New Editor

Assuming his post as college news editor in the department of public relations on June 1, Lawrence J. Distel, '37, also becomes editor of the M.S.C. Record with this issue. Prior to four years of service in the Army, he worked on the Trenton Times, a weekly, and the Pontiac Daily Press, for a total of 3½ years. While in school he was managing editor of the Michigan State News, student newspaper, during his senior year.

R. W. Wild, editor and associate editor for the past two years, has returned to his Alma Mater, the University of Kentucky, where he is to be head of the Public Relations department.

Memorial to Honor 320 Dead

Michigan State College's memorial to the 320 former students who gave their lives in their country's service in World War II will consist of a Memorial Center, comprising two buildings, a chapel and an international center dedicated to the promotion of peace and understanding among nations, Dr. John A. Hannah, college president, announced on June 8, Alumni Day and Commencement Day.

The suggested memorial center was proposed by an alumni group headed by E. B. More, '16, of Marshall, Michigan, who also is chairman of the Alumni Advisory Council of the college. His committee weighed several proposals for a memorial and finally recommended the combination of a chapel and international center. President Hannah, acting in behalf of the college, has accepted the proposed plan.

"Much thought has been given to a plan to honor our war heroes in a fitting manner," Dr. Hannah said at the time he made his announcement, "and I am deeply impressed with the type of memorial recommended by this special alumni committee.

"It has been apparent for some time that there is much interest in a memorial project. Ex-veterans who saw their buddies killed, the parents of many who gave their lives, and other alumni and friends of the college, all have expressed desires that such a memorial be built. Many of them indicated a preference for some type of project devoted to the furthering of international goodwill.

"Others had pointed out that the campus at present lacks a building devoted to religion. The proposed plan combines the two thoughts in a splendid way, and the project, when finished, will fill a need on the campus, and at the same time it will be a truly fitting memorial that will point up those ideals for which so many men died."

The announcement appeared in a special Commencement issue of the Michigan State News, campus daily newspaper, and this together with architect's floor plans for the memorial were posted on a display board in the Union lobby on Alumni Day, which coincided with Commencement Day.

Many of the alumni, returned for the day, who looked over the plan and discussed the memorial project, indicated their approval of the choice. Glen O. Stewart, '17, Director of Alumni Relations for the college, who will coordinate the program for collecting donations for the project, stated that he had received many assurances of financial aid during the day.

The project will be financed through voluntary contributions, and these will be accepted at any time. It is intended that later Stewart will outline a concentrated campaign to secure the needed funds. Actual construction will not begin until after the funds are available, and present restrictions on building are removed. Current building conditions are uncertain, but it is estimated that the memorial project probably will cost about $300,000. It is hoped that ground may be broken for the two buildings within the next two years.

The Memorial Center is to be located on the campus on the high ground just east of the Beal Botanical Gardens, on the present site of the college greenhouse. Tentative sketches for the floor plan of the two buildings and the general layout of the adjoining garden have been drawn by Ralph R. Calder, college consulting architect of Detroit.

The chapel, designed to seat about 150, will be the northernmost of the two structures, and its doorway will face eastward. This building will be open at all hours for the use of students, faculty and visitors. It will be available also for weddings, vespers, memorial services and similar events. It will contain the only pipe organ on the campus.

In the vestibule of the chapel will be the memorial plaque, or plaques, listing the names of those who died while in military service.

Running south from the vestibule of the chapel will be a covered stone walk, leading to the international center, which is to be a two-story building. On the first floor will be a lounge and social hall, an office for the director, a small library and exhibition room, a reading room, with kitchen and dining facilities. The second floor will contain the director's quarters, as well as guest rooms for campus visitors. The basement will contain recreation rooms.

Inclusion of the International Center as a part of the Memorial Center will provide a more permanent home for that institution. Housed at one time in the house at Faculty Row Number 3, it was forced to move when that building recently was torn down to make way for a new women's dormitory. Now the International Center occupies the old home at Faculty Row Number 6, immediately south of Louise H. Campbell dormitory, and the only former faculty house remaining on the north side of the campus drive.

Between the two buildings and west of the covered walk will be a formal garden in the center of which will be a fountain. At the west end of the garden it is planned to construct a stairway leading down to the Beal Botanical Gardens.

Veterans of the War Between the States, the Spanish-American War and World War I were honored at the college by the Union Memorial building, which was opened for use in June, 1925.

President John A. Hannah, Glen O. Stewart, Director of Alumni Relations, and E. B. More, chairman of the Alumni Advisory Council, discuss the plans for the Michigan State College Memorial Center, tentative floor plans for which are displayed on a board in the Union Memorial building on Alumni Day.

Ray Stannard Baker, '89

Ray Stannard Baker, '89, State's most distinguished man of letters, died at his home in Amherst, Mass., on July 12, at the age of 76.

At the last commencement, June 8, Baker was one of five alumni named as the first winners of the Alumni Awards for Distinguished Service. He also was honored by the college in 1917, with the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Amherst college and Duke university honored Baker with Litt.D. degrees.

Dr. Baker's last visit to East Lansing was in 1939, when he returned for the 50th anniversary of his class and induction into the Patriarchs' club. Following his visit to the campus at that time, he wrote back telling of his enjoyment of the trip, calling it a rare experience.

He spoke highly of the great changes that have been wrought at the college, praising the development that has made it one of the nation's leading educational institutions. But in retrospect, he had many good words for the college of his own day.

"Nevertheless," he wrote, after speaking of the changes, "that old and now forgotten institution had its own greatness, not so much in buildings, or variety of curriculum, but in the possession as members of its faculty of several great teachers. I am thinking especially of Dr. Beal, Dr. Kedzie, and Professor Cook, and a little later Professor Bailey and Dr. Edwards. It has been my fortune in the years since I left East Lansing to live next door to a number of colleges; and I can give it as my ripe opinion that few institutions of like size ever had a larger proportion of first-class teachers. I shall never cease to be thankful that it was my fortune to sit under them."

Of his schoolmates, too, Dr. Baker had fond memories: "I think the greatest enjoyment I had at the reunion was in meeting a number of men I knew at the college fifty years ago and in hearing something of their careers. Good men, whose success is the best evidence of the virility of that old Michigan institution which in later days came to occupy such a place in the educational procession of the nation."

Dr. Baker was born in Lansing, April 17, 1870, the son of Major Joseph Stannard and Alice Potter Baker, and received his primary education in the public schools of Wisconsin and Michigan. Following his graduation from Michigan Agricultural College he completed a partial law course and a postgraduate course in literature at Ann Arbor.

He joined the reportorial staff of the Chicago Record in 1892 and became widely known as a liberal journalist. He became an associate editor of McClure's magazine in 1898, and in 1906 acquired an interest in The American Magazine, acting also as one of its editors.

Dr. Wilbur O. Hedrick, retired, whose late wife was a cousin of Baker, says that the author lived in East Lansing, on Delta street, from 1903 to 1911. It was during this period that, as "David Grayson," Baker began the "Adventures" series of philosophical essays. This included "Adventures in Contentment," "Adventures in Friendship," "Adventures in Understanding," and "Adventures in Solitude," as well as some other books.

Baker was appointed a special commissioner of the department of state to Great Britain, France and Italy in 1918, and was director of the press bureau of the American commission to negotiate peace in Paris in 1919. Shortly after, in 1919, he wrote his first work on Woodrow Wilson, "What Wilson Did at Paris."

Baker became intensely interested in the war president and his philosophy, and became a close friend of Wilson. When Wilson died, his will provided that Baker was to have unlimited access to all his papers, for the purposes of preparing a biography.

In 1925-6, Baker and the late Prof. W. E. Dodd edited the public papers.

Then, in 1927 came the first two volumes of Baker's, "Woodrow Wilson, Life and Letters." The long biography was completed with publication of the eighth volume in 1939, and the following year Baker received the Pulitzer prize in biography for the monumental work.

Baker's connection with Michigan State College was close. He married Jessie I. Beal, '90, daughter of Dr. William J. Beal, one of the college's outstanding faculty members in its early days. The two of them wrote "Pioneer in Science," a biography of Dr. Beal, in 1925. Baker also spoke of his experiences at the college in another work, "Native American."

Baker was trustee of the Jones library of Amherst college, and held memberships in the American Historical association, the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and Phi Beta Kappa fraternity.

Five Distinguished Alumni Receive New Awards

Five alumni of Michigan State College were honored at the eighty-eighth annual commencement program of the college June 8 by becoming the first to receive Alumni Awards for Distinguished Service.

Only one, Dr. Lyman James Briggs, of Washington, D. C., was able to be present to receive in person a parchment scroll from Dr. John A. Hannah, president of the college.

This plan for honoring outstanding alumni of the college was established by the Alumni Club of Washington, D. C., under the direction of its president, Ray A. Turner, '09. One or more recipients, not to exceed five in any given year, will be designated annually from a list of nominees submitted by local Alumni Clubs throughout the United States, and will be cited at Commencement.

Dr. Briggs, '93, recently retired as Director of the Bureau of Standards in Washington, and also was the first to be appointed to the atomic research committee by the late President Roosevelt.

Others honored were:

Dr. Liberty Hyde Bailey, '82, a distinguished botanist and research worker, now Emeritus Dean of Agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.

Dr. Ray Stannard Baker, '89, who died on July 12, a noted writer and author under the name of David Grayson, and noted biographer of President Woodrow Wilson.

Dr. Clarence B. Smith, '94, Washington, D. C., retired Chief of the Office of Cooperative Extension Work, in the Department of Agriculture.

Dr. William A. Taylor, '88, Columbus, Ohio, retired Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, also in the United States Department of Agriculture.

Classes Rally for Alumni Day

By Glen O. Stewart

Saturday, June 8, was ALUMNI DAY!

A few old grads, especially 13 Patriarchs of the 1895 clan, their wives and guests, returned from distant points for a special party at the Hotel Olds on Friday evening; the classes of 1920 and 1921 rallied more than 150 people in the Union hallroom for the 25th silver anniversary dinner the same evening; by Saturday morning everyone on the campus noted the "WELCOME ALUMNI" sign over the west door of the Union and the registration boards in the lobby indicated that final preparations had been made for the first big peace-time Alumni Day in several years.

Harry Baker of St. Croix Falls, Wisconsin, presided at the 1895 dinner Friday evening and the work of the former secretary, Maurice Kains, who died February 25, 1946, was praised by various members present. Jackson Towne, college librarian, showed samples of the Kains bookplate and discussed the development of the Maurice Kains Memorial Collection in the library. Chace Newman showed movies of the 50th anniversary reunion and the class voted to meet annually before Alumni Day.

Maurice Rann, '21, of Lansing, was chairman of the 1920 and 1921 banquet Friday evening, naming Dr. Roy Bergman, '21, of Cassopolis, as toastmaster. The Director of Alumni Relations discussed the building program, enrollment changes and other matters that have increased the prestige of Michigan State College in recent months. The Memorial Center was outlined and unanimous approval was given this project. The Class of 1920 selected Sherman Coryell, principal of South High of Grand Rapids, to give the response for them and in a reminiscent mood he used the descriptive title "Then and Now," cleverly comparing student life of 25 years ago with activities of today. The response for 1921 was given by E. V. "Ted" Sayles, of Jackson, who stressed the need of class loyalty to the College and invited all to participate in these 5-year reunions, with special emphasis on meeting at the FIFTIETH. Three minute talks were given by former faculty members—Prof. A. J. Clark, Prof. C. W. Chapman, Miss Elida Yakeley, retired registrar, and the still active Prof. M. M. "Steve" Cory.

Saturday forenoon old grads and old friends started to fill the lobby of the Union and at noon 94 Patriarchs assembled in the mixed lounge as guests of the college for their annual dinner. Hon. William Berkey, of Cassopolis, chairman of the State Board of Agriculture, presided. As usual some of the faces of last year were missing. Death had again depleted the ranks of the Patriarchs and Rev. H. H. Gaige, of the Peoples Church read the list—Edwin A. Murphy, '82, A. C. Carton, '89, George Foote, '89, George L. McPherson, '89, Willard L. Cummings, '93, Maurice G. Kains, '95, and James S. Mitchell, '95. After quoting several poems, Rev. Gaige concluded with "As they have lent much to the College, let us bear high the bright torch of this institution and hand it on to others."

In the only talk at the Patriarchs' luncheon President John Hannah said "it is an inspiration to those of us who are responsible now for the policies of Michigan State College to see the continuing interest and enthusiasm of yourselves and the many thousands of students of the college, because what this college is today, and what it may be, pretty largely is due to the efforts of those who have built it well and made it possible to go on." After outlining the problems of expansion and the educational improvements President Hannah closed by stating "it is the desire of all of us to have this college the kind you remember and the kind you, as alumni, will approve."

The Class of 1896 was welcomed into the Patriarchs' Club by Harry Baker, of the Class of 1895 who said "The privilege of membership in the Patriarchs is not like the relationship between grand-parent and grand-child—all privilege and no responsibility. Our responsibility is to retain a lively interest in our Alma Mater, and secondly to return every year for the Patriarchs' luncheon and to meet your old classmates on Alumni Day. The third responsibility is that you people, as a class, shall undertake some worthy project to perpetuate 1896 on the college annals."

George Williams, of Chicago, responded for the Class of 1896, stating that altho only six members were present, there are 12 living graduates and 12 non-graduates, so the representation is good, although scattered all over the country. He recalled the class scraps but pointed out that the friendships formed 50 years ago were still the most memorable and that '96 hoped to fulfill the obligations so that they, too, might enjoy the privileges of membership as Patriarchs.

Many other class reunion luncheons were held in all available spaces in the Union. They included 1901, 1906, 1911, 1916, 1926, 1931, 1936, and 1941, all meeting with the same devoted loyalty as the Patriarchs.

The Class of 1901 was called together by Mark Ireland, of Flint, retired army colonel. He read dozens of letters from old classmates and before attending HOMEcoming DAY!

Saturday, November 16, 1946.

Remember the day—it's Homecoming day for all past, present, and future sons and daughters of Michigan State.

The football opposition will be Marquette, a tried and true friend and foe.

Plans are not yet complete, but be assured it will be Homecoming with all the trimmings—and you are the best of the trimmings, so the more of you who come the more the trimmings there'll be. So make your plans now!

Saturday, November 16, 1946—that's the day!

the Commencement exercises the class viewed the several cases of material in the museum donated to the college by Mr. Ireland and his wife, Irma Thompson Ireland, '00.

The Class of 1906 packed the sun-porch near the Union ballroom and L. O. "Pinky" Gordon, secretary of the class, reported the best visit ever remembered since graduation day—40 years ago.

Not to be out-done by the other 5-year groups the Class of 1911 came back with more than 40 members and guests seated at special tables where Jim Hays handled the reunion gossip as only '11 grads do it.

The class of 1916—some 50 of them with their wives and guests, called upon "Red" Granger to lead some '16 yells, and then settled down to a real reunion meeting in the corner of the ballroom. Herbert Cooper, secretary, called upon "Bob" Linton, registrar of the college, to tell some interesting things about the campus changes; "Bernie" More, of Marshall, Chairman of the National Alumni Advisory Council, to tell of the Memorial Center; Gideon Smith, of Hampton, Virginia, to recall some of his old football experiences under Coach John Macklin and several others spoke informally. Letters and telegrams were read from many who could not attend.

Because of the crowded conditions many classes confined their reunion activities to the luncheon room and met in small groups later. The Class of 1941—the baby reunion group—broke all attendance records and filled the main dining room of the Union where Starr Keesler acted as chairman and called upon several members for remarks and comments.

Alumni Day of 1946 was a gala day for all who attended—for others another year is coming.

Old '95 had such a good time last year they made it a point to come back again this year with the rest of the Patriarchs. They also had a special get-together in Lansing Friday night.

Hannah Predicts Future

Normal growth of the college, supplemented by the desire of World War II veterans to take advantage of the GI Bill of Rights, will bring an estimated total of 23,000 applications for admittance to Michigan State College in 1950, Dr. John A. Hannah has stated.

Dr. Hannah emphasized that those figures are only estimates, and indicate only the number of students which may seek admittance to the college, not necessarily the number the college will be prepared to accommodate at that time. He stated he does not anticipate the facilities will be adequate to accommodate all of the 23,000 seeking to enter in 1950.

The estimates are based on interpretation of enrollment trends at the college from 1940 to the present and the percentage of students Michigan State might normally expect to attract from the overall total seeking to further their education.

Normal growth would result in 17,000 applications by 1960, it is estimated, with no appreciable veteran enrollment to swell the figures by that time.

In the meantime the following estimates (of the number of applicants) are made:

1948	19,700
(including 9,000 veterans)
1950	23,000
(including 11,000 veterans)
1952	20,500
(including 7,600 veterans)

Actual enrollment next fall is expected to reach 10,500, for which the college expects to have the facilities, Dr. Hannah said.

State Board Accepts $7,300 In Gifts

Gifts amounting to $7,300 were accepted for Michigan State College at the May Meeting of the State Board of Agriculture. Five thousand dollars came from the estate of Robert D. Graham, of Grand Rapids, board member from 1903 to 1920. This amount will go into a trust fund, the income to be used in assisting worthy students.

The Lansing Board of Realtors presented $500 for a scholarship fund for students in the 2 year curriculum in real estate practices. Eight hundred dollars came from the Blueberry Growers' Association, South Haven, to establish fellowship in entomology, to study insect life on blueberry plants. The remaining $1,000 came from the Trucon Laboratories of Detroit, to establish a fellowship in the department of civil engineering for research on curing concrete.

Land Purchased

Michigan State College has purchased an additional 40 acres of land adjacent to the present college farms, the Board of Agriculture announced following its May meeting. The land, on the Sutherland estate at the south end of Harrison road, is west of present college property, and will be used as a horse pasture to replace that taken for veterans' housing projects.

M.S.C. To Participate In Atomic Study

Michigan State is one of 24 midwestern educational institutions which have been invited to cooperate in research toward peacetime use of atomic energy, with the facilities of a "super laboratory" in and near Chicago at the disposal of the research staff.

Dr. Ralph C. Huston, dean of the school of graduate studies and director of the division of physical sciences, has been appointed to represent M.S.C. in determining what uses this college may be able to make of the central laboratory.

Veterans Are Smarter

Veterans at Michigan State rank higher than other students scholastically in five of the seven undergraduate schools, Robert S. Linton, registrar, announced following compilation of winter term figures. The veterans led in the Schools of Agriculture, Business and Public Service, Engineering, Science and Arts, and the Basic College. The non-veterans led in the Schools of Home Economics and Veterinary Medicine. In all-college averages the veterans averaged 1.45, the non-veterans 1.44.

Class of '46 Joins Alumni

Commencement Parade, 1946, approaches College Auditorium.

Six hundred fifty candidates for bachelor's degrees and 28 for advanced degrees were honored at the eighty-eighth annual commencement of Michigan State College on Saturday, June 8. In addition three honorary doctorates were presented by Dr. John A. Hannah, president of the college.

Two alumni of the college received honorary degrees. Charles N. Frey, '11, a native of Hopkins, Michigan, was awarded the Doctor of Science degree. He is the author or co-author of 108 scientific papers and co-author of 68 patents. He aided in the development of active dry yeast, the use of cane molasses in yeast growing, and improvement in processing of frozen eggs. He previously has earned the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

Paul S. Armstrong, '15, well-known California business and civic leader, received the degree of Doctor of Agriculture. He entered the employ of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange in 1916, and worked up through various executive positions to that of general manager, which position he holds today. As advertising manager of the organization he began the promotion of vitamin content and other helpful properties of citrus fruit.

The third honorary degree was presented to Ping Wen Tsou, president of the Agricultural Association of China, who also received the Doctor of Agriculture degree. He has held various important positions in the Chinese government and is at present vice-chairman of the United Nations interim commission on food and agriculture.

The commencement address was given by Dr. Edmund E. Day, president of Cornell University, who chose as his subject: "The Three-Fold Responsibilities of Education in a Free Society." In the speech, Dr. Day called for a broad realignment of educational programs and a wide remobilization of educational forces as essential to the success of education in meeting the demands of a free society in a world of atomic power.

"The overall responsibility of education," he said, "is to raise the level of the peoples' intelligence." This responsibility is three-fold in that it calls for development of three types of intelligence, practical, social and moral.

Dr. Day spoke strongly for practical intelligence, saying that, "Civilization of the technical sort we have in America today could not exist without a vast range of practical education." This type of education has to do with the managing of our individual affairs, looking toward the acquisition of specific skills or the inculcation of designated habits.

"Social education has to do with our ways of carrying on in large social groups, the most important of which is governmental," Dr. Day explained, and "moral education has to do with the kind of life we intend to lead."

The speaker paid tribute to the land-grant schools and universities for their contributions in the field of education and at the same time issued fresh challenges for the future.

He pointed out that it was toward practical education that the work of land-grant institutions was initially directed, and it is in this area of practical arts that these schools have made their most notable contributions. "In agricultural education and research a demonstration was made in these institutions of practical education at its best."

Dr. Day warned that the land-grant schools have not had impressive records in the field of social and moral education. "The time has come when the United States of America cannot get along without comprehensive social policies clearly formulated, widely understood and generally supported by the American people. This calls for a great extension of the work of the colleges of the country in the field of social education."

This, he went on, is even more true of moral education. "Formal public education in this country has given relatively slight attention to the development of moral intelligence. The early leaders of this country intended religion and morality to be a direct charge to the educational system of the country. It is my considered opinion," he said, "that, unless this charge is accepted by formal education, we have little chance of developing the moral intelligence essential to our survival as a free people."

In closing, Dr. Day said: "The future of mankind lies in the realm of the mind and spirit rather than of body and brute power, and it is through education in all its varied forms that the mind and spirit of man have to be shaped, to meet the requirements of the world into which we have now entered. A prompt mobilization of all available educational forces must be effected and effected without delay."

The commencement program marked the end of undergraduate activities for the graduating seniors. A week earlier, on June 2, Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, minister of the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, Cleveland, in his baccalaureate address declared: "Beauty is a strange thing—millions of people cry for it, sigh for it, paint for it, faint for it, but will not take the time to learn what it is."

Americans buy beauty in "cheap doses of artificial glamor, and the total bill in the United States runs to two billion dollars a year," Dr. Clausen said. But the results do not comprise true beauty, as he pointed out that of 15 recent winners of the Atlantic City beauty pageant, "eight had their lives wrecked by tragic divorce, one was almost killed by a jealous wife, another killed her own husband and fled from justice."

Dr. Clausen defined real beauty as being another's good, the finished language which goodness speaks, the mark God puts upon virtue. "It is not enough to make people like you—you must make people want to be like you." He closed his address: "If we can induce people to look first at us, and then up beyond us toward the Christ we adore and obey, until they see his beauty and long like us to be like him, then our careers will be complete."

Michigan State has an aggregate percentage of .583 to show for its 1945-46 year in sports. Spartan athletic teams—11 of the even dozen sponsored in pre-war years—won 67 of 115 dual engagements while losing 48 and tying four.

Back in intercollegiate competition for the second year since wreathed in silence by the war, Spartan athletic teams engaged schedules superior to prewar vintage sans benefit of military personnel. They simply plugged away and, according to the figures, came out well on top.

Boxing marked the latest to return to Michigan State's sports front. With newly-named Lou Zarza as head coach, a makeshift schedule produced one tie and three defeats. The next year or so will see polo, the lone dormant spot, reactivated.

Sitting atop the pack with the best record is Coach John Kobs' baseball team. The diamond crew got off to a flying start by winning all nine games of a southern tour and then annexed 12 of 17 games in their regular schedule to compile a .808 percentage.

With Russ Reader, Dearborn, Mich., sophomore pitching passes with uncanny accuracy and pacing the ground attack as well, Coach Charlie Bachman's football team captured five of nine games, tying one. Missouri's Big Six champions and powerful Penn State were among the victims. Reader became one of the nation's leading passers with 53 completions in 90 attempts and consequently is counted upon to figure heavily in next fall's plans of 10 games.

Perhaps no team captured fancy as did Coach Ben Van Alstyne's basketball outfit which not only knocked more Spartan records in a cocked hat but which, despite nine defeats in 21 starts, was rated the ninth best in the middle west and the 15th best in the nation. A back-breaking schedule featured the nation's top teams.

For the second straight year a Spartan was rated the most valuable college basketball player in the state, Robin Roberts, Springfield, Ill., sophomore winning the honor. Roberts succeeded Team-mate Sam Fortino, Alma senior. Both won places on the all state college team.

Evidence of vaulting power was made by Coach Karl Schlademan's track squads. Indoors, the record was 2-1-1 while outdoors the thinnies annexed three of four dual meets. They also dominated the Drake Relays, placed fourth in a field of 33 teams at the IC4A affair, and second to Illinois in the Central Collegiate meet, in addition to winning top honors at various Relays about the country.

Coach Fendley Collins' matmen upheld Spartan strong tradition, winning five of eight matches that included one tie. They also annexed six Michigan AAU titles.

In swimming, Michigan State rapidly surges forward. The toughest schedule of all time produced four triumphs in seven starts, a repeat of the Central Collegiate Championship and third place in the National Collegiate indoor meet. Coach Charlie McCaffree's natators broke every existing varsity record and set a couple of new N.C.A.A. marks.

Perhaps no team showed such marked improvement as did golf. A year ago, Coach Van Alstyne's links-men lost five meets; this year they won seven of 12. Tennis ran into tough luck, winning four of 14. Six of the 10 defeats were by 5-4 scores.

The fencing team scored three triumphs in seven starts while the cross country runners showed their heels in one of three meets.

Competing as one of the nation's major independent institutions, Michigan State, against Western Conference competition won 23 of 47 dual engagements, just one short of gaining better than an even break.

The Spartan basketball team was the chief offender, sinking five Western Conference opponents in seven starts while the baseball, swimming and wrestling teams ranked next, each winning four out of six meets.

Shortstop Hansen Named Captain Of 1947 Nine

Naming of captains for the 1947 season and honorary captains of the past year comprised the final act for the quartet of spring teams which completed Michigan State's season in athletics.

Martin Hansen, rifle-armed shortstop from Flint, was chosen by his mates to lead the 1947 baseball team. Marty, a sophomore, is a mild-mannered lad whose leadership and ability will be exemplary. At the close of the season, he was named to added honors, representing Michigan State in the first annual collegiate All Star baseball game in Boston.

Golf, tennis and track selected honorary captains, the latter sport also naming a new leader for next year.

James E. Funston, Detroit junior, was honored by the golfers as was Roger E. Cessna, Lansing senior by the netmen. Ted M. Wonch, Lansing senior, was honored by the outdoor track squad which also selected James M. Fraser, Webberville junior, to lead next year's squad. All are ex-servicemen.

Here is a fast account for other squad leaders of the past season: Football, Jack Breslin, Battle Creek senior, honorary; wrestling, Ignatius Konrad, Cleveland junior, honorary; basketball, Oliver White Cleveland senior, honorary; fencing, Jack Connell, Milwaukee junior, honorary; cross country, Walter Mack, Buffalo junior, honorary and for the 1947 season as well; boxing, Douglas Hooth, Kalamazoo sophomore, honorary.

The swimming team will name its new captain next fall, James Thomas, Saginaw junior, leading the squad during the past season.

Holsinger Leaves M.S.C.

After serving on the athletic staff since 1939, Joseph F. Holsinger has departed from coaching and at present is engaged in the retail dairy business at Jefferson City, Mo.

Succeeding Holsinger as backfield coach is John S. Pingel, Michigan State's All America in 1938 who joined the staff late last fall following 55 months in the Army.

Band To Play Again

Director Leonard V. Falcone announces the return to the gridiron of the Michigan State College band for the 1946 football season.

Suspended in 1943 because of the war, the marching band is a vestige returning campus routine to normal postwar effort. For the past two football seasons, the organization has contributed to Spartan football color rendering music from the stands.

In a sensational finish, Walter Mack nips Bobby Ginn, Nebraska's 1941 NCAA mile champion, to give Michigan State the 1946 Drake Relays two mile relay championship. The time—7:57.3.

This year's performance marked the Spartans as the dominant team of the Drake Relays. No other school equalled Michigan State's performance in winning the two mile relay, the sprint medley relay, placing third in the half mile relay, fourth in the quarter mile relay, fifth in the mile relay and fourth place in the discus.

Summer Enrollment Record Is Set

A new enrollment record for the summer session was set at Michigan State this year, with 4,331 students registering for the various summer courses. Of this number, 3,138 were men and 1,193 were women. It is possible that the final number will be even larger, with some late enrollments and later short courses swelling the figure.

Highest previous summer enrollment was approximately 2,600. A year ago only 1,615 students enrolled for the summer courses. Desires of veterans to pursue their higher education as quickly as possible, together with uncertainty of their draft future for recent high school graduates, are considered the main factors in boosting the enrollment this year.

Spartan Nine Wins 21 Out of 26

Here are results of Michigan State's 1946 baseball games, 21 victories as against five defeats comprising the best record in history. The Spartans played all games but one, a return engagement with Notre Dame being rained out.

No Smoking Tradition Upheld By Vote

The no-smoking-on-the-campus tradition that has stood unchallenged on Michigan State campus since the college's earliest days was endorsed by a student vote held under student council sponsorship on June 7, by a margin of 1,703 to 1,501.

In the past year much opposition, and even open disregard, of the tradition has been noticed on the campus. The student council, anxious to determine student opinion on the subject, called for the all-college vote.

As a result of the majority vote of the students favoring observance of the tradition, the student council is considering possible enforcement measures, provided an appeal to the student body for universal observance goes unheeded.

Patton Library

At its June meeting the State Board of Agriculture accepted for the college the professional library of the late Dr. Harold S. Patton, former head of the department of economics, from the widow, Mrs. Marguerite Patton.

Following Alumni Clubs

By Glen O. Stewart

Allegan-Van Buren

Representatives of Allegan and Van Buren counties met at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Barden, near South Haven, on May 31, to hear the Director of Alumni Relations give a detailed account of alumni club organizations, constitutions and needs of functional committees. The group voted to form a new Michigan State College Alumni Club of Allegan-Van Buren counties and elected 12 people to comprise the new Board of Directors. The Directors will name the officers of the new organization and appoint committee chairmen.—Don Barden, '35, acting chairman.

Detroit

The second annual "Program of Music" by the faculty of the College was presented in the lecture hall auditorium of the Detroit Art Institute on April 30. More than 45 alumni and friends were welcomed by Coy Eklund, '39, new president of the Detroit Alumni Club. So well received was the musical that the Board of Directors has extended an invitation to Professor Roy Underwood and his staff to plan for a similar program next spring.

Nine committees for various functions are being organized for the club activities. Under the direction of Fred Hunter, '41, a news bulletin "Off The Record," was published in May. If you did not receive your copy, write Fred at 1032 Buhl building. Stan Pilzner, '39, is chairman of the committee which has arranged for M.S.C. folks to have luncheon together every Monday noon at the Union Guardian cafeteria. We hear that Russell Holcomb, '39, and his committee are working on a summer "family style picnic." There will be lots of activity this fall. Call Coy Eklund at Cherry 8400, or the secretary at Townsend 6-5595.—Mrs. Bette Stevenson Crook, '43, secretary.

Manila

The alumni relations office is indebted to Lt. Robert M. Holland, '44, formerly of Detroit, for inviting and entertaining more than 30 officers and enlisted Michigan State men at the Base X Transient Billets in Manila on March 23. A wonderful buffet supper with plenty of fresh food was served by Lt. A. A. Hartshorn, '44, formerly of Dayton, Ohio, and Lt. William Kemppainen, '44, formerly of Chassell, of the QM Farm. Practically all of the men who attended the meeting are now discharged or enroute to the States. The previous meeting was held June 9, a year ago, with Ruth Ryder, '36, as chairman.

Flint

Mrs. Harold Maloney, '38, acted as chairman of the annual get-together of the Genesee county M.S.C. Alumni Club. More than 130 people gathered at the Christ Episcopal church house in Flint on May 2. Lyle L. Clark, '34, president of the club, introduced R. C. "Cap" Lott, '29, as toastmaster of the evening and the entertainment feature of stories and readings was given by Mrs. Moiree Compere, faculty member of the speech and dramatics department.

Glen Stewart, director of alumni relations, discussed the proposed Memorial Center and the need for better organized alumni clubs. The guest speaker was President John A. Hannah, who vividly told of the rapidly expanding services of the college, its challenging problems and the plans for the future. Board members elected for a three year term included Mrs. Louella Harris, '16, Mrs. Thelma Randolph, '35, and Harold Maloney, '36.—Mrs. Glen Cline (Helen Noonan, '40), secretary.

Oakland County

E. L. Karkau, '21, of Pontiac, was elevated to the presidency of the M.S.C. Alumni Club of Oakland county at the annual meeting May 8 in the Birmingham Community House, with Harold Gasser, '25, Birmingham, as vice-president and Everett Garrison, Pontiac, as secretary-treasurer. James B. Baynes, '24, retiring president, was in charge of the meeting.

Asserting that restraints should be placed on labor, but stressing he did not deny the rights of unions to organize, Professor Herman Wyngarden, department of economics head of the college, gave an interesting discussion on "What Labor Wants." Glen O. Stewart, of the alumni office, told of the housing difficulties for women students and how thousands of Michigan veterans were seeking an education under the G.I. Bill of Rights. Entertaining readings were given by Mrs. Moiree Compere, of the speech and dramatics department.—Earl L. Clark, '26, chairman.

Midland

Under the presidency of John Strahan, '39, one of the most interesting meetings in recent years was held by the M.S.C. Alumni Club of Midland county when more than 110 old grads and friends met at the Sportsman Club in Midland on June 12. Speakers for the evening from the campus were Dean Ralph C. Huston, of the Graduate School, Miss Jeannette Lee, assistant to the Dean of Home Economics, and John Pingel, '39, assistant football coach. Under the program being used by all alumni clubs a new board of directors of nine members was named by the club and they will elect their own officers for the coming year.—Detty L. Ziegler, '37, secretary.

Chicago

More than 150 Michigan State men and women of the Chicago alumni club

met at the Garfield Park Auditorium on April 26 to hear President John A. Hannah tell of the problems arising from a doubled enrollment, and to outline the various changes taking place in the physical plant and new staff. He answered many questions which members of the club asked at the close of the meeting.

Special music was arranged by Glen O. Stewart, also a guest. He brought from the college Professor Roy Underwood, pianist and head of the music department, Raymond Kock, baritone, and Alexander Schuster, 'cellist. G. M. Glidden, '17, president, was in charge of the meeting and board members named for a three year term were William Davidson, '13, Nellie Freeden, '17, Tom Jordan, '10, Arthur V. Mooney, '18, and Leslie Scott, '35.—Marion Gardner, '42, secretary.

Lenawee County

Emphasizing the need for American citizens to re-orient their ideas on how peace can be achieved Dr. Hans Leonhardt, associate professor of history and political science addressed more than 75 people at the annual dinner meeting of the M.S.C. Alumni Club of Lenawee county in the Baptist church in Adrian, May 7. He used for his subject "The Problems of Peace." Glen Stewart told of the building program and changes at the college.

The guest of honor was Harry A. Fee, of Adrian, whose generous gift of Hidden Lake Gardens in the Irish Hills was recently received by the college. Mr. Fee was voted an honorary member of the local alumni club.

Mrs. B. F. Beach, '14, retiring president, presided throughout the meeting and at the annual business meeting the following officers were named for next year: Walter Frazier, '20, Adrian, president; Rev. Willard Thomas, '40, Blissfield, first vice-president; Mrs. Ayesha Raven Laidlaw, '16, Tecumseh, second vice-president, and Mrs. Paulina Raven Morse, '05, Jasper, secretary-treasurer.—Mrs. W. Morden Smith, '32, secretary.

Milwaukee

Meeting at the Hotel Wisconsin in Milwaukee on April 27, more than 30 members of the Michigan State College Club of Milwaukee heard Glen Stewart, guest speaker from the college, tell of the Memorial Center, planned in memory of the 320 men lost during World War II. A question and answer period followed in which each person participated and many enlightening items were discussed. Thor Bank, Jr., not only presided but acted as photographer with the result shown. John Kline, '42, was named president and a board of directors of six was named to plan meetings and projects for next year.—Pauline Chelbar, '45, secretary.

Washington

Taking advantage of the presence of Dean Howard Rather, '17, more than 60

Michigan State men and women met at the Willard hotel on April 5. Dean Rather stressed the development of the Basic College program during the past two years and told of the problems confronting the college by the hundreds of returned veterans. Ray A. Turner, '09, president of the club, discussed the Alumni Award for Distinguished Service and a committee was appointed to assist Mr. Turner in making the selections for the first year. This committee consisted of C. D. Curtis, '11, C. A. Reed, '05, and Mrs. R. J. Baldwin, Jr., '41.

John Pingel, '39, assistant football coach, spoke at the annual dinner meeting of the club in the Continental hotel, June 3, when more than 75 alumni were present. Pingel told of the building program, student enrollment and outlined the athletic expansion now possible with a student body of 8,200. C. R. Oviatt, '16, was elected president for the next year.—Mrs. Irvin Holmes (Pauline Gibson, '28), secretary.

Captain "Sarge" Atchison Leaves Service

After nearly 27 years of service with the ROTC at Michigan State, Captain James H. Atchison, probably better known to most ex-military students as "Sarge" Atchison, has retired from the army and from service on the staff of the college.

He came to East Lansing in 1919 as the first instructor in the post-war ROTC, and remained on duty here ever since. At the start of World War II he received a commission, advancing from his Tech Sergeant rating.

During his army days Atchison instructed among others, Dr. John A. Hannah, present college president, during his student days here, and Colonel J. L. Whitelaw, present commandant of the ROTC unit here, while at Fort Monroe, Virginia, in 1919.

Dr. Ernst A. Bessey, distinguished professor of botany at Michigan State College, received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from his alma mater, the University of Nebraska, at commencement exercises in Lincoln on May 27. It was the 50th anniversary of Dr. Bessey's graduation from that university.

Dr. Bessey has been associated with Michigan State College for 35 years, serving as teacher, research specialist, head of the botany department, and dean of the graduate school. He retired from the staff on June 30. He also holds the doctor of philosophy degree, bestowed upon him by the University of Halle, Germany.

Days of Yore

By Madison Kuhn
and Joseph G. Duncan

It must have been a hot May or June day when President Robert S. Shaw (left) and Secretary Herman H. Halladay sat down to sign diplomas. The year was either 1923 or 1924. The man who is now President Emeritus Shaw headed the agricultural department and division from 1902 to 1928, served as acting president in 1921, 1923 and 1928, and president in his own right from 1928 to 1941. More M.A.C. and M.S.C. diplomas bear his signature than that of any other president of the college. Mr. Halladay, who died in September 1943, served as Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture from 1922 to 1934.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

*How a Returned
Soldier or Sailor May Enter College*

Since the introduction in 1945, M. A. C. has endeavored to meet the educational needs of the armed forces of the state. It has provided the conditions of the government in the preparation of new law service to students by the large number of returning soldiers in all branches of military service.

Now that the war is over and the boys are returning, M. A. C. welcomes them and gives the opportunity to which they may prefer to enter. They should also inform us in advance that they are new.

A novel view of Beaumont Tower is a major ambition of every amateur photographer on the campus. This is how State's most photographed structure looked like on Dec. 7, 1928. The picture lacks the glamour of the tree-shrouded tower as alumni of the 1930's and '40's recall it, but everything of beauty must go through the construction stage. Erected on the site of College Hall, the College's first office-classroom building, the tower is the gift of the late Mr. and Mrs. John W. Beaumont. Mr. Beaumont was a member of the class of 1882 and served 12 years as a member of the State Board of Agriculture.

Interior of the tower has been more or less sacred, open only to the carillonist and to meetings of Tower Guard. The current shortage of campus office space has made necessary the use of two floors of the building as temporary offices for several new instructors in the Basic College.

The men in the picture at the bottom of this page were not on a vacation trip in June 1888. They were studying vegetation in the heart of the cut-over country of the lower peninsula of Michigan. Their trip resulted in some of the earliest efforts of research workers to adapt farming and reforestation practices to the type of soil in that area.

In a covered wagon, the group followed abandoned logging roads from Harrisville on Lake Huron, through Grayling to Frankfort on Lake Michigan.

Dr. William C. Bagley, '95 professor emeritus at Teachers College, Columbia university, New York, and since 1939 editor of School and Society, weekly educational magazine, died at his home, 200 W. 58th street, New York, on July 1, following an illness of about a month.

Dr. Bagley until his death was extremely interested in Michigan State college and played a prominent part in its alumni activities. A year ago he spoke in behalf of his class in accepting membership in the Patriarchs' club on Alumni Day. This year he had planned on giving the speech of welcome to the class of 1896, but his final illness prevented his attendance.

He also was scheduled to come to Michigan State College this summer during late June and July to appear on a seminar in the department of education summer program. However, his illness also prevented that.

Dr. Bagley was born in Detroit, March 15, 1874, and graduated from Michigan Agricultural college with a Bachelor of Science degree in 1895. He continued his studies at the University of Wisconsin, where he received his master's degree, and at Cornell university, Ithaca, New York, where he received a Doctor of Philosophy degree in 1900. The doctorate was in psychology, neurology and education.

He received the honorary degree of Doctor of Education from Rhode Island State college in 1919, and in 1940 was honored by his own Alma Mater with the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

Dr. Bagley began his long career as an educator in normal and public schools in Montana and New York. In 1908 he joined the faculty of the University of Illinois, where he became professor of education. He also served as director of the school of education and also director of the summer sessions until 1917.

In 1917 he became professor of education at Teachers college, Columbia university. He served in that position for 22 years, retiring in August, 1939. After a year on sabbatical leave he was honored with the position of professor emeritus of education in 1940.

The New York Times, in a lengthy obituary, termed Dr. Bagley a leader in the "Essentialist" school of philosophy of education. "Dr. Bagley," the paper said, "was a frequent critic of progressive education. He was a firm advocate of sound methods in education, with the stress on discipline and on mastery of simple fundamentals first."

Through his career Dr. Bagley founded several important educational journals, and was at one time or another honored with election to the presidency of several national educational groups, including the National Council of Education, the National Society for the Study of Education, and the Society of College Teachers of Education. He also served as editor-in-chief of the Journal of the National Education Association, and was a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. For many years he was president of Kappa Delta Pi, honorary education fraternity.

Dr. Bagley published more than 20 important textbooks in the field of education and history, including four books on which he collaborated with Dr. Charles A. Beard, noted historian. In addition, he wrote many research and survey reports, and articles and reviews in educational and general publications.

Dr. Bagley is survived by his widow, the former Florence MacLean Winger, of Lincoln, Nebraska; a daughter, Mrs. William B. Cobb, and a son, William C. Bagley Jr.

Dr. Thomas H. Osgood Heads Division

Dr. Thomas H. Osgood, who has been head of the physics department at M.S.C. since 1941, was named director of the Division of Physical Sciences at the June 20 meeting of the State Board of Agriculture. He replaces Dean R. C. Huston, who has been acting director since reorganization of the college's divisions in 1944. Dean Huston will continue as dean of the Graduate School.

Prior to coming to Michigan State, Dr. Osgood was head of the department of physics at the University of Toledo from 1934 to 1941. For a year before that he was engaged in his own research work in Prof. Arthur H. Compton's laboratory at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Rufus H. Pettit, 77, head of the entomology department at Michigan State College for 26 years prior to his retirement in 1933, died June 1, in a Lansing hospital following a long illness. He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Jessie A. Pettit, of 236 Cowley avenue, East Lansing, two daughters, Mrs. M. J. Reed, also of East Lansing, and Mrs. M. S. Nelson, of Indianapolis, Indiana, and five grandchildren.

Professor Pettit was known throughout the world for his work in entomology, and was considered an authority on the subject. He was born in Baldwinsville, New York, January 11, 1869, and spent his early life there. He graduated from Cornell University in 1895, with the degree of bachelor of science in agriculture.

For a short time thereafter he was assistant state entomologist of the state of Minnesota. He left that post to come to East Lansing on January 1, 1897, as instructor in zoology and assistant entomologist at the college experiment station, serving under the late Professor W. B. Barrows.

In June, 1906, the department of entomology was created at the then Michigan Agricultural College and Professor Pettit was named as its head. He was honored by the college with the degree of Doctor of Science in 1931. Two years later he retired due to illness.

Five More Apartments Are Approved For Veterans

At its June 20 meeting, the State Board of Agriculture approved the plans for construction of five additional permanent apartment buildings for married veterans. Work on the project will start as soon as possible, with hopes that the buildings will be ready for occupancy by February 1, 1947.

Construction is already under way on six other similar apartment buildings. The five additional buildings will provide eighty apartments, containing one or two bedrooms, and will be located on South Harrison road near the present project. Cost of the five new buildings is estimated at $734,000, to be self-liquidated from rent revenues.

The board also approved gifts totaling $12,475. The gifts came from various organizations, and will be used in specified types of research, with the exception of one anonymous $1,000 gift to be used at the discretion of the board.

Twenty-seven new faculty appointments were approved, and resignations of nine members of the faculty were accepted.

A. Hathaway, Bert W. Peet, W. K. Sagendorph, Charles Smith, and Dor N. Stowell, '92; Lyman J. Briggs, Katharine Cook Briggs, A. B. Cook, and Edwin Peters, '93; Cecil J. Barnum, Ernest V. Johnston, and J. W. Perrigo, '94; William A. Ansoorge, Harry D. Baker, Guy Frace, Merritt Fulton, Frank Johnson, I. R. Jones, S. C. Laitner, A. C. MacKinnon, Chace Newman, Harrie Parish, Howard R. Smith, and Thorn Smith, '95.

From the golden anniversary class of 1896 were R. L. Clute of Grand Bay, Alabama; C. A. Jewell of Pittsford, Michigan; John F. Nellist of Grand Rapids; Dwight T. Randall of Detroit; Dr. Zachary Veldhuis of Hamilton, Michigan; O. P. West of Flint; and George W. Williams of Chicago.

John Chase Morgan, '78, founder and president of the John C. Morgan Company of Traverse City, Michigan, died in that city on June 10. Noted for canning and preserving cherries and apple products, the John C. Morgan company was established in 1877, with Mr. Morgan serving as president and general manager. Until his death in 1940, Howard C. Morgan, '13, was executive vice president of the company, and was one of Mr. Morgan's four children associated in the business. Of his five grandchildren, two attended Michigan State College, Gary S. Morgan, graduating in 1935, and John C., enrolled with the class of 1944.

About a half mile south of Napoleon, Michigan, Lewis G. Palmer, '85, and his wife live in the house in which he was born, built by his great grandfather in 1846 on land granted him in 1832. Mr. Palmer holds a deed signed by President Andrew Jackson in 1832 granting the land to his great grandfather, Roswell Rexford. He also holds another deed, signed by Martin VanBuren in 1837, granting an additional adjoining parcel of land to his forefathers. The main portion of the house is the same today as it was 1846. The joists are of tamarack, smoothed on one side with the bark still remaining on some. It is a nine-room structure with double thick brick walls, brick partitions, 10-foot ceilings and an 8-foot basement. Mr. Palmer's parents acquired the property in 1862 and Mr. and Mrs. Palmer have lived there since 1900.

Lewis W. Spaulding, '90, writes that he and his wife are living in the small fishing and lumbering town of Warrenton, Oregon, on the bank of the Skipanong river. During the war he taught machine shop work in the vocational school in Vancouver, Washington, and most of his students worked in the Kaiser ship yards. His last work at the machinist trade was in a fish cannery in Astoria, Oregon, last fall.

Carl A. Kelley, former village clerk, deputy sheriff, and city health officer of Brighton, Michigan, died at his home there on November 1, 1945. He is survived by his wife, a son, and a daughter.

Many members of the class who could not attend the reunion responded to Secretary Ireland's suggestion that they write a note to be read at the dinner. George Chadsey wrote from Washington, D. C., that "it would be a real rejuvenation to reminisce with our old classmates, many of whom I have not seen since 1901." From Mason, Michigan, Grace Melton Green (Mrs. Burt L.) wrote that she had recently returned home from the Ingham County Sanatorium at Lansing. She inquired especially for news of Deborah Garfield Decker, her former roommate. . . . "Give my very best to all the 'oldsters' and, if I am still in the land of the living, I shall surely join them in 1951," writes Robert R. L. Bigelow from New York City, and continues "You say the paint stains are all gone. Pure carelessness on my part, and in 1951 I will bring my paint brush and some red paint. These old land marks should be preserved." . . . Hugh P. Baker, president of Massachusetts State College at Amherst, could not attend the reunion because commencement activities at that institution fell on the same weekend, and adds: "I am sure that I shall be free enough to attend the 50th. There are so many of you whom I should like to powwow with and so much of the old and the new to see." . . .

From Morgantown, West Virginia, D. B. Finch sent greetings and briefly described his work as vocational adviser working with veterans at West Virginia University. He reported his last visit to the campus in 1930 on the occasion of the graduation of his daughter. . . . D. B. Jewell wrote that he retired last October 1 and hadn't "had a dull moment since. Am busy around home digging and I mean that literally in garden and generally trying to do the things that have been put off." . . . Vesta Woodbury Marshall wrote from St. Louis, Missouri: "It is with great regret that I must say I will not be at the reunion. I am still doing volunteer work in Red Cross, am director of the Washington University Hospital Production unit with 238 women on my roll, so cannot walk out at the moment." . . .

Dr. Robert Starr Northrop sent his regrets from Napa, California, and reported that his four sons were Stanford graduates but his only daughter finished at Michigan State in 1943. . . . Herbert S. Putney wrote from Topeka, Kansas, where he has a highway products company, that he has two sons and a daughter. . . . Harry J. Eustace, of Berkeley, California, sent "greetings and apologies for not being with you today—too great a distance is the only good reason." . . . From Sanford, Florida, came greetings from Mary Knaggs Stone who enclosed a picture of herself, her daughter Carol, '30, her son James, '30, and his wife, the former Mary Clark, '28, and their 9-year-old daughter, Eva Mary. . . . William Treadwell's letter came from Great Falls, Montana, and enclosed was a descriptive folder of the Treadwell Nursery company. . . . R. A. Whitney wrote from Justine, California, that his work as milk analyst for the Carnation company prevented his attendance at the reunion, but he sent greetings and hoped the problem of the Wolverines could be solved!
