administration committees, including the committees on Fraternities and Sororities, Admissions, Farmers' Week, and Radio.

During his teaching career at Michigan State College he became a member of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism. He was affiliated with the William Riker Post of the American Legion in East Lansing, and for many years held the position of historian.

She Inspired Her Students

Ruth Young Johnston, assistant professor of history, died on July 5, 1935, at the Ford Hospital in Detroit, as the result of a thyroid operation. Miss Johnston first joined the history department as an instructor in the modern European field in the fall of 1928, after receiving the master of arts degree at the University of Michigan. A year later she was promoted to an assistant professorship. She brought to her profession a boundless enthusiasm and a dynamic personality which proved to be a great inspiration to her classes and to all with whom she was associated.

Her keen interest in young people, which was one of her most outstanding characteristics, led her to play a prominent role in campus enterprises. For three years she served on the committee which Marking the first time that a U. S. Cabinet member had ever appeared on the Student Lecture Course, Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, spoke before a capacity crowd of students in Demonstration Hall, October 17. Included among many notables to be heard on this year's series will be Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, who will appear here in January.

In spite of the fact that fraternity rushing began rather slowly this year because of the greatly increased enrollment, more than two hundred and forty pledges were reported by the 19 fraternities at the end of the first week of school. The Hesperian society led with thirty-one neophytes.

Dr. Fred T. Mitchell, new dean of men at Michigan State, will have his hands full this year unless the confident freshmen and the outnumbered sophomores reach an amicable understanding soon. The question of frosh pots this year resulted in a revival of class battles on the campus, after a peaceful interlude of nearly three years.

Miss Margaret Bryant, Battle Creek, a senior in the liberal arts division, was chosen by advance military students to act as honorary colonel in the R. O. T. C. cadet corps for the coming year. Co-ed sponsors chosen by the individual units are as follows: Miss Lucille Rovick, Detroit, cavalry; Miss Grace Smith, Niles, infantry; Miss Kay Woodlock, Lansing, artillery; and Miss Dorothy DeLay, Neodosh, Kansas, band.

The ninth annual performance of "A Canticle of Praise," a commemoration of the forty-eight Michigan State College students who lost their lives in the World War, was presented on Sunday, November 10. The military and music departments cooperated in this ceremony.

When the Spartan football team journeyed to Philadelphia this fall to face "Pop" Warner's undefeated Temple eleven, it was accompanied by the eighty-five piece varsity band. This marked the first time that the band had travelled by train to out-of-state football games since the trip to Georgetown University in 1930.

Plans are already under way for the 1936 Farmers' Week to be held on the campus February 3-7. The committee in charge expects the attendance to exceed that of last year when more than twenty thousand people visited the school.

Michigan State's varsity debate team engaged in its first intersectional debate in many years when it faced speakers from Cambridge College of London, England, this fall. Don Hittle and Don O'Hara, both of East Lansing, represented the local team.

According to the honor roll for the last two terms, as released recently by the attendance office, scholastic averages at Michigan State have increased considerably during the last year. Three hundred and twenty-seven students were granted unlimited cut privileges for having "B" averages for the last two terms, as compared to two hundred and eighty-five last year.

For the first time in the history of the newspaper, the Michigan State News, campus bi-weekly, published an eight-page edition to celebrate Homecoming week-end.

The Union Memorial Building, now operated by the College, is in the process of completion. Work was begun during the summer months and new offices on the first floor have already been finished. The third floor has been converted into a dormitory for women students, and workmen are busy in the basement installing a new cafeteria. The space occupied by the old cafeteria will be used as a men's lounge. A more complete account of other building improvements will appear in the next issue of the Record.

Six Victories . . . Two Defeats

Continuing to travel along the high road of the major college football world, the 1935 eleven at Michigan State College won attention in all parts of the country not only defeating strong rivals but by performing in spectacular and effective fashion. When the season came to a close at Los Angeles on November 16, the team had rung up six victories out of eight games on a schedule that Coach Charles W. Bachman and his assistants rated the strongest they had ever faced.

The high points of the season were the victories over the University of Michigan and Temple University. When the schedule was first announced last winter Coach Bachman declared that the most difficult spots to pass would be these two teams.

"We accomplished our two major objectives in defeating Michigan and Temple," Coach Bachman observed with a great deal of satisfaction, "and that's a good deal. I feel that the team did its best at all times. We have regrets for our two defeats, of course, but on looking back I don't see that we made any mistakes in preparing for those games we lost."

The State team was one that won high praise in many of its games. In fact, no more glowing compliments have ever been paid a Spartan eleven since the days of John Macklin and his teams' great accomplishments than were accorded the 1935 team. Even in defeat, the players not only gave a good accounting of themselves but actually over-shadowed their opponents in advancing the ball, a feature that is always satisfying to a team's followers.

You Really Should Know Him

Charles W. Bachman Is Recognized Nationally As a Great Coach . . . Has Attained An Enviably Record At State

A little more than three years ago, when the Michigan State College Athletic Board was searching for a man to take the place of Jimmie Crowley as head coach of the Spartans, reports came from the Everglades of Florida about a coach who was performing wonders with the football situation at the University of Florida. This man was contacted by Michigan State leaders, and not long after that Charles W. Bachman began working on his first Spartan gridiron team.

In his three years on the campus along the Red Cedar, his elevens won eighteen games, lost five, and tied two. His best year was in 1934 when he won eight out of nine starts. In 1933 his squad won four, lost two, and tied two. This season the Spartans won six and lost two. At the start of the 1935 campaign, Bachman was accorded the honor of being elected as coach for the All-Stars in the annual game against the Chicago Bears. He ran second in that poll.

Charlie, as his colleagues call him, was born in Chicago, December 1, 1892. He was graduated from Englewood High School in Chicago and received the degree in Law at Notre Dame in 1917. While at Notre Dame he was chosen All-Western guard in 1914 and 1916. In 1915 he played at the fullback position. He won three monograms in football and three in track. He held the world record discus throw in 1917 and was captain of the track team in 1916 and 1917.

When his college days were over he entered the navy, and was stationed at the Great Lakes Training Station at Chicago. He played center on the Great Lakes team and was chosen on the All-Service eleven at that position.

He was granted leave from the Training Station to attend his duties as assistant coach at DePauw University in 1917. After being honorably discharged from the service in 1918, he accepted the position as head coach at Northwestern University. He remained there one year, and then took a similar position at Kansas State College, Manhattan, Kansas. After eight years at that college he resigned and became head coach at the University of Florida in 1928. The Spartans brought him to East Lansing from Florida in 1932.

There is no coach in the country who takes his job more seriously than does Bachman. Football is his entire life. He is a tireless reader of newspapers and magazines for which he has written articles on football technique. Even when the campus is deserted during the mid-summer months, he makes daily visits to his office and transacts business.

During Bachman's eighteen years of coaching, his elevens won eighty games, lost forty-nine, and tied ten. He has a winning percentage of .672 during his coaching career.

directs student activities at the Peoples Church, of which she was a member. She was also a patroness of Alpha Chi Omega Sorority and an adviser of the Spartan Women's League. Her broad knowledge of contemporary affairs made her a valuable contributor to the work of the International Relations Club.

Her faculty interests and associations were equally important. She was a member of the American Association of University Women, conducting for about three years that organization's study class in international relations. She was also identified with the American Association of University Professors, having been elected vice president of the local chapter for the current year.

These Boys Know How To Run

For The Third Consecutive Year Spartan Harriers, Coached By L. P. Brown, Have Won The I. C. 4 A. Title

The cross-country team of Michigan State College again proved its supremacy over eastern and mid-western rivals by winning for the third consecutive year the IC4A title at a run held at VanCortlandt Park in New York City on November 18. Although considered early in the season inferior to the squad that finished first for the last two years, Coach Lauren P. Brown's Spartans, led by Captain Edward Bechtold, captured five out of the first eleven places, and set a new mark for individual honors.

Bechtold, a senior, led the entire field from start to finish and crossed the line far ahead of his nearest rival in the excellent time of 26 minutes and 23 seconds. Kenneth Waite, a promising sophomore, made his debut on the eastern course by taking third place for the Spartans, and Nelson Gardner, a veteran runner, placing sixth. Boss, Green, Sparks, and Wright, all sophomores, rated ninth, eleventh, fourteenth, and fifteenth.

Minus the services of Tom Ottey, a national star for three years, the State team was given little chance to repeat its record of previous years, but the fine performance of Captain Bechtold, and the excellent form shown by the sophomores, enabled them to retain the national honor.

In the first dual meet of the season the Spartan harriers captured four out of the first six places to beat Butler University at Indianapolis, Indiana, and on the following weekend they handed the Notre Dame team a 15-44 defeat.

Losing to Indiana University in the next meet, State dropped its first dual meet in three years. Indiana, however, boasts one of the strongest individual teams in the Mid-West, and is especially hard to beat in dual matches. The Spartans will have a chance to even the score with the Hoosier runners when they come to East Lansing for the Central Inter-collegiate meet.

Captain Bechtold, Waite, and Gardner swept the first three positions in the state meet held this fall to add the state title to their honors. Bechtold staged somewhat of an upset in this meet by placing far ahead of the favorite, Zepp, of Michigan Normal. After having dropped out of this meet for fifteen years, the Spartans again entered in 1933 and have won each meet since.

Football Banquet December 14

First in line of the large social meetings of this year's winter season is the annual football banquet to be held at the College on Saturday evening, December 14. Arthur Hurd, '09, Lansing, has announced that the Central Michigan Alumni Club, in cooperation with the Lansing Junior Chamber of Commerce, will attempt to make this spectacular tradition one of the most successful of its kind in the Middle West.

Directing the work of all committees is B. R. "Bunny" Proulx, '17, professor of hotel administration at the College. Headlining the list of speakers will be the sports editor of one of Chicago's leading daily newspapers.

He Finds Work For Students

That's Glen O. Stewart's Job In Administering The N. Y. A. Program, In Addition To His Alumni Activities

The task of this year's National Youth Administration program was added to the many duties of Glen O. Stewart, alumni secretary, when he moved into his new quarters in the Union Building this fall. This work, in addition to the arranging of alumni meetings to care for the Spartan football team on its many trips, made Stewart's office one of the busiest spots on the campus during the first weeks of the term.

Replacing the FERA of last year, the National Youth Administration program now specifies that students receiving its financial help must be selected on the basis of need, character, ability, and attendance status. Before the beginning of the term, a preliminary selection was made from the one thousand four hundred and fifty applications of new students. The selection of students previously registered was referred to a faculty committee for advice as to character and ability.

Tasks which were left unfinished for several years due to lack of funds have now been assigned to these student workers who are rapidly becoming important cogs in the gear-wheels of the various departments. Many large projects which require real ability and concentration have been planned by professors in addition to the routine work of filing, clipping, map making, and correcting of papers.

This year the four hundred and five students who are employed were selected on the basis of 12 per cent of the college enrollment in 1934. The $6,300 available each month to the college for this project is being divided among the young men and young women at $10 to $20 a month, depending on the applicant's need. Of this amount $5,880 will go to undergraduates and $420 will go to graduate workers. Time and efficiency records are kept for each individual and tabulated each week by the official NYA timekeeper, Robert Terlaak, '34, of the business office staff.

The students declare that the small amount they earn each month is actually the difference between their own resources and the amount required to continue their school work. A sophomore writing to the NYA office said, "I can't tell you how happy I am this year. I want to thank you for this opportunity to earn $15 a month. It pays half my board and room expense."

would have added to the durability, the team would probably have swept through its schedule without a defeat. Throughout the year the Spartans were, in at least one respect, the wonders of the football world. Expert observers marvelled that a team so light (183 pounds in the line and 162 in the backfield) could play such strong rivals and emerge the winner. Opponents out-weighed State's team as much as thirty-five pounds to the man.

The team depended on speed, sharp blocking, a well-concealed offense, perfect timing and a golden-hearted defense. Built with fine but frailer materials than most of their opponents, the Spartans were bound to have their edge battered down on a few occasions.

That was exactly what happened at Boston and to a lesser extent, perhaps, in the Marquette defeat. The team simply was unable to retain its keen cutting edge week after week. Once sharpened, as it most certainly was at Ann Arbor and Philadelphia, it could cut its way through any opponent.

It was, as one newspaper writer observed, a team that could make "the greatest in the nation look shoddy." It had that superb ability to rise to the heights on one or two occasions. No rival could meet its fury successfully. Kansas, a team that later went on to give a shining account of itself against strong rivals, was humbled, 42 to 0.

Outstanding in the line, of course, was Sidney P. Wagner, the great guard. He is one of seven men, starting all the games this fall, who are through with college football. Coach Bachman loses his winning combination. He will have back only Gordon Dahlgren, guard; Howard Zindel, tackle; Julius Sleder, tackle; and Arthur Brandstatter, fullback, from his first choice eleven. Joseph Buzolits, center; Louis Zarza and Robert Allmann, ends; Kurt Warmbein, left halfback; Dick Colina, quarterback; and Richard Edwards, right halfback, are finished. Colina and Warmbein have been stellar members of State's backfields for three seasons. Zarza has played regularly for the same period.

The point total this year was one of the highest in history. State averaged twenty-six points to the opponents' seven in the eight games. Another feature of the season was the appearance of a strong second team, which, on three occasions, proved even more effective than the starting eleven. This would seem to auger well for the future, although there are many examinations between this year's successes and the 1936 schedule.

Engineer . . . Scientist . . . Author

Those Epithets Were Attached To Dr. Louis G. Carpenter, '79, Who Died Recently At His Home In Denver

An internationally known engineer, scientist, author, and educator, Dr. Louis G. Carpenter, 74, a graduate and later a faculty member of Michigan Agricultural College (now Michigan State College), died in Denver, Colorado, September 12.

Born at Orion, Michigan, of a family which originally owned Providence, R. I., Dr. Carpenter rose to international fame in Colorado, where he became known as the "father of scientific irrigation in Colorado."

Dr. Carpenter became famous not only for his research and experimentation in scientific irrigation, but also for his teaching ability. He was responsible for the organization of the first systematic instruction in irrigation engineering and investigation in the United States. He became state engineer of Colorado, professor of engineering and physics in the Colorado State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, director of the Colorado Experiment Station, and an irrigation expert for the United States Department of Agriculture.

Dr. Carpenter received his education in Michigan. He entered Michigan Agricultural College at the age of fifteen, taught country schools during the winter vacations and was graduated as a bachelor of science in 1879, at the age of eighteen. He was a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Continuing his studies in engineering, Dr. Carpenter received the master of science degree from Michigan Agricultural College in 1883, following which he did post graduate research at the University of Michigan and Johns Hopkins University. He was awarded the degree of engineering by his Alma Mater in 1927.

In 1881, Dr. Carpenter became an instructor of mathematics at Michigan Agricultural College, under his brother, Rollo C. Carpenter. He later became assistant professor, serving in this capacity until 1888, when he became a professor of engineering and physics at the Colorado State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. He held this position until 1911.

From 1893 to 1895, Dr. Carpenter was president of the American Society of Engineers. He served as vice president of the American Association of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations during 1900.

France awarded Dr. Carpenter the ribbon and order of Chevalier du Merite Agricole in 1895. Gold medals were also bestowed upon him at the Paris exposition in 1900 and at the Portland exposition, held later.

A noted linguist, Dr. Carpenter made numerous translations of the writings of Leonardo Da Vinci. He owned what is said to be the most complete collection of Da Vinci first editions in the United States.

Dr. Carpenter's research brought him into contact with famous scholars from all parts of the world. Especially was he known to French scholars, and he was signally honored by a personal visit from Marshal Foch, who sought out Dr. Carpenter when he was in Denver in 1921.

Dr. Carpenter married Mary J. C. Merrill, librarian at Michigan Agricultural College in 1887. Two children were born to them, a son, Captain Charles L., who died in 1933, and a daughter, Mrs. Roe Emery, of Denver.

Following the death of his first wife, Dr. Carpenter married, in 1922, Katherine M. Warren of Philadelphia, who, with the daughter, Mrs. Emery, and a brother and three sisters, survives him.

Tau Beta Pi Holds Convention

The Michigan State College Chapter of Tau Beta Pi, national honorary engineering fraternity, was host to the Fiftieth Annual Convention of that organization held on the campus, October 11 and 12.

Three prominent Michigan State Alumni were initiated into the organization at a model ceremony. Those installed by the local organization were: Frank F. Rogers, '83, retired State Highway Commissioner; Oliver D. Dales, w'04, Chief Engineer in Charge of Construction for the Niagara Power Company; and Benjamin H. Anibal, '09, Chief Engineer of the Pontiac Motor Company.

Gifts Presented To College

- Include Moving Picture Camera . . .
- Large Sums Of Money For Research . .
- Additions To Michigan State Library

Among the most recent additions to Michigan State College equipment is a modern moving picture camera donated to the school by Mrs. Alfred Wilson, member of the State Board of Agriculture. In all, seven gifts have been officially accepted by the College since June 1, according to reports from the office of Secretary John A. Hannah.

The sum of $2,500 was appropriated to the Bacteriology Department from the Horace H. Rackham and Mary A. Rackham Fund, to be set up as Rackham Fund Number 2 and to be used for the study of brucellosis at Eloise State Hospital. A grant of $1,000 was accepted from the estate of LaVerne Noyes, to be allotted in the form of tuition to needy students who fulfill the following conditions:

1. Shall themselves have served in the army or navy of the United States during the World War, and have been honorably discharged, or
2. Shall be descended by blood from someone who served in the army or navy of the United States in this war, who either is still in this service or whose service has been terminated by death or an honorable discharge.

The fund of the Michigan State College band was swelled by a cash gift from the Lansing Commandery, Knights Templar, for services rendered by that organization at a state-wide conclave in Flint last spring. A set of books on wild life which will complete the series now in the possession of the College Library was donated by W. K. Kellogg of Battle Creek. The gift consists of six volumes of "Birds and

"Trees of North America," by Rex Brasher.

As a memorial to the late Miss Anna Bayha of the Home Economics department, the Lansing Zonta Club has donated a sum of money to be used over a period of years, as an award to the junior Home Economics student who attains the highest standing among those girls earning their own maintenance.

For use in repairing the class memorial on the campus, the College received a check from the Class of 1900.

Michigan State On The Air

Bringing you Spartan sports events, music of the band, current news of the campus, and the voices of your former professors, WKAR, the broadcasting service of Michigan State College, keeps you informed of all happenings on the banks of the Red Cedar. The

WKAR, with an enlarged and diversified program, has taken its place as one of the leading educational broadcasters. Courses are offered in Psychology, English Literature, Economics, Spanish, and Dramatic Production for those who wish to continue their interest in education. For high schools there is a course in Biology.

Many other educational features bring to the microphone prominent professors on the campus. There are broadcasts of special meetings and events, such as the Crime Conference of the State Crime Commission, Farmers' Week direct from the section meetings, and convocations.

Adequate reception is assured to the alumni through the improvement in equipment facilities of WKAR. A new transmitter of 1000 watts and a new vertical antenna are in operation. New microphones and studio equipment have been secured. The entire broadcasting facilities are completely modern.

Reports and letters from alumni and friends of the college have come from far flung sections of the state and from the neighboring states of Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, and Illinois, indicating that the station is reaching its listeners well.

As an added service, the station issues monthly a printed program containing the entire schedule. The program bulletin is mailed without charge to any listener who wishes it. Every alumnus within range of the transmitter should be on the mailing list. A card addressed to WKAR will bring this bulletin to you regularly.

Plans contemplated for the future include greatly expanded programs and a service which will keep alive your interest in Michigan State, if you tune in on your college regularly.

She Knows What Women Read

Knowing what farm women read and employ, and what to recommend to them—is a universal job for every household editor. It was natural for the management of the FARM JOURNAL, published in Philadelphia, to name Mary Ross Reynolds, with the class of '03, to the post of household editor when a reorganization took place, recently. Associated with Walter Pitkins, the new editor, Mrs. Reynolds has general charge of all editorial departments dealing with women's interests.

Mary Ross Reynolds has a familiarity and sympathy with farm life and conditions, for she was raised on a farm in Oakland County, Michigan. She has a thorough scientific training, having taken home economics here and been in touch constantly with home demonstration work ever since. She knows the government services, having been on the staff of the Department of Agriculture, worked on food conservation, clothing, child care, 4-H club work, and other similar activities.

Dr. Elliott Heads State Schools

Governor Frank Fitzgerald again turned to an alumnus of Michigan State for assistance when, after the untimely death of Dr. M. R. Keyworth, he announced the selection of Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, '24, as Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of Michigan.

Dr. E. B. Elliott

Elliott has been connected with the public schools of Michigan for the past ten years. He began his professional career as a teacher in the Lansing Public Schools, later resigning to accept the position of superintendent of schools at Ovid, Michigan.

After five years there he left to accept a research scholarship at the University of Michigan where he completed his work for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. This degree was granted in 1933 in the field of Administration and Supervision, after which he was engaged as Director of Research for the Michigan Education Association. During this period, in cooperation with the late Dr. Keyworth and others, he developed the present plan of distributing state aid to schools.

From July 1, 1933, to July 1, 1935, he was Director of Finance and Research in the State Department of Public Instruction. His publications include "The Supply of and Demand for Teachers in Michigan" as well as numerous printed articles on the financial situation facing Michigan Public Schools.

His Speciality Is Boat Racing

Hugh Burr Gunnison, '00, is today one of the most prominent men in sailing and power boating circles in the Great Lakes area. Until he was thirty-one years old, he knew almost nothing about boats. It was in 1906 while watching his first sweepstakes regatta that he was fired with a new enthusiasm, which still glows. He immediately became a member of the Detroit Yacht Club where his interest mounted.

H. B. Gunnison

Numerous offices have been held by Gunnison since that time, and dozens of trophies have been won by him at annual meets. For six years he has held an important post during the Harmsworth Trophy Race in Detroit. He has been chairman of the race course committee and will, when another challenger returns to compete for the British International Harmsworth Trophy, shoulder the responsibility of conducting the contest. He is a director of the Detroit Yacht Club.

Gunnison is a maintenance superintendent for the Substation Department of the Detroit Edison Company. He attended grade school and high school at DeWitt, Michigan, later graduating from the mechanical engineering department of the College. His father, J. Warren Gunnison, was a member of the class of 1866 and is the only living alumnus who was on the campus when the College was dedicated on May 13, 1857.

Dillman Is College President

Grover C. Dillman, '13, having served the State of Michigan in the State Highway Department for twenty years, and for two years as service director for the city of Grand Rapids, was a logical choice for the post of State Welfare Director when Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald made his appointments last January. But no sooner had Dillman acquainted himself with his new task when he was asked to assume the presidency of Michigan College of Mining and Technology, at Houghton, Michigan. He assumed his new duties at the start of the fall semester.

During Dillman's twenty years of service with the State Highway Department, he served as maintenance engineer for the Upper Peninsula, Deputy State Highway Commissioner, and finally State Highway Commissioner.

His position in the engineering field has been recognized by the work he has done as a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Michigan Engineering Society, Detroit Engineering Society, and several organizations of highway officials. He is a member of the Rotary Club and Tau Beta Pi.

Patriarchs

Patriarchs and other college friends will regret to learn that Ray Sessions, '79, passed away at his home in Grand Rapids on October 21. Mr. Sessions had been ill for the last five years with heart trouble. He loved the College and returned to its campus frequently; his last trip was on the occasion of '79's Golden Anniversary. He is survived by his widow.

George Grover, '81, city clerk of San Jacinto, California, sends word of the death of his classmate, Edward C. McKee, on August 23, in Glendale, California. Mr. Grover pays tribute to his friend in saying: "He was a splendid man and one of the finest characters I ever knew. In his death I have lost one of my dearest and most cherished friends." His widow survives him.

A truly beautiful life came to a close on September 2 when Emma Jane Davenport passed away at her home in Woodland, Michigan. As the wife of Eugene Davenport, she came into contact with hundreds of students, and these young people, as well as scores of faculty members, gained much from her rich and adequate philosophy of life.

1885

Harris E. Thomas, past president of the Alumni Association and a member of the Board of Directors, died at his home in Lansing on November 19. A more complete story of his life will appear in the next issue of the Michigan State College Record.

1891

Dr. Kenyon Leech Butterfield, president of Michigan State College from 1924 to 1927, died at his home in Asbury Park, New Jersey, on November 25. As this information reached the Publications office when the Record was going to press a detailed story of his life will appear in the next issue of the magazine.

Bayha Memorial

The April issue of the Michigan State College Record published an announcement of the plans in progress to place a memorial in the Home Economics Building to honor Anna E. Bayha, for many years a member of the Division of Home Economics at Michigan State College.

As the notice appeared at a time of year when alumnae may have been absorbed in vacation plans, another opportunity is being given to Michigan State College graduates who would like to contribute to the Anna E. Bayha Memorial.

Miss Julia Tear, chairman of the fund, states that the memorial will be selected as soon as the committee knows how much money will be available. The committee will welcome suggestions from the alumnae.

Any alumnae wishing to contribute one dollar or more should send it to Miss Julia Tear, Division of Home Economics.

1894

His friends and classmates will be shocked to learn of the sudden death on September 9 of Orel S. Groner, Professor of Chemistry at Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pennsylvania. Before going to Bucknell, Professor Groner had taught at Transylvania College in Kentucky, Ottawa University in Kansas, and at Grand Island College in Nebraska. He was regarded as one of the foremost teachers of chemistry in the country, and for many years his students have established enviable records, particularly in medical colleges.

1895

From Thorn Smith comes word that Henry Colquitt died at his home in Fort Myers, Florida, September 11. In 1921

Mr. Colquitt transferred his real estate interests from Michigan to Florida and became one of the best known men in that state. The funeral was held in Detroit on September 16.

Charles A. Gower passed away at his East Lansing home on October 13, following an illness of two years. For many years Mr. Gower was distributing agent for the Oldsmobile, having been first distributor in Lansing. Later he engaged in the same line of business for the Cadillac concern. Besides the widow, Hazel H. Gower, he is survived by four daughters and a sister.

1903

Charles M. Marshall took time out this summer to call at the Alumni Office on June 25, a bit too late for Alumni Day festivities. Marshall lives at 2108 S. Grand Avenue, Los Angeles, California, and is connected with the city humane department.

1907

Ferd Brucker dispenses legal advice to the Goodrich Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio.

Classmates and friends will be sorry to learn that Loren G. Rinkle died at his home in Kansas City, Missouri, on October 27. For a short time after receiving his master's degree from the University of Missouri, Mr. Rinkle taught dairying in that institution. He left Columbia to become food and dairy inspector in Kansas City. From Kansas City he went to Greensboro, North Carolina, to enter the creamery business, later returning to Kansas City in the same work. Surviving are his widow and two brothers.

Detroit Club

The Detroit Alumni Club will sponsor a benefit party, Friday evening, December 13, at the Intercollegiate Club, 13th floor of the Penobscot Building. W. G. Mr. Simpson had been engaged in landscape work for the government at Caleraine, Minnesota. Besides his widow, he is survived by his father, three brothers, and a sister.

The lovely gardens at the home of Professor and Mrs. C. E. Millar, of East Lansing, formed the setting for the wedding on August 12 of their daughter, Margaret, to George M. Welles, son of J. Sloat ('09) and Arvilla Voss (w'12) Welles, of Elmira, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Welles are at home in Jefferson City, Tennessee.

His many friends and classmates will be grieved to learn that Eugene B. Slater died on August 8 in Ford Hospital, Detroit, following a sinus operation. As student manager of last year's football team, Gene was well known and universally liked. He was a member of the Eclectic Society, Scabbard and Blade, Varsity Club, and Officers' Club. His parents and a brother survive.

Carrying On

Recently the State Board of Agriculture relieved M. S. C. Association of its bonded indebtedness on the Union Building, thus cancelling all building fund pledges. No Alumnus should feel, as some have in the past, that he should avoid using the Union for fear of being solicited for funds.

Although no amount has been set for dues, the income should be maintained and if possible increased. Contributions of one dollar or more are being received now, and only those who contribute may vote for officers next spring. Larger donations may be designated for specific purposes such as Alumni Student Loan Fund and the Endowment Fund.

Renewed interest in Alumni Club activities was created this fall because of the success of the football team and its coast to coast schedule. At Boston many loyal alumni enthusiasts, at their pep meeting on the evening preceding the game, had a chance to greet Coach Bachman, Secretary Stewart, and several other faculty men.

Alumni had the pleasure of greeting five State football coaches, three former ones, at the club meeting in Philadelphia where the Spartans played Temple. They were John Farrell Macklin, Frank Sommers, Art Barron, Ralph Young, and Charles Bachman. George Davis, '21, of The Saturday Evening Post, acted as host.

For the first time in Spartan history, Los Angeles Alumni played host to the State football team when it played Loyola. Russell Simmons, '18, directed the activities. In the words of John Hannah, secretary of the college, "Words cannot describe the splendid reception we received from the California alumni." For the game, State followers hired a band to play the Fight Song and the Alma Mater.
