Leland Keith Dewey, 1925

Leland K. Dewey, a major in the Army, died in a Japanese prison camp in the Philippine Islands on July 24, 1942. Major Dewey was graduated in engineering on June 22, 1925, entering from Cedar Springs, Michigan. He is survived by his wife, the former Dorothy Fisk, w'27, a son, a daughter, and his parents.

Delbert W. Swellander, 1946

Delbert W. Swellander, a private in the parachute infantry, was killed in action in Italy on March 4, 1944. Pvt. Swellander entered from Escanaba, Michigan, and was enrolled in hotel administration 1942-43.

Joel Burklund, Jr., 1943

Sgt. Joel Burklund, Jr., tail gunner on a Flying Fortress which failed to return from a mission April 11, 1944, over Poznan, Poland, now is listed as "presumed dead." Entering from Grand Rapids, Sgt. Burklund was enrolled in business administration 1939-40.

Duane Delbert Gruner, 1947

Duane D. Gruner, a private in the Army, died November 17, 1944, of wounds received in action in France. Pvt. Gruner was enrolled in general college the fall term of 1943, entering from Fenton, Michigan.

Leonard Wilbur Bond, 1944

Leonard W. Bond, a second lieutenant in the Army Air Forces, was killed in a plane crash in Scotland on December 10, 1944. Lt. Bond entered from St. Johns, Michigan, and was enrolled in agriculture during 1940-43.

Lorwyn Elwyn Peterson, 1930

Lorwyn E. Peterson, a lieutenant colonel in the Army, died January 23, 1945, in the Philippines, of wounds received while aiding the evacuation of wounded men under his command. He was posthumously awarded the Silver Star medal. Entering from Brooklyn, Michigan, Lt. Col. Peterson was graduated in business administration on June 23, 1930. He is survived by his wife, daughter, and parents.

Charles Robert Taylor, 1943

Charles R. Taylor, a second lieutenant in the Army Air Forces, was killed in action in France on January 28, 1945. Entering from Augusta, Michigan, Lt. Taylor was enrolled in business administration during 1939-40.

Parr Cline LaMonte, 1935

First Lieutenant Parr C. LaMonte, holder of the Silver Star and Purple Heart medals, was killed in action in France on January 29, 1945. Lt. LaMonte was graduated in agriculture on June 10, 1935, entering from Charlotte, Michigan.

Neil Douglas Graham, 1942

Neil D. Graham, a private in the Army, was killed in action in Germany on February 19, 1945. Entering from Concord, Michigan, Pvt. Graham was graduated in liberal arts on July 31, 1942. He is survived by his wife, the former Mary Louise Porter, w'44, and his parents.

John H. Spalink, Jr., 1944

John H. Spalink, Jr., a staff sergeant in infantry, was killed in action on Luzon Island in the Philippines on February 4, 1945. Entering from Grand Rapids, Michigan, Sgt. Spalink was enrolled in business administration during 1940-42.

James David Evans, 1941

James D. Evans, a private in the Army, died in a German prison camp on February 8, 1945, of pneumonia. Pvt. Evans was enrolled in agriculture during 1937-38, entering from Chase, Michigan.

George Catlin Thomas, 1946

George C. Thomas, an infantry private, was killed in action on Leyte on February 8, 1945. Enrolled in engineering during fall term of 1942, Pvt. Thomas entered from Detroit.

John Frederick Lake, 1945

John F. Lake, a second lieutenant in the Army Air Forces, was killed in action on Tinian Island on February 10, 1945. Lt. Lake was enrolled in engineering during 1941-43, entering from Gaylord, Michigan.

Francis F. Unland, 1946

Francis F. Unland, a private in infantry, was killed in action in Germany on February 23, 1945. Pvt. Unland entered from Detroit and was enrolled in business administration during 1942-43.

William Hugh Topham, 1945

William H. Topham, a private first class in the Marine Corps, was killed in action on Iwo Jima on February 25, 1945. Enrolled in forestry during 1941-42, Pfc. Topham entered from Saginaw and was the son of Bernard T. Topham, '13.

Theodore William Hart, 1941

Lt. Theodore W. Hart, holder of the Silver Star Medal, was killed in action in Germany on February 26, 1945. Lt. Hart was enrolled in hotel administration during 1937-38 and 1939-40, and entered from Detroit. He is survived by his wife and twin daughters and by his parents.

Alexander Borkowski, 1944

Capt. Alexander Borkowski, holder of the Bronze Star medal, died on February 27, 1945, of wounds received in action in Germany. Capt. Borkowski, who was a brother of Joseph Borkowski, '43, was enrolled in business administration during 1940-41. He entered from Grand Rapids.

Robert Lionel French, 1943

Robert L. French, a first lieutenant in the Army and holder of the Silver Star medal with cluster, was killed in action in Germany on February 28, 1945. Entering from Dearborn, Michigan, Lt. French was enrolled in applied science during 1939-43.

James Ross Patterson, 1942

James R. Patterson, a second lieutenant in the Army, was killed in an accident at Sheppard Field, Texas, on March 7, 1945. Entering from Grosse Ile, Michigan, Lt. Patterson was enrolled in forestry during 1938-39 and 1941-43. His wife and his mother survive.

Albert John Cepela, 1946

Albert J. Cepela, a private first class in the Army, was killed in action in France on March 7, 1945. Pfc. Cepela entered from Grand Rapids and was enrolled in engineering during 1942-43.

Chester F. Czajkowski, 1944

Lt. Chester F. Czajkowski, a B-24 pilot and holder of the Air Medal and the Purple Heart, was killed in action in the Pacific area on March 10, 1945. Lt. Czajkowski entered from Hamtramck and was enrolled as a sophomore in engineering during 1941-42.

Jack Chester Grant, 1945

Jack C. Grant, a second lieutenant in the Army, was killed in action in Germany on March 16, 1945. Lt. Grant was enrolled in business administration during 1941-43, entering from Grand Rapids.

Donald George Wilson, 1945

Donald G. Wilson, a first lieutenant in the Army Air Forces, was killed in action over Italy on March 16, 1945. Entering from Lansing, Lt. Wilson was enrolled in engineering during 1941-43.

Melvin Henry Hansens, 1946

Melvin H. Hansens, a private first class in the Army, was killed in action in France on March 17, 1945. Enrolled in the general college during 1942-43, Pfc. Hansens entered from East Lansing. He is survived by his parents, a sister, and three brothers, including Curtis G., '42, and Elton J., '38.

Kenneth Floyd Compson, 1945

Kenneth F. Compson, a first lieutenant in the Army Air Forces, died in Italy on March 18, 1945, of burns suffered two days earlier when the motors in his plane exploded as he was about to take off on a mission. Lt. Compson was enrolled in engineering during 1942-43, and entered from Flint.

Robert George Dyke, 1944

Robert G. Dyke, an infantry lieutenant, was killed in action in Germany on March 18. Entering from Detroit, Lt. Dyke was enrolled in engineering during 1940-44. He is survived by his wife and parents.

John Steve Solar, 1944

John S. Solar, a second lieutenant in the Army, was killed in action in Germany on March 18, 1945. Lt. Solar entered from Manistique, Michigan, and was enrolled in business administration during 1940-44.

Ward Burdett Brunner, 1946

E. Ward B. Brunner, a sergeant in the infantry, was killed in action in Germany on March 19, 1945. Entering from Detroit, Sgt. Brunner was enrolled in forestry during the fall and winter terms of 1942-43.

Herbert Seymour Geller, 1946

Herbert S. Geller, a second lieutenant in the 8th Air Force, was killed in action over England on March 19, 1945. Lt. Geller was enrolled in general college during the summer and fall of 1942, and entered from Detroit.

Harry Linn Martin, 1936

Harry L. Martin, a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps, was killed in action on Iwo Jima on March 26, 1945. Entering from Bucyrus, Ohio, Lt. Martin was graduated from business administration on July 31, 1936.

Commencement Highlights

Five hundred forty-four men and women, representing 53 Michigan counties and 16 other states, participated in Michigan State College's fourth wartime commencement exercises on June 9. Honorary degrees of doctor of engineering and doctor of science, respectively, were awarded to two former M.S.C. students, Albert H. Case, vice-president and general manager of the U. S. Phosphoric Products division of Tennessee corporation, Tampa, Florida, and Dr. Leon J. Cole, professor of genetics at the University of Wisconsin.

Two prominent educators were the speakers for graduation exercises. Dr. Franklyn B. Snyder, president of Northwestern university, delivered the commencement address, and the Reverend J. Hugh O'Donnell, president of the University of Notre Dame, spoke at the baccalaureate service Sunday afternoon, June 3.

Other commencement activities included President John A. Hannah's reception for the graduating class, May 31; senior play, "Pygmalion," June 1-2; Commencement Ball, June 2; College Sing, women's glee club and a cappella choir, June 3; Lantern Night, June 5; and senior picnic, June 6. Because of the war, all class reunions were eliminated except that of the Patriarchs' Club, which was held on June 9 in conjunction with the college's 87th annual commencement exercises.

Sixteen students were graduated "with high honor" and 84 "with honor." Many scholarships and prizes were announced.

Dr. Snyder declared that if the battle against the age-old foe of human happiness—ignorance of nature and stupidity in human relationships—is to be won, humanity must look for leadership to men and women who can think straight and act courageously, and who can lead in scientific research and in the attempt to work out a more satisfactory basis of international relations.

"Forget for a few moments the problems of 1945 and turn back with me nearly two centuries to the year 1758 when warfare held in its grip much of Europe and North America," the commencement speaker asked, and commented on the significance of the campaign centering around Fort Ticonderoga at the southern end of Lake Champlain where Montcalm and his French grenadiers were holding an important outpost in the heart of the English colonies.

For the third time in the history of Michigan State, women outnumbered men graduates. The turnabout occurred first in 1919, and again last year. Members of the 1945 class are shown in the auditorium at commencement exercises.

"From this outpost the British and Americans determined to drive their French opponents, and, consequently, the British gathered at Albany a force of nearly 16,000 men under the command of General Abercrombie which in July moved north to attack Ticonderoga," Dr. Snyder said in describing the campaign. "Seven times they charged on Montcalm's earthworks, and as many times they were driven back in defeat. By the evening of July 8 they had given up the attempt, and Abercrombie's army was in full retreat toward Albany."

Ignorance of nature and stupidity in human relations had lost the day for England, according to Dr. Snyder. He pointed out that the situation of 1758 was closely paralleled by that of 1945, and suggested that after the necessary military victory over Japan has been won humanity will find itself confronted by the same enemies of human happiness which "cost the English dear" in 1758.

Dr. Snyder said the kind of leaders the world will need are to be found in the graduating classes of institutions like Michigan State College. He wished members of the class good fortune in the battle not only against foreign enemies, but against the "forts of folly which are more strongly held and more tenaciously defended than was Fort Ticonderoga in 1758."

The following citations were made by President Hannah in awarding honorary degrees to Mr. Case and Mr. Cole:

"Mr. Case, you have added materially to our total knowledge of mines and mining and the whole field of mining engineering. Your successful participation in a wide range of worthwhile enterprises and interests is an inspiration to young men."

"Mr. Cole, in your long and honorable career as research worker, as teacher and administrator, you have served the field of agriculture brilliantly. Yours has been a major contribution in bringing the laws of heredity as they pertain to animal breeding to a recognized and respected science. Even the most earthy and practical of farmers now recognize the advantages of the practical application of your science of genetics to their problems in improving the quality and the productivity of the animal units on their farms and ranches."

Four postulates give the United States the most unusual political philosophy the world has ever known, Father O'Donnell told members of the graduating class in the baccalaureate address.

They are, according to the speaker, a recognition of God; acknowledgment of the natural law, which has its source in God; recognition of natural rights of persons flowing from that law; and acknowledgment of the inherent dignity and integrity of the human person because of these God-given natural rights.

"Today these postulates are as immutable as ever," Father O'Donnell declared. "Perhaps I can illustrate by reminding you of a device found in amusement parks—a number of mirrors that produce distorted images for the hilarity of the beholder. As you stand before one you seem to be at least 12 feet tall; stop before another, and you are no bigger than one of the seven dwarfs. A third makes you leaner than Cassius, and a fourth as rotund as Santa Claus. But you are still you, and the mirror can't change you."

"There is abroad in the world a philosophy known as secularism that persists in holding nature up to its own faulty mirror. It tries to degrade man into an irresponsible automaton that comes into existence without God or basic morality, and eventually returns to the nothingness whence it came. Sometimes the philosophy has a different label—scientism, materialism, or agnosticism. Call it what you will, each secular funhouse has its own reflection, and each is a distortion of man created in the image of God."

President O'Donnell expressed himself in opposition to the compulsory military service bill before Congress. "Personally," he said, "I favor military training. I believe that we must be a military nation, postwar; and we must defend our country. But I am unalterably opposed to a philosophy that means the regimentation of our youth—the very thing that we are fighting against in this global war. Such smacks too strongly of totalitarianism."

Faculty Changes Made

Several changes in the staff of Michigan State College were approved by the State Board of Agriculture, governing body of the college, at recent meetings. Four department heads were appointed.

Arthur W. Farrall, director of research for the Creamery Package Manufacturing Co., Chicago, was named professor and head of the department of agricultural engineering, effective May 15. He replaces Dr. E. G. McKibben, who has become associated with the Pineapple Research Institute in Hawaii. Professor Farrall holds degree from the University of Nebraska and since 1932 has served as research engineer, senior research engineer, and director of research for the Chicago firm.

Dr. F. L. Wynd, assistant professor of botany at the University of Illinois, was appointed professor of botany and head of the department, effective September 1. Dr. Wynd replaces Dr. E. A. Bessey, who will be relieved of his administrative duties to become a distinguished professor. Receiving his doctorate in plant physiology from Washington university, St. Louis, Missouri, Dr. Wynd has been at the University of Illinois since 1938. He has worked on numerous research projects at the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, Washington university medical school, and the University of Missouri.

C. Howard Church, director of the Mulvane Art Museum and head of the department of art at Washburn university, Topeka, Kansas, was named professor and head of the art department, effective September 1. Mr. Church will replace Professor Albert Christ-Janer who resigned to become director of the Cranbrook Museum and Library, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. Watercolors, drawings, and oils by Mr. Church have been exhibited in Chicago galleries, the Wichita Art Museum, and the Joslyn Art Museum, Omaha, Nebraska.

Dr. Herman J. Wyngarden, formerly acting head of the department of economics, was appointed professor of economics and head of the department, effective July 1. He replaces Major Harald S. Patton who returns to Michigan State as professor of economics upon termination of his military leave in the finance department of the U. S. Army, Washington, D. C. Dr. Wyngarden, who began teaching economics courses at M.S.C. in 1924, has become nationally known as an authority on money and banking. He is a member of the Detroit regional War Labor Board.

Dr. C. R. Hoffer, associate professor, was named acting head of the department of sociology and anthropology during the absence of Dr. Charles P. Loomis, who is on military leave for five months. Mrs. Isabelle Gonon, assistant counselor for women since September 1,

Alumni Clubs Give 64 Scholarships

Prof. A. J. Clark, chairman of the scholarship committee at Michigan State College, recently announced the names of 64 Michigan high school seniors who have been awarded undergraduate scholarships to the college. The awards have a total value of $8,640 and are given by Michigan State alumni clubs and committees.

A minimum of one award was made in each of the 32 senatorial districts of the state. Each scholarship amounts to $135 a year or $45 a quarter, and represents a waiver of tuition by the college. If scholastic standards are maintained, the grant may be continued through the entire college course of 12 quarters.

To be eligible for the scholarships, the high school students must have been in the upper one-third of their class, must have shown leadership qualities, and must warrant some financial aid.

1944, was named counselor for women, effective May 1. D. E. Wiant, associate professor and research associate, was promoted to the rank of professor and research professor of agricultural engineering, effective April 1.

Fifty-nine other promotions include nine staff members whose academic rank was changed from associate professor to professor, 28 from assistant professor to associate professor, and 22 from instructor to assistant professor. Eleven new members were appointed to the faculty.

The commencement platform party included members of the State Board of Agriculture, deans, president, the speaker, and candidates for honorary degrees. Members of the graduating class were presented by their respective deans.

'Old-timers' on Campus For Alumni Day

More than three score "old-timers" who refuse to grow old returned to the campus as members of the Patriarchs' Club held their 1945 reunion in conjunction with the 87th commencement exercises of the college on Saturday, June 9.

For the old graduates things began buzzing on Friday evening when Maurice G. Kains, secretary of the class of 1895, sponsored the semi-centennial Class of '95 dinner in the Spartan Room of Hotel Olds. Six months prior to writing the class book "Fifty Years Out of College," Mr. Kains began to plan an event which was to be unlike any affair ever staged in connection with the Michigan State reunion, a dinner that would long be remembered by all present.

A confidential letter went out inviting two members of the class and their wives to be his guests for dinner and it appeared that they were to be the only ones invited. In the same way, however, he asked other groups to meet him on the same date and at the same hour. Thus, when they arrived at the Hotel Olds parlors they found not only all the class but several guests present. Then the secretary of the Class of 1895, who had been standing incognito at the edge of the circle of friends, pulled off his hat, his colored glasses, and was recognized immediately as the host of the evening and the old man who had fooled many of his classmates for a day or two in various parts of the hotel.

Arrangement of the tables was carried out as if Williams Hall had not burned down and as if the dinner was being staged in Club E as it might have been on some Sunday in 1891 or 1892. Mr. Kains' guests, including more than 40 persons, sat down to tables loaded with platters and dishes of chicken, dumplings, biscuits, even real butter and old-fashioned strawberry shortcake with plenty of cream. Every conceivable idea was used to make the dinner similar to those served to his classmates 50 years ago.

Following the dinner a toast was given to the "absent friends," members of the class who, as the host had stated on the printed menu, "live by their work." Taps was played for the 17 classmates who have died. Perry G. Holden, Belleville, class of '89, gave the only talk of the evening.

From every section of the country the Patriarchs came for luncheon held Saturday in the Union with President Hannah as host. More than 120 persons, including Dean Griswold, Northville, who will be 93 in August and who graduated in 1875, were present. Heralded as the oldest living graduate of the college, Mr. Griswold was there with the famous Kedzie Alumni Cane, received in 1942 following the death of Warren Reynolds, class of '70.

William Berkey, chairman of the State Board of Agriculture, presented numerous guests at the luncheon, including President F. B. Snyder, of Northwestern University, commencement speaker; Dr. Sarah VanHoosen Jones; Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Armstrong, Niles; Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Olds, Lansing; Albert H. Case, '02, and Mrs. Case, of Tampa, Florida; Dr. Leon J. Cole, '98, and Mrs. Cole, Madison, Wisconsin. The Rev. H. G. Gaige, of Peoples Church, East Lansing, read the names of Patriarchs who died since the last meeting, including Dr. Louis DeLamarter, '73; Frank B. Garratt, '78; Clement J. Strang, '78; William F. Pack, '82; Alice A. Johnson, '84; Dr. Lyster H. Dewey, '88; Rolland J. Cleland, '89; William F. Johnson, '91, Henry B. Winegar, '91; Thomas S. Major, '92; Charles R. Winegar, '92; and Clarence J. Foreman, '94.

President Hannah welcomed the Patriarchs, saying, "It is a real inspiration for those of us here to see so many after so long a time who are sufficiently interested in this college to come long distances to renew old acquaintances and to check up on the progress of this institution. We are delighted that you are here. Those of you who have been back several times since graduation find that every time you come the college has changed in some degree in appearance and it is right that it will continue to change. We have experienced the same problems as all colleges in these war years. There are going to be many problems in future years. This college is what it is pretty largely because of the enthusiasm of you folks and others who have been here as students. The greatest asset we have is the very kindly attitude of the people of Michigan toward this college."

A welcome to the class of 1895 was given by Dr. W. O. Hedrick, of the class of '91, who served the class as an instructor. Dr. Hedrick said, "It is a unique and agreeable pleasure to be able to welcome the same group of people to this place twice—more than half a century part. The fifty-four years since I first saw the members of the class of '95 is a long time in the affairs of human kind. Fifty-four years does a good deal toward painting your hair white, furrowing your brow, and stiffening your joints. Ignoring the half-century that has gone by, those of you who just listened to President Hannah's glowing descriptions of the college that we have at the present time would find very little that would have reminded you of what you found fifty-four years ago. We met late in August, our vacations were different and the real college year started the middle of February. Your class numbered only 100, perhaps 108. I think there was one girl in the class of '95. The faculty at that time numbered nearly half as many as made up your class.

"As you go about in the next day or two to look over the surroundings, I am reminded of Webster's words to the veterans of Bunker Hill—"The same heavens are indeed above your head, the same ground is at your feet, but all else has changed." I hope you will approve of the changes that we have made. I hope you will like them. I am sure everything that President Hannah said about the current conditions of the college is true and I hope you will stay here a long time and enjoy yourself thoroughly."

The response for the Class of 1895 was given by Dr. William C. Bagley, editor of the magazine "School and Society" and professor emeritus of Teachers College, Columbia University. Said Dr. Bagley: "It is privilege on my part to speak on behalf of the class of '95 to express our keen appreciation of your welcome that has been extended to us as we join the ranks of the Patriarchs. It has been a very great pleasure for us that this welcome has been extended by Dr. Hedrick, who began his work as a teacher when we were freshmen and who presided at the first meeting of this class in 1891. It is a privilege on behalf of the class to reaffirm our affection for this college, a college that inspires affection and loyalty in its students and in its alumni more than any other college with which I am acquainted. I am happy also to reaffirm our gratitude for what this college did for us in our student days and its influence all the way through our lives.

"I regret very much that I am not the person who should respond to this message of welcome. I am pinch-hitting for one of our classmates, Maurice G. Kains, our class secretary. One of the things that he has done was to secure contributions to the Union Building from 100 per cent of the class membership. He wrote letter after letter ten years ago for our 40th reunion. We had 24 living members then and 20 were present. They came from all over the country. On this, our 50th reunion there are 24 members living, graduates and former students, and 18 are here today. When we graduated in 1895, 17 of those originally starting received diplomas and 13 of them are here today. This attendance is due to Maurice G. Kains. He is an outstanding horticulturist, a writer of many books in that field. Mr. Kains wrote another book last year, the history of the class of '95, dedicated to Dr. Hedrick. Mr. Kains published this book at his own expense. He gave a copy not only to every member of the class but to every child of every member as well as to the widows of deceased members. He did that without cost to anyone but himself. I hail Mr. Kains as one of our most devoted alumni. We have been proud to hear President Hannah today and feel that the future of the college is a bright future. We are proud to be alumni now and we will be still prouder to have that honor in the future."

In Action—Somewhere

Ruth Hanna, '40

Ruth Hanna, class of 1940, daughter of Sherman Hanna, 2355 Eastern avenue, Grand Rapids, has arrived in England for continental assignment as an American Red Cross secretary. Prior to her assignment she was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad in Grand Rapids.

Lt. Ferguson, '43

Lt. (j.g.) Frederick G. Ferguson, class of '43 Vet., Grand Rapids, was the executive officer of a PT boat when his squadron sank two enemy craft during a daylight sweep near Zamboanga, Mindanao, in the Philippines on invasion day. In concerted action with General MacArthur's Mitchell medium bombers, enemy positions in the town also were strafed and bombed. Ferguson is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Ward S. Ferguson, 2020 Madison avenue, Grand Rapids.

Capt. Burns, '39

Capt. George M. Burns, '39, son of Charles G. ('12) Burns and Mrs. Burns of 819 Barrington Road, Grosse Pointe, has been awarded the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Clusters for meritorious achievement in aerial flight as pilot and flight commander of his B-17 Flying Fortress in the bombing of Berlin by the 15th AAF. His wife, the former Kathryn A. Wolfe, '40, has established her residence at 231 Paris avenue, S.E., Grand Rapids.

Lt. Comdr. Van Antwerp, '36

Lt. Comdr. Lloyd W. Van Antwerp, class of 1936 engineering, recently received the Navy Cross and a Gold Star in lieu of a second, and the Air Medal in a ceremony at San Diego, Calif. The citations were for his devastating aerial strikes against the Japanese in the Pacific. He is a native of Michigan, coming to the college from Unionville, Tuscola county.

Capt. Bishop, '41

Capt. Truman B. Bishop, class of '41, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Bishop of Almont, has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal. He received the medal "for meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services in support of military operations at Hollandia, Niak Island, Noemfoot and Sansapor, Dutch New Guinea. In charge of searching captured areas for enemy ordnance material, Captain Bishop worked tirelessly to secure and evacuate vast stores of captured equipment, many items of which were hitherto unknown to the United States forces in this theater."

Lt. Moore, '39

For leading a flight of B-26 Marauders through foggy weather to a vital enemy target and back to their airbase, although he had been wounded shortly after the bombers dropped their charges, Lt. Carl H. Moore, of the class of '39, navigator from Quincy, Michigan, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. Moore, now 28, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Moore, of Quincy. He adds the DFC to the Air Medal with eight Oak Leaf clusters previously earned. A former 4-H Club agent, Lt. Moore participated in 47 missions.

Lt. Kieft, '41

After three years in the Navy, Lt. Thomas R. Kieft, class of 1941, of Manistee, recently was given command of a new LST boat just commissioned. Lt. Kieft had service in the Caribbean before being assigned to his new ship.

Lt. Col. Jones, '38

The silver oak leaves of a lieutenant colonel are shown in the accompanying picture being pinned on Lieut. Col. Edward H. Jones, '38, left, by Lieut. Col. J. P. Hines, group commander, upon his recent promotion from the rank of major. Jones has been in the India-Burma theater for more than 22 months and for the past year has served as executive officer for Air Service Command. He has been active in jungle rescue work and has made several treks into the hills and mountains of Assam searching for survivors of plane crashes and for possible plane salvage. Prior to entering the Army, Colonel Jones worked for the Michigan State Police.

Russel Blaine Nye Wins Pulitzer Award

Russel Blaine Nye, assistant professor of English at Michigan State College, has received the 1944 Pulitzer award for American biography. The $500 award was given for the book, "George Bancroft, Brahmin Rebel," the story of a 19th century historian and diplomat.

In 1942 Dr. Nye was awarded the Alfred A. Knopf fellowship in biography, amounting to $1,200. Since September 1, 1944, he has been on leave of absence from the college on a $4,000 fellowship from the Rockefeller foundation, and will return to the campus next fall.

Dr. Nye is gathering data for a biography of Theodore Weld, 19th century abolitionist who led movements for freedom of the press and speech, and for the abolition of slavery.

Sports at State

By Nick Kerbawy

Michigan State College's athletic teams, dormant in 1943 as wartime casualties, returned this year to intercollegiate competition and won 41 dual engagements as against 23 losses for an aggregate percentage of .640.

The Spartans returned to athletics by fielding teams composed of 17-year-olds, military ineligible and a sprinkling of discharged servicemen. Sports had been suspended due to the unavailability for intercollegiate competition of some 3,500 Army trainees who were stationed on the campus during early months of the war.

With manpower problems for athletics somewhat alleviated, Michigan State fielded 11 teams in its normal program of 13 competitive sports. Only boxing and polo remained inactive.

On July 1, Michigan State resumed athletics on a pre-war basis, allowing the Spartans to compete with schedules that incorporate civilian or military personnel.

Following President John A. Hannah's statement of August 11, 1943, it was expected that intercollegiate athletics at Michigan State were out for the duration. The ban was partially lifted the following April when the faculty approved a return to competition with schools relying on civilian personnel. On May 25, 1944, the athletic council set July 1 as the time the bars would drop discriminating against opponent personnel.

Football presented an auspicious return, the Spartans winning six of the seven games they managed to schedule. They lost only to Missouri, 13 to 7.

Significant with the return of football was use of the Flying Z offense developed by Coach Charlie Bachman. Run off the balanced line, its idea is that every play should hit or threaten the middle of the line before disclosing its final course.

It marked the first time Bachman deviated from the Notre Dame system under which he played and for 27 years has coached. Developed while Bachman was on a lend-lease coaching assignment in 1943 to Camp Grant, the system is named because of the figure suggested by a line drawn to connect each back-field position.

Because it is new, the Flying Z will come under close surveillance as Michigan State tackles a major nine-game schedule that opens September 29 against Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Two members of the football squad,

Speedy Bob O'Leary grinds away to win the 440-yard dash for Michigan State during the 29th running of the State Intercollegiate track and field meet. Team-mate Bill Maskill pulled in a close second. The Spartans lost their state title to Western Michigan's heavily-manned Navy outfit, 68½ to 57½. Wayne was third with 26. Other results: Alma, 7½; Central Michigan, 3; Albion, 2½. Hillsdale's three entries failed to score. Michigan State has won the state title on 17 occasions in the classic's history.

Fullback Jack Breslin of Battle Creek and End Frank Brogger of Saginaw, played with the East squad in the Shrine game New Year's day at San Francisco.

Breslin, workhorse of the Spartan team, in seven games racked up a total offensive gain of 795 yards. His total was just 105 yards short of equalling the total net gain of Michigan State's seven opponents. Breslin will be back next fall. Brogger, a discharged serviceman, left school at the close of the grid season.

In cross country, Michigan State broke even in four meets during which the NCAA cross country run was renewed for the sixth time on the Spartan campus.

Wrestling provided the only undefeated sport. Coach Fendley Collins' charges won five dual meets, five Michigan AAU championships, and a national AAU championship in Gale Mikles, 145-pound Tulsa freshman. Fencing broke even in a pair of meets with Ohio State while the swimming team dropped a dual meet to the Buckeyes, won the Central Collegiate Conference title for the third time, placed second in a triangular meet, and tied for fourth in the 22nd NCAA meet.

Coach Ben F. VanAlstyne's squad hit its peak February 5, dumping mighty Kentucky, 66 to 50, just four weeks after the Wildcats had administered to the Spartans a 66 to 35 spanking. Winning 10 of 17 games, the Spartans copped three places on the all-Michigan collegiate team with Forward Sammie Fortino of Alma adjudged the most valuable player in the state. The cagemen participated in breaking more records than any single Spartan team since the sport's origin at Michigan State in the winter of 1899.

The relay combinations were standout features of the track squad that split even in four dual meets. Most noteworthy was the 61½ to 60½ victory outdoors over Indiana, a team that during the indoor season defeated Michigan State, 66½ to 37½. Michigan State dropped its state intercollegiate title to Navy-laden Western Michigan, and won numerous places on the relays schedule.

The senior ROTC rifle team captured for the first time top honors in the National Sixth Service Command. In past years, the Spartans won numerous second and third places.

Coach John Kobs' baseball squad ended its season with 12 victories in 16 starts. The season included splits of two-game series' with Ohio State and Ohio university, and clean sweeps of all contests with University of Detroit and Wayne.

Pitcher Keith Steffee, Sturgis (Mich.) war hero, sparked Michigan State's return to baseball. Steffee, holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Purple Heart, Air Medal, and four Oak Leaf clusters, was undefeated with six victories, hurling five complete games and one in relief. His string numbers Ohio State and Ohio university as victims, shutting out the Buckeyes with five hits.

Tennis garnered three victories in four starts while golf played in the rough, losing four dual meets and a triangular affair.

Generally speaking, the Spartans were able to maintain athletic relationships with many schools. Relationships were begun with others. The coaching staff was beset with new problems that focused about the younger athlete or the athlete who in normal times perhaps wouldn't have a chance.

Spartan Nine Wins 12 Games Out of 16

Michigan State's baseball team compiled a season's record of 12 victories in 16 starts, the Spartans losing a pair of games to Indiana and dividing with Ohio State and Ohio university.

Keith Steffee, Sturgis sophomore war hero holding a hatful of medals, pitched the Kobsmen to six victories. Bill Page, bespectacled freshman flinger from Muskegon, accounted for three wins; Darrel Couey, Detroit junior, two, and Norm McCormick, another Detroit, one. Steffee, was unbeaten as was Couey while Page dropped three tough ones and McCormick one.

Steffee's work was a bright spot in Michigan State's return to baseball. Slow in rounding into shape, Steffee was unbeatable as the season advanced. In 52 innings, he was nicked for 25 hits and 12 earned runs. He fanned 53, walked 22, committed one wild pitch and hit two batsmen. His blazing fast ball began to smoke following the Indiana series in which he served four innings in relief. Three weeks later, Coach John Kobs started him against Wayne, and Steffee was on his way.

The season's record:

- M.S.C. 3, Indiana 15
- M.S.C. 5, Indiana 7
- M.S.C. 4, Ionia Reformatory 3
- M.S.C. 7, Jackson Prison 0
- M.S.C. 6, Wayne 2
- M.S.C. 7, Michigan Normal 4
- M.S.C. 1, Ohio State 2
(12-innings)
- M.S.C. 3, Ohio State 0
- M.S.C. 4, Ohio University 11
- M.S.C. 8, Ohio University 7
- M.S.C. 10, Wayne 6
- M.S.C. 2, U. of Detroit 0
- M.S.C. 6, U. of Detroit 5
(11-innings)
- M.S.C. 9, U. of Detroit 2
- M.S.C. 15, U. of Detroit 3
- M.S.C. 3, Percy Jones (Battle Creek) 2

Not Superstitious

The number "13" may be an omen of bad luck for some persons, but not for Karl A. Schlademan, Michigan State's track coach. His team defeated highly favored Indiana in a dual meet, 61½ to 60½ with a 13-member squad.

Sports Program Studied

Antonio Silva and Ricardo Paredes are going to see to it that Michigan State College's program in physical education yields its influence in Latin America.

Silva is a native of Sao Paulo, Brazil, and Paredes was born and reared in San Salvador. Their job is to study and audit Michigan State's athletic program from intercollegiate competition right on through to sports for everyone as provided by physical education.

Operating from the office of King J. McCristal, M.S.C. professor of physical education, the two Latins are profuse in their praises.

"The greatest curricula to come about in competitive sports is the adapted sports program," Silva declares. "It makes athletic popularly available to the physically handicapped. I can't speak enough in favor of the program. We're carrying the idea home on a large scale."

According to McCristal, the adapted sports program offers a curricula to restore morale, initiative, and self confidence to a person blighted by physical handicap.

Competitive athletics and organized recreation is popular among Latin Americans who can afford it, Paredes explains. Gradually, the state is manifesting interest in order to extend the programs as a municipal function rather than confining it to private and public schools. As a general rule, the private school programs excel.

Silva, 29 years old, is studying under special scholarships provided by the Brazilian government, the United States department of state, and Michigan State College. Since 1934, he has been involved in Sao Paulo athletics with 28 different functions ranging from professor of physical education to professor of football and softball. He has been in this country less than three months and speaks English hesitatingly.

Paredes, 37 years old and unmarried, studied law at the University of San Salvador until his love for athletics prompted him to change. In 1941, he was tendered a scholarship at Springfield college where he studied for three years. He plans to get a degree from Michigan State, financing most of his own expenses this year. He not only understands English well, but understands Silva's native Portuguese, while the latter comprehends Spanish in part.

Cover Picture

Largest statue of its kind in the world, "The Spartan," symbolizing athletics at Michigan State, was unveiled on Saturday, June 9, by Mac Cropsey, Marcellus, senior class president, and Sue Averill, Birmingham, president of Associated Women Students, at ceremonies in conjunction with other commencement activities.

The creation of Leonard D. Jungwirth, assistant professor of art at the college, the figure is 10 and a half feet tall and is mounted on a brick and concrete base just south of the Red Cedar bridge between Macklin Field and Jenison Fieldhouse. It is made of red Ohio clay and is reinforced with concrete. Figures representing the 12 sports at M.S.C. will appear in relief on the base.

Working in his spare time, the sculptor spent nearly two years on the massive figure. Glazed and fired to a temperature of 2300 degrees, the statue is expected to withstand the elements better than most stones.

Castellani Steals Home—Rudy Castellani, fleet-footed Lansing freshman outfielder, was safe at home in a steal during the Ohio university game. Third baseman Dick Mineweaser is at bat. Also shown are Catcher Russ Ruszkowski and Umpire Cy Elliott. The Spartans lost the game, 11 to 4, but came back to win the second half of the doubleheader, 8 to 7. The games were played in Sycamore park, Lansing, as heavy rains in May flooded college field.

Gridiron Immortal Dies

George E. "Carp" Julian, of the Class of 1915, one of the college's all-time football greats, died May 9, at St. Lawrence hospital in Lansing, following an operation and an illness of several months. He had been connected with Oldsmobile division of General Motors corporation for more than a decade and was employment manager of the huge forge plant in Lansing.

The death of Carp, as he was familiarly known, brought to a close the career of one of the greatest and best known fullbacks ever to wear the Spartan colors. He was one of those rare men who could penetrate any line while carrying the ball, and backed up his own line with the best of them.

Julian was a star member of the 1913 team which marked up the only undefeated record in State's football history. Walter Eckersall, the Chicago sports writer, who was recognized as the west's leading authority, chose Carp for his all-western team. Walter Camp, the sports critic in the east who was giving the west but scant notice in those days, bowed to Julian, who played under Coach John F. Macklin from 1911 to 1915 and was captain of the 1914 squad.

Handicapped by ill health for many years after graduation and participating in professional football, Carp won the admiration of his friends by his fight for good health. He was the organizer and a charter member of the Varsity Club and had served as the alumni representative of that body on the Athletic Council since its reorganization in 1929. He was a member of the Eclectic Society and took an active interest in assisting that group to become the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

If there was one man who typified friendliness and loyalty in the old "Aggie" days it was George "Carp" Julian. Carp loved his Alma Mater and took his assignments seriously. Besides his work with the Athletic Council and his fraternity he served as national president of the Alumni Association from 1938 to 1940 and for several years served as chairman of the Downtown Coaches association. Every Wednesday noon he was on hand to cheer the coaching staff in victory or give them a pat on the back in defeat. He always had a firm handshake and a hearty laugh. His intense enthusiasm was catching at all times.

He is survived by his widow, Katherine, who lives at 942 University drive, East Lansing; his mother Mrs. Wm. Julian, and Mrs. Hubert Mermangen, Rochester, N. Y., and Mrs. M. J. Shea, Scranton, Pa., sisters. Funeral services and burial were in Rochester, N. Y.

George E. "Carp" Julian

On the Death of Carp

"It was with deep grief and profound sorrow that I learned of the passing of Carp. I have suffered an irreparable loss. For over 30 years it was my pleasure to enjoy his friendship. This I shall always treasure. The memory of his cheerful, kind and lovable qualities and sterling integrity will be an abiding inspiration to all whose privilege it was to know him. As he did on the football field of old, he gallantly carried the ball through life. The all-wise Coach has taken him out of the game. I extend my sincerest sympathy to you in your great loss." (From a telegram to Mrs. Julian.) —John Farrell Macklin, Philadelphia.

"Carp will always live in my memory as a great man of marvelous character and courage, and always a real friend." —A. Leal Bibbins, '15, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Carp was one of the greatest fullbacks of all time. During the years I played with him in 1912-1913 he was never stopped. As quarterback of the famous 1913 team my memory of him will be 'he always delivered the goods.' I had but to ask him for the number of yards the team needed, and he would deliver without fail. These words, 'he always delivered the goods,' express the greatness of George 'Carp' Julian." —George E. Gauthier, '14, Director of Athletics, Ohio Wesleyan University.

"It was with deep regret that I heard of the loss of one of our stars. Being a classmate of Carp's and manager of the football team when he was at his best, I knew him very well. Not only as a wonderful football player, but he was one of the best loved men on the campus. He was a friend of all and a friend to all." —Carl H. Peterson, '15, City Manager, Saginaw, Michigan.

"In the recent death of Carp Julian Michigan State suffered a real loss. He was a true Spartan, on and off the athletic field, a man's man in every sense of the word. His loyalty to Michigan State will always be an inspiration to those who follow him." —Lee O. Benner, '12, Pres., Central Michigan Alumni Club.

"Carp was one of God's Gentlemen. I worked, played and roomed with him through three happy years in college and have seen him frequently since then. I feel that I knew him from every angle and loved him for the great personality that he was." —Oscar R. "Dutch" Miller, '15, Sugar Beets Products Co., Saginaw.

"I have known Carp since 1912, first as a great man in the athletic world. For as Yost once said, the greatest man in football according to his idea was Willie Heston, but 'Carp was so close to him that there wasn't a flip of the coin difference.' Since then I have known Carp to be the greater man—sincere in his devotion to his country, to his city, to his work, to his college, to his family and to God. He died immortal to all who were privileged to know him." —Wallace S. Beden, '16, Lansing.

"There are so many good things to be said about Carp but to me he was 'All American Julian' and his spirit to win against all odds will always be remembered by those associated with him." —Hugh M. Blacklock, '17, Sheriff, Kent County.

"The greatest defensive football player I have ever seen. One of the most sincere persons I have ever known, perfectly honest and always a gentleman. He was very courageous during his own misfortune and very sympathetic to others when stricken. I wish I could count the number of people, who, since his death, have said to me 'So old Carp has gone.'" —Blake Miller, '16, Lansing.

"To my way of thinking Carp was greater in defeat than in victory." —Lyman L. Frimodig, '17, Asst. Director of Athletics, M.S.C.

Following Alumni Clubs

By Glen O. Stewart

Saginaw Elects McCulloch

The organization meeting of the M.S.C. Alumni Club of Saginaw was held in the office of City Manager Carl Peterson, at the city hall, May 22, and the following officers named: Bryson McCulloch, '28, president; R. D. McLandress, '27, first vice-president; Virginia L. Harper, '31, second vice-president; John H. Breyfogle, '28, secretary; and Virginia C. Austin, '42, treasurer.

Members of the board of directors elected for a three-year term in addition to McCulloch, McLandress and Breyfogle were Carl Peterson, '15, retiring president, Lester C. Lunden, '21, and Harold Vollmer, '29. For the two-year term the club selected Mrs. John H. Zuber, '32 (Charlotte MacKinnon), Virginia Harper, '31, Kenneth Ousterhout, '31, Carl F. Miller, '20, George Landsburg, '29, and Carl Nordberg, '31. For the one-year term the following were named: H. B. Vasold, '14, Thomas H. McDonagh, '29, Virginia C. Austin, '42, Mildred L. Young, '37, Mrs. Vern Dickeson, '31 (Gertrude Gustafson), and Mrs. Georgetta Barnoske, '26 (Georgetta Jaquith).

President Bryson McCulloch expects to appoint at least six or eight functional committees to work out a year's program for the club—John Breyfogle, secretary.

Midland Hears Lee

More than 120 alumni and guests of the M.S.C. Alumni Club of Midland met at the Midland Community Center the evening of May 23 for the annual dinner meeting. Faced with the problem of a no-meat-no-banquet edict, President "Bill" Collinson, '18, dispatched several cars to the country where the men rounded up 25 chickens. The club enjoyed the best feed in years.

President Collinson introduced Glen O. Stewart, director of alumni relations, who spoke on the Service Men's Institute and told anecdotes about a dozen or more older members of the faculty. Prof. Shao Chang Lee, director of the International Center and head of the Institute of Foreign Studies, spoke on post-war Chinese-American opportunities, especially in the field of engineering.

Lois Heatley, daughter of Lynn G. Heatley, '23, and Eleanor Kidder Heatley, '24, was introduced as a guest of the club and winner of one of the alumni scholarships in the district. Gordon Allen, of Midland, and Barbara Kates, of Mt. Pleasant, also were granted similar awards.

E. F. Holser, chairman of the nominating committee, gave the following report on new officers, which was adopted: John W. Strahan, '39, president; Mrs. Betty Driver Heckrodt, '42, vice-president; Willard R. Perry, '26, treasurer; and Elizabeth L. Ziegler, '37, secretary.—"Betty" Ziegler, secretary.

Chicago Hears Bachman

The annual meeting of the M.S.C. Alumni Club of Chicago was held at the Chicago Engineers' Club, Saturday noon, April 21. After extending greetings and thanking the club for the privilege of serving them during two war years, President C. Earl Webb, '12, introduced Dr. Thelma Porter, '21, newly-appointed chairman of the department of home economics of the University of Chicago.

Dr. Porter told of her new work and touched upon her years on the M.S.C. staff. Coach Charles Bachman was the campus guest speaker and he told of the expansion program contemplated at the college and reviewed the athletic program, emphasizing the problems facing the football coaches next fall. The sound and color movie, sent by the alumni office was shown.

Officers elected include: G. M. Glidden, '17, president; Paul J. Murdock, '36, first vice-president; Paul Thompson, '39, second vice-president; and Mrs. Ralph Kortge (Mary Shively) '42, secretary-treasurer. In addition, the following directors were named: Wm. Davidson, '13, Arthur Mooney, '18, T. A. Jordan, '10, Nellie Fredeen, '17, Mrs. Mildred Farwell Adams, '15, George B. Northeott, '30, William Thatcher, '33, and George Hays, '18.

Newcomers to Chicago are asked to call President Glidden at the E. D. Bullard company, 133 North Sacramento Boulevard, (telephone, Kedzie 7230), or the secretary at 6731 South Jeffery, (telephone, Fairfax 4281).—Mary A. Shively, '42, secretary.

New York City

Ray C. Kinney, '21, president of the New York City M.S.C. Alumni Club, has announced that President John A. Hannah has tentatively promised to speak before that group on the evening of October 11, 1945. Complete details will be mailed to all alumni in the metropolitan area. Mr. Kinney may be reached at Graybar Electric, Lexington avenue at 43d Street, New York City.

"Old-timers"

The Varsity Show

Days of Yore

By Joseph G. Duncan

Excitement ran high on the campus in November 1937 as the time drew near of the much publicized and discussed Pontiac Varsity Show. Students and faculty who weren't able to get seats in the present Women's Gymnasium for the broadcast went to the dress rehearsals or listened at home. For the first time in history, the "Alma Mater" as played on the chimes in Beaumont Tower was heard from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Dozens of letters, telegrams, and post-cards were received from enthusiastic alumni and friends of the College. Pictured on this page is the "studio" setting and some of the student groups that participated.

Six of the seven members of the first graduating class (1861) took part in the Civil War. Two of the six gave their lives—one who was killed at Gettysburg and the other who died in South Carolina. The picture on this page was made from a painting done several years after the war by an artist who was hired by the Alumni Association to construct a

Beal's "History of the Michigan Agricultural College" quotes George W. Haigh, '62, regarding Dickey's death at Gettysburg: "... (he) was shot and instantly killed while we were maintaining a difficult line of battle without breastworks and were attacked by an overwhelming number . . . During the lull before the attack I found him reading his Bible . . . We talked a few moments and looked at the . . . enemy filing through the timber and preparing to advance. We said 'good-bye' and I returned to my post and soon came the shouting rebels and poor Dickey was no more, and I, wounded, was finding my way to the rear."

Benham died at Beaufort, S. C., in July 1863. More than 90 students, faculty, and men who later were members of the State Board of Agriculture served in the Union Army. Of that number, 15 were killed or died from sickness or wounds.

Examining a butterfly collection is Dr. A. J. Cook, '62, Professor of Zoology and Entomology from 1868 to 1894. With him is Lyman Briggs, '93. During his long period of service, Dr. Cook, with little or no assistance, taught a multitude of subjects, including anatomy, physiology, entomology, zoology, geology, and apiculture. In his annual report for 1892, he states that "I have visited nearly all the colleges in the country and know not a single college where the studies in this department are so many or the help so little."

To the Brave Men of Michigan State

Memorial services in honor of the more than 240 Michigan State College men who have been killed in this war were held in the college auditorium on the morning of May 29. The program included a prayer by Albert J. Hoffman, chaplain at Percy Jones General Hospital, Battle Creek; selections by the college chorus; a tribute to the men who have given their lives, by President John A. Hannah; a roll call of the names of those men; and taps.

The following address was given by Dr. Hannah.

We are gathered here this morning to honor the brave dead who have fought and suffered and died in this great war in order that you and I may have an opportunity to enjoy the rights and privileges of free men.

It is entirely fitting and proper that we pause to honor our brave dead.

It would be their desire, could they speak to us, that we not go through the hollow mockery of paying them tribute unless in the doing we so conduct ourselves as to gain a new dedication to the unfinished task for which they gave their all and the accomplishment of which is only begun.

The war in Europe has been won. Nazism and Fascism have temporarily been crushed. The armed might of Italy and Germany has been destroyed. The miserable leaders, Mussolini and Hitler, are no more.

There remains a great task to finish in the Pacific before the followers of Hirohito may meet the same fate, and in the doing more thousands of our men, possibly more hundreds of our men of Michigan State College, may have to pay the supreme sacrifice.

The whole world is in chaos with more death and destruction and suffering than has ever before existed in the history of man, and it will all have been in vain unless out of it comes a situation that assures political justice, and economic justice, and social justice for all the peoples of the world regardless of those accidental circumstances of birth: race, color, creed, social situation, and geographical location.

The best hope for America is that the twelve million young men and young women who have fought in this war and suffered in this war and know the real cost of war, and those of about the same age here at home who have not as yet been fully indoctrinated with the selfish greed so firmly fixed in the minds and hearts of so many older persons—may have a sustained interest in seeing that every reasonable step is taken to prevent yet another great war a generation hence.

Through them America may have a rebirth of zeal for the advantages of democracy, a fervor for honesty and integrity in government at all levels, and an insistence upon morality and integrity and fundamental honesty on the part of all persons in whom we are to place our trust.

There must be a new selflessness among us and a determination that this nation shall exercise a leadership in world affairs, not through coercion but by example and demonstration of what we can do in providing for all of our own people the political, social, and economic justice of which we speak. And unless we begin at home and assure all of our own people these justices, we are in a poor position to exercise any permanent, worthwhile leadership in world affairs.

There can be no peace unless it is a peace for the world. There must be a willingness on the part of each and every one of us to dedicate ourselves for our part, great or small, not only in a military defeat for the enemy but in winning a peace for ourselves and for the world.

The best way I know to celebrate Memorial Day is for each of us to think of the men whom we knew who have died in this war. Thinking of them, not in the abstract as gold stars on a service flag, but as the young men whom we lived with, grew up with, went to school with—our brothers and our friends.

It would be a good thing for us if every one of us every day of our lives were required to recall the questioning faces of those men whom we previously knew who have died for us. The questioning faces of our dead might inspire us as nothing else is likely to, to forego some of the personal selfishness and give us a willingness to contribute our part to assure a better situation than has existed before.

In a few minutes the names of the brave sons of this college who have died in this war will be read. I wish each one of us might have known at least a few of them as I have known some of them.

The finest tribute I have ever been paid came from a boy who was one of those names that is about to be read. I shall never forget him.

A few years ago it was my pleasure to know many students much better than I can know them now.

This boy was raised on the other side of the railroad tracks in a home where he had some encouragement from his mother but very little from his father. I met him the first day he was on this campus and became interested in him and came to know him well. He was a pretty good student and a pretty good football player, and grew into a fine young man. One night several college students had gathered around, and we had visited over the usual things that boys talk about, each of them with their own problems and their own particular slants on the problems and things that interest college boys. And after a while they all drifted away but this one. He stopped for a few minutes and asked a few more questions. Then he turned to me in kind of a shy way and said, "Mr. Hannah, I wish you were my father."

No finer tribute was ever paid to me, and I should have been glad to have been his father. He has been killed in this war. He and more than 240 other young men from Michigan State College.

These heroes are dead; they died for liberty; they died for us. They are at rest; they sleep under the flag they rendered stainless for the land that they kept free. They sleep in far off lands under desert sands, under tropical palms, in unfriendly clay, some of them on the bottom of the sea.

Wherever they sleep, it is beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or storm, each in the windowless palace of rest. In their tribute, let us say with Tennyson:

"Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning
of the bar
When I put out to sea. . . .
For though from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar."
And with O'Hara:
"The muffled drums' sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo.
No more on Life's parade shall meet
The brave and fallen few.
On Fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead."

And a message from one of the brave Canadian dead in the first World War. I think these M.S.C. men of ours would like to have us think of this message as coming from each of them.

From McCrae:

"Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch: be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow in Flander's Fields."

In conclusion, let it therefore be our pride to show all men everywhere not only what a great military power the United States has become, but let us set for ourselves standards of human behavior, standards of fundamental justice for all men, standards so high that it will be a glory to live up to them. And then let us live up to them and add a new laurel to the crown of America.

Our nation is the sum total of all its people—you and I, and a hundred and thirty millions more like us. Much thinking needs to be done at the bottom by all of us, the common citizens of America, with a fundamental dedication to the purpose for which these brave men fought and died. If we feel deeply, and honestly, and sincerely, and dedicate ourselves to the great task that lies ahead, then and only then can there be any assurance that these brave men will not have died in vain.

In addition to the names appearing on the Roll of Honor in the Union Memorial Building (see first page of this section), the names of the following Michigan State men known to have died in service were read. Their names have since been added to the plaque.

Leland K. Dewey, '25; Robert L. French, '43; Robert S. Higgins, '46; Harry L. Martin, '36; Ronald A. Myers, '38; John S. Solar, '44; Harry S. Cole, '46; Robert T. Tennyson, '46; Clyde Campbell, '40; Lawrence Rank, '46; Lyle M. Murphy, '39; Marvin H. Polin, '41; Leonard W. Bond, '44; Robert Dyke, '44; Robert C. Smeiner, '44; Carl B. Bradley, '45; Eugene F. Fitzgerald, '45; Donald T. Goodwin, '45; Richard J. Hollinger, '45; Duane Gruner, '47; Albert Cepela, '46.

Victory-in-Europe Day Is Observed

Editor's Note:—In observance of V-E Day, students and staff members of Michigan State College on the morning of May 8 gathered in convocation. Excerpts from the address given at that time by President Hannah follow.

We are gathered here this morning, not in a spirit of celebration or exultation, not filled with national pride at the great military victory that has been won by the power of our military forces and the productive might of our industrial resources, not to gloat over the miserable end of those most miserable leaders, Mussolini and Hitler.

We feel all of these things to a degree. We are profoundly grateful for the great military victory in Europe and the end of that phase of the war. We are gathered here this morning in a spirit of thoughtful dedication to that great unfinished task which lies ahead.

All of us have brothers or other close relatives, sweethearts or friends, in our armed forces scattered all over the world. Many of them have already paid the supreme sacrifice. Many more will bear crippling marks of this war as long as they live. The scars are not limited to those that mar the physical body for many will be whole in body but scarred in mind or in spirit.

Were we celebrating the end of the total war it would be a different occasion than this one, for we recognize that there may be months or years of war ahead in Asia and that there may be hundreds of thousands of our men yet to die or to suffer before the same miserable end can come to the armies of Japan that have been experienced by the armies of Nazism and Fascism.

We are dedicating ourselves to continue to contribute in every possible way to the bringing of an early defeat to the military forces, the leaders and the people of Japan. That defeat is certain. The cost may be greater than the more optimistic anticipate, and the road may be rougher and rockier and the time and the loss of life and material resources may yet be great, but that military victory is certain.

What I am concerned about and what I think every one of us in this room today should be concerned about is the fact that so few of us recognize that the defeat of Germany and Italy and eventually Japan may not bring peace. The total extermination of the military potential of these nations may not bring peace but only another armistice unless we in America and the right-thinking people of all the world recognize that there can be no long-time peace or no long-time satisfactory situation in America or any other nation in all the world unless all of the peoples of the world, regardless of their race or their creeds or their color, regardless of the place on the earth's surface where they happened to be born or where they happen to live, are assured a reasonable opportunity for political justice, for social justice, and for economic justice. And certainly if that is true for all of the peoples of the world, it is true for all of the people of our own nation.

There is no justice in the demands of some for absolute equality of reward for all persons regardless of ability, ambition, energy or thrift. But equality of opportunity must be the ideal toward which we strive.

The future of America and the future of the world will be determined to a large degree by the attitude and the understanding and the leadership that will be exercised by the twelve million young men and young women now in the armed forces of the United States and those of you of about the same age who are not in the armed forces.

America will emerge from this war as the greatest power on earth, the greatest military power on earth, the greatest economic power on earth, the greatest social power on earth with the greatest opportunity through unselfish leadership to bring about an era of understanding that could make the coming peace more than a temporary armistice before another great world war more fearful than this one that might completely destroy all of the gains of civilization.

Unless America assumes the leadership in this great opportunity, we may not have another chance.

If the most important problem that faces the world is an enduring world peace, then the most important problem that faces America is the exercise of leadership in the world to make an enduring peace possible. With the type of

The Men of My Command

'Tis midnight and I stand
Amid the sleeping forms of men—
The men of my command.
And, as their troubled murmurs stir
The quiet of the night,
I wonder at the subject of their dreams.
What matter if tomorrow I command again;
This one—the father lying at my feet
Laughs and plays (in dream) with the son he's never seen.
(God grant his safe return)
And over there, a dozen paces to my right,
A boy—a man now, he's just passed twenty-one—
Sobs a name, his brother's.
Today's long looked-for mail notified him of his Brother's death.
And on the other side—
But what was that? A child's frightened cry?
No! I see from whence it came,
That youngster there who's writhing in his sleep.
(He's dreaming of that shelling we received the other day
And who can blame him, 'twas his first.)
"Marilyn!" Whose voice cried out? Oh, yes!
I know the man, and the name he speaks—his wife's.
Spoke in remorse for that last letter, penned in anger's heat.
I censored it, you see, and know its content.
He'll be glad tomorrow when I give it back.
I withheld it from the mail, for I knew his anger'd cool,
And he'd regret the sending of it.
But now my reverie is broken;
Other thoughts and sounds impinge upon my mind,
(The distant sentinel's sharp challenge;
The jackal's cry, the scudding clouds that chase the Moonlight from the sky, to let it reappear again
To form a new kaleidoscope of sight.)
And all my present sons lie quiet in their sleep.
I'm thinking now about an absent son—
My own—who sleeps so far away
Beneath the same deep, scintillating canopy
To which I turn my eyes
To ask God's blessing on all my sons.
Both here and there—
Those whose dreams I'll share
(God willing)
And pray that I might be a faithful father, now—
And then.

Major Alvah M. Miller

MAJOR ALVAH M. MILLER

Major Alvah M. Miller, author of the poem "The Men Of My Command," considered a classic of the war, was killed in action in Italy on January 30, 1944. He was commander of the third battalion of Rangers which was cut to ribbons in the American attack on Cisterna, and wrote the poem shortly before meeting death on the field of battle.

Tribute was paid recently to the memory of Major Miller on "Victory Is Our Business," radio program sponsored by General Motors company, by whom he was employed before entering the army. The program was broadcast nationally and shortwaved to Army camps throughout the world.

A student at Michigan State College in 1933-37, Major Miller majored in economics. During his college days he was president of the glee club, was a member of Mortar and Ball, and belonged to the Coast Artillery, advanced R.O.T.C. unit.

Major Miller was the son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Miller, 933 South Jefferson, Saginaw. His widow, Loretta Young Miller, and small son, James Patton Miller, reside at 316 N. Washington in Saginaw.

government that we have, where the government represents the sum total of the desires of its citizens, the most important problem that faces all of us as individuals is to see that the nation and the government carry out our wishes in exercising that leadership. Our wishes cannot be sanely arrived at unless we have the maximum understanding of the world and the peoples that populate it and the problems of those peoples.

The keynote of the hope for tomorrow rests upon our ability to understand the world-wide implications of the problems facing America today. If your unborn sons are not to be forced into a war more terrible than this one, there must be a willingness on the part of each and every one of us to dedicate ourselves for our part, great or small, not only in a military defeat for the enemy but in winning a peace for ourselves and for the world.

There can be no peace unless it is a peace for the world. There can be no peace for America and chaos for the rest of the world.

History has demonstrated many times that the only substantial gain of military victory is possession of initiative for a brief and fleeting historical moment.

In our time there are unprecedented opportunities for cooperation among many peoples.

The verdict of history was fairly perceived by Elihu Root when he said, "You may judge of the advancement and promise of a nation by its ability to cooperate and work with others."

Will our opportunities and initiatives be permitted to slip away, or will we work constructively with others in making the defeat of Germany the prelude to final defeat of Japan and a real peace?

The young men and young women of America who have fought and won the war against Italy and Germany and who will continue to fight and win the war against Japan, and you their sisters and brothers should answer this question—each in his own mind.

Young men and young women know the real costs and tragedies of war.

They and you will be the leaders and the power of post-war America.

Today's rejoicing over V-E Day means nothing. Today's dedication to the unfinished task of defeating Japan, and today's dedication to an understanding of the absolute necessity for political justice, economic justice, and social justice for all the peoples of the world both abroad and at home if there is to be a real peace may mean much.

Each of us owes that personal dedication to our brave men—your friends and mine—who have fought and suffered and died that we might have this opportunity.

How Spartans Were Named

By GEORGE ALDERTON

State Journal Sports Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is being reprinted through the courtesy of Mr. Alderton of the Lansing State Journal.

THIS is the story of how Michigan State college athletic teams came to have the name of Spartans.

I happen to know the origin of the name, for I had a part in choosing it and, so far as I know, was the first to put it into print. . . .

As many know, for the greater part of its existence the college bore the name of Michigan Agricultural college. Its teams were known, and told and sung about in campus song and story, as the Aggies. With the curriculum broadening, the name was changed to Michigan State College of Agriculture and Applied Science, on May 13, 1925. It became evident that the name Aggies was outgrown.

Some months later a campus committee sponsored a contest and offered a $10 cash prize for a nickname which the committee would choose. The name of "Michigan Staters" was the prize winning selection. If a working newspaperman had been a member of the body I feel sure he would have raised strenuous objection to that name. It did not lend itself to headline writing, a very necessary quality, and neither did it offer variety to a sports writer yearning for a synonymous symbol.

Excellent as the choice may have been in the opinion of a sincere committee, the prize winning name never saw the light of day in print beyond the actual announcement.

Some time after this, I determined to make another effort in bestowing a nickname. Dale Stafford, now assistant managing editor of the Detroit Free Press, was at the time with the Lansing Capital News which later discontinued publication. Dale, a former Lansing high school track athlete, fell in with the suggestion that maybe we could find a suitable name. We went to the college publications department and asked Jimmy Hasselman, who was then head of the department, to let us inspect the names submitted. Jim was sympathetic because he always had the viewpoint of a working newspaperman.

There was the usual assortment of Bears, Wildcats, Tigers, Panthers, etc., but we sought something at least original. Finally we settled on Spartans. It was the name entered in the contest by Perry J. Fremont, then the catcher on the baseball team, and now a first string player in Uncle Sam's internal revenue department office at Detroit. Years later when we had him as a guest of ours in the Briggs stadium press box at the 1940 world series, I told him of the incident. He had forgotten all about offering the name.

I personally felt that the name should be made to originate outside the immediate circle of the college. The baseball team was about to leave for a southern trip and it presented such an opportunity for introduction.

On April 2, 1926, in a special dispatch from Fort Benning, Ga., detailing the account of the baseball game State played with the Fort Benning officers' team, the new nickname was first used. I rewrote the "lead" of the story in order to weld the name into it and then waited the results.

The first paragraph of the account, copied from The State Journal files of April 2, 1926, reads as follows:

"(Special to The State Journal)

"FORT BENNING, Ga., April 2—

The Michigan State college baseball team today waved menacing bats at the Fort Benning Infantry Officers team as it prepared to get revenge for a 7-to-5 defeat suffered in the opening game here yesterday. THE SPARTONS FROM THE NORTH (the caps are ours for emphasis sake) were forced to bow yesterday although they actually outhit Uncle Sam's boys, 12 to 10."

Well, that was it. Note the incorrect spelling of the word. My carelessness. Again the next day we used the new nickname, sparingly at first, and spelled it with the "o." It was our late friend Jim Killoran, as I remember, who pointed out the error. Jim was a daily visitor in the office and helped us often, as he did a great many people, both in and out of sports.

SPARTAN SPIRIT CONQUERS

From
the Spartans of ancient Greece,

Michigan State College athletes
take their name

On the third occasion, April 5, it became correctly SPARTANS. No student alumnus, or official had called up the editor to complain about our audacity in giving the old school a new name, so we ventured into the headlines with it. The "deck" of the heading read "Kobsmen show midseason form in downing Mercer U.; Don Haskins raps out three of the Spartans' bingles; Fremont injured."

Happily for the experiment, the name took. It began appearing in other newspapers and when the student publications used it, that clinched it.

The Spartan was 19 years old last April 2. We paced the floor when he was born at Fort Benning, Ga.

ABOUT THESE ALUMNI

By Gladys M. Franks

Patriarchs

When readers of the Farm Journal and Farmer's Wife received their March 1945 issue, a likeness of Liberty Hyde Bailey, '82, looked up at them from the cover. The April issue of the magazine contained the following letter: "Apropos of your fine cover picture last month of Liberty Hyde Bailey, readers might like to know that in Farm Journal for August, 1893, Dr. Bailey's picture was printed on the editorial page with a biographical tribute."

Peter V. Ross, '95, announces two new books, "Letters of a Traveler" and "If a Man Die He Shall Live Again," published by the Hobson Book Press of Cynthiana, Kentucky. The travel volume is made up of letters written to friends and relatives from the four points of the earth while Mr. Ross was on lecture tours.

After 25 years with the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Charles H. Alvord, '95, has retired as administrative officer of the southern division of the Agricultural Adjustment Agency. He had been with AAA since its beginning in 1933. From 1930 to 1933 he was regional representative and expert in cotton marketing for the Federal Farm board in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Alvord plan to continue their residence in Arlington, Virginia.

1899

Word has been received of the death on December 14, 1944, of George Nathan Gould of Harbor Springs, Michigan.

1900

From Paul Thayer comes the following note: "After having been in the orchard game for the past seventeen years I have sold 'Fruitland' and expect to spend the summer assisting at the Penn State Research laboratory at Arendtsville. During this time I will be living at the West Gettysburg Inn, on the Lincoln highway about a mile west of Gettysburg. In the fall Mrs. Thayer and I plan to move to Southern Pines, North Carolina, where we have purchased a home."

1901

About 200 of his associates and other friends honored Frank Mitchell, chief electrician at the college, with a testimonial dinner in the Union ballroom on May 24. Oldest employee of the college in point of service, Mr. Mitchell retired July 1 after 46 years of continuous association with the institution.
