THE NATURE AND FUNCTION OF A UNIVERSITY

ON JUNE 7, 1954 Dr. Thomas H. Hamilton, Dean of the Basic College, presented a paper dealing with the nature and functions of a University before the Michigan State College chapter of the American Association of University Professors. Although it is too long to reproduce in its entirety, the editors of THE RECORD felt that its readers would like to see the concluding paragraphs of the paper.

A UNIVERSITY is a social institution and as such it is shaped both by the tradition of such institutions and the culture in which it operates. Thus to expect contemporary American universities to fit precisely criteria set forth for other times or other places is unrealistic. The problem which each society has with tradition is the retention of that essential portion which remains valid and adapting it for optimum operations under changed conditions. It seems to me that the essential part of the university tradition still having validity is that the primary purpose of a university is to improve the intellectual and cultural level of the society in which it operates. I am using the term intellectual, incidentally, in the sense that it is a part of virtue but not the whole of it, and culture to me is a broader term than sometimes conceived and specifically has material as well as non-material attributes.

» I am not sure that the dichotomy between teaching and research, which Newman affirms, is a valid one. Many examples can be found, I think, of both research and teaching of a high quality being combined in the same individual. In any event, our modern American universities seem to combine these without too much difficulty, and I think that at least in our culture we are safe in assuming that both teaching and research are proper functions of a university.

» I do not entirely agree that the separation between pure and applied is a very useful one. We know that many, if not most, of the significant advances in applied fields are dependent in the first instance upon progress in the so-called pure. But it is also true in some measure that pure or theoretical research profits from the attempts at application. Therefore, I think that neither should be excluded from a university, but since our culture is one which gives support and emphasis to the applied, I should say that it is the unique function of the university to give primary emphasis to the pure or theoretical. Perhaps it would be well if there were plaques on many university buildings engraved with the words of Alfred North Whitehead, "Science is almost wholly the outgrowth of pleasureable intellectual curiosity."

» The attempts to limit for all time the subject matters appropriate for either teaching or research in a university seem to have failed. University faculties probably are right in at times resisting the introduction of new areas, since tradition and custom are not forces which should be dealt with lightly. Yet, new areas are introduced as times change, and this seems to me to be inevitable. I think that the criteria for what should be the subject of teaching and research in a university cannot at any given time be limited by a list of subjects. It seems to me that the criteria must be stated in terms of principles. The principles probably are the product of asking certain questions: Is the area under consideration of sufficient complexity to warrant turning the resources of a university to it? Is the subject capable of theoretical and abstract formulation? And finally, is advancement in teaching and research in this area important in improving the intellectual and cultural level of the society as I have defined the terms?

» It seems to me, finally, that I can agree with two additional propositions. The first of these is that the function of a university is to enable one to shed details in favor of principles. This means, as I view it, that it is the function of a university in both teaching and research to lead its students and research apprentices as rapidly as possible from the specific, the concrete and the particular to the general, the abstract, the theoretical. And second, all of these things a university must do with imagination: which means, to quote Whitehead, "A university is imaginative or it is nothing, at least nothing useful The tragedy of the world is that those who are imaginative have but slight experience and those who are experienced have feeble imaginations. Fools act on imagination without knowledge; pedants act on knowledge without imagination. The task of a university is to weld together imagination and experience."

SMALL communities eager for the cultural entertainments of a large university may have their pick of concerts and drama, even though they may be too far away to travel to the campus.

Once again, theater, concert and song are featured in the second Cap and Gown series. These programs have been selected to bring outstanding entertainment to Michigan communities, as well as to give service organizations, alumni clubs, women's groups and high schools an opportunity to raise funds for community projects.

Received enthusiastically on a trial run last year, these entertainment groups were sponsored by local organizations in 16 Michigan communities and performed before some 11,000 people.

This year the Cap and Gown series will offer the M.S.C. concert band, the Men's Glee Club, the A Cappella choir and the symphony orchestra. In addition, music faculty members, who have studied abroad under some of the world's most noted musicians, will display their fine musicianship in string quartets and in brass, woodwind and vocal ensembles.

The drama will be "The Male Animal," a laugh-rousing comedy by James Thurber and Elliot Nugent.

Under the management of John McGoff, '50, the Cap and Gown series presents the best talent of Michigan State faculty and students. All talent is being recruited from the School of Science and Arts. "We hope to present excellent entertainment," Dean Milton E. Muelder said, "and at the same time provide our students with the opportunity of obtaining professional theater and concert experience."

Transfer of the Cap and Gown project from the Alumni Office to Continuing Education Service fits the concept of Continuing Education as the "arm of the College" reaching out to serve all Michigan residents, Dean Edgar L. Harden said.

Artist Commissioned To Paint Scenes Of Early MSC History For Year Book

A highlight of the 1954 Wolverine will be color reproductions of six original oil paintings by John Coppin, Bloomfield Hills, portraitist and illustrator.

The series of paintings opens with a portrayal of a student in a buckboard arriving at the clearing in the wilderness that was Michigan Agricultural College in the mid 1800's. Another depicts such events as the work of W. J. Beal with the hybridization of corn in the 80's.

The Wolverine Staff, publishing a 700-page centennial edition as part of the great 1955 program, mailed brochures to more than 40,000 alumni, describing contents of the book. Orders resulting from these brochures are expected to make possible a 10,000 press-run on the edition. This is believed to be the largest ever attempted by a college yearbook.

"We are attempting the most comprehensive yearbook in American collegiate history," says Burton Gerber, editor. "It will be a 700-page volume depicting the past and present history of Michigan State College in pictures and copy in a way that will warm the hearts of both alumni and students."

Nearly 200 old photographs have been copied and restored for use in the centennial section. They cover a 100-year span, including 1857 photographs of "Saint's Rest," the college's original boarding house, and historic Old College Hall.

Michigan State alumni this year, for the first time, are being given an opportunity to order copies of the Wolverine, the M.S.C. yearbook.

Douglas Coulter, business manager, said that the price of the yearbook was to remain at $6.00, as a special service to alumni.

Order blanks for the Wolverine were contained in the brochures. However, copies may be ordered directly by mailing a check for $6.50, which includes the mailing costs, directly to the 1955 Wolverine, Union Building, Michigan State College.

Clubs to Benefit From New Program Service

A newly created Centennial Program Service will provide clubs and organizations throughout Michigan with a wide selection of programs to help in celebrating M.S.C.'s 100th anniversary.

About 100 programs will be available, college officials announced, using the resources of Michigan State's faculty and staff. There will be no charge other than transportation and for such expenses as are incurred by the staff member in presenting the program.

Subjects range from art, health, education, agriculture and geology to such lighter subjects as "Who's Laughing?", and "Broadway's Leading Ladies."

Centennial Director Alvie L. Smith expressed the hope that every community in the state will join with the College in 1955 in special commemoration of its Centennial.

Specific program information may be obtained from Dr. Gordon L. Thomas, Centennial Program Service, Wells Hall, Michigan State College.

Alumni Plan to Celebrate "Founders Month"

Many on-campus activities have been planned to observe Michigan State's Centennial celebration, but the recognition it receives in the out-state areas and throughout the nation depends largely on the alumni clubs.

Plans are in process for a special observance of a "Founders' Month," from February 12 to March 12, during which time the alumni clubs will be asked to hold a special meeting in honor of the Centennial celebration. The Centennial Committee of the Alumni Advisory Council, who presented the plans for approval by the Council, feels that this will bring the Centennial observance much closer to the general public through the active participation of the alumni.

The majority of Michigan State's 107 alumni clubs already have begun plans for special programs and meetings, according to Starr Keesler, director of alumni relations. Many alumni will also sponsor special programs about Michigan State at civic clubs and other organizations of which they are members. "We are planning to mail a speakers list to all the alumni clubs, after the final list is prepared by the Centennial Speakers Bureau, for special use during Founders' month," Keesler said.

Making plans well in advance, the Committee stated that alumni activities on the campus during 1955 will include an alumni weekend and Homecoming (a full year ahead). The first general luncheon meeting of alumni in many years will take place on the campus Saturday, June 4.

"A major contribution to the success of Michigan State's Centennial year is assured through the active planning of the alumni," Keesler said.

The 19-year-old co-ed has brown hair, blue eyes, stands five feet, six inches in height, and weighs 123. Since entering M.S.C., Jan has received the following crowns: Engineering Queen, Miss M.S.C., Miss Big Ten, and Abbot Hall Queen (bestowed by her dormitory).

AFFAIRS OF STATE

National FFA President Winds Up Term

A clean-cut, polished, smooth-operating young man pounded the gavel to bring 11,000 highly-spirited farm-reared boys to order in the huge auditorium in Kansas City last month. He was David Boyne, 20-year-old Michigan State College ag student, who was finishing his year's term as president of the Future Farmers of America.

The Sanilac county farm boy had covered nearly 75,000 miles, made hundreds of talks to many thousands adults and youth, visited with top diplomats, farm leaders and business executives since he left the farm to start to college two years before.

"It's been a very eventful period—this last 18 months—one any American young man would enjoy," the black-haired honor student in dairy production explained.

After two terms in school in fall, 1952 and winter, 1953, David was notified that he had been selected as an exchange delegate to represent the Future Farmers of

David Boyne

America in the British Isles. He left school at the end of winter term for his six-months' trip to England where he lived on 21 different farms and talked with English farm youth and adults. He returned in the fall of 1953, too late to enroll at M.S.C.

At the 1953 annual meeting of the Future Farmers of America he made a masterful presentation of his experiences as an exchange delegate of the organization. His ability to speak lent momentum to the boom which resulted in election of the Michigan State student as national president of F.F.A. The organization has 373,000 members.

"I knew that meant two more terms away from college—but it has been worth it. In filling the job I've traveled in 37 states and Canada, covered the distance around the world and talked to thousands of people," David explained.

Except for an occasional speaking engagement, he is back at his books, picking up where he left off 18 months ago. When he can spare a weekend it is back on the farm near Marlette where he has a partnership with his father and brother James. Jim was one of the 11,000 delegates at this fall's F.F.A. convention. He is president of the Michigan F.F.A. organization, a job which brother David held four years before.

Top College Officials Advise Vietnamese

At the personal request of the premier of Vietnam, four M.S.C. officials are on a special assignment in Vietnam to help that government solve administrative problems.

Members of the mission are: Dr. Edward Weidner, head of the Department of Political Science; James H. Denison, administrative assistant to the president and public relations head; Arthur F. Brandstatter, head of the Department of Police, and Dr. Charles C. Killingsworth, head of the Department of Economics.

Premier Ngo Dinh Diem's request for assistance in administrative matters was channeled through the Foreign Operations Administration, a U.S. agency headed in Washington by Harold E. Stassen. Ngo, who indicated a preference for M.S.C. men, has been corresponding on southeast Asia affairs with the college's governmental research bureau for more than two years.

The four experts in government affairs will consult with the South Vietnamese government officials in the areas of law enforcement, public administration, public information and finance and economics. All four men are on loan from the college and are on leave of absence from their college positions.

Michigan State's assistance in Vietnam brings to four the number of major international programs in which the university is engaged. These others include the "adoption" of the University of the Ryukyus on Okinawa, development of the first school of business administration in Brazil, and agricultural assistance in Colombia.

Marlin K. Farmer Dies

Dr. Marlin K. Farmer, associate professor of humanities at M.S.C., died in the latter part of October at the age of 47. Dr. Farmer was editor of the Basic College Newsletter and was on the Basic College Research committee and the Publications and Public Relations committee.

ELECT OFFICERS: The Michigan State College Alumni Advisory Council assembled for the annual Fall meeting in October. The new 1955 officers are: Chairman, Hazen H. Stevens, '42, Saginaw; Vice-chairman, Chris F. Beukema, '40, Detroit; Secretary, W. L. "Buzz" Hart, '49, Grand Rapids. Retiring from office as Chairman will be Harold Gasser, '25; Vice-chairman, Claude Erickson, '22; Secretary, Al Cox, '33.

MSC Museum Director Joseph W. Stack Dies

Shortly before the start of the school year, Michigan State College suffered the loss of Professor Joseph W. Stack, 61-year-old director of the M.S.C. museum, who died after an extended illness.

Since 1924 when he became curator of the museum, Prof. Stack had devoted many years to developing a campus museum which was exceptional in many respects.

For the past three years he had been building up an agricultural museum, designed to show Michigan's progress. It was his belief that Michigan State, the oldest agricultural college, should have an agricultural museum second to none, and he planned to collect every article possible that had been used on the farm or in the farm home.

His habitat groups of wild animals in natural settings are an outstanding contribution to the museum. He also started one of the first bird-banding stations in the nation in 1924 on the M.S.C. campus. Nationally known for his zoological work, he published a number of articles on birds and the importance of bird life to agriculture.

Prof. Stack was associated with the college since 1915, first as a zoology instructor and later, in 1941, as the museum director.

To honor his memory, a group of his neighbors and friends have established a memorial scholarship fund in his name. Mrs. Duane Gibson, who recently turned the funds over to the scholarship office, said that there was already more than $100 in the fund.

Those who wish to share in this memorial may send their contribution to the Scholarship Office, attention of J. R. Stewart, Michigan State College.

Department Sets Record

An unusual record has been set in the number of books published by a single department in a year's time.

The Department of Sociology and Anthropology has eight books either published or in the process of publication. One of them, Rural Social Systems and Adult Education, authored by several of the staff members, was the Michigan State College Press' best seller in May.

Two books were published on the rural community. One, Community Health Action: A Study of Community Contrast by Paul A. Miller and other staff members, provides comprehensive information on how rural people organize to obtain hospital and public health services. The other, Turrialba: Social Systems and the Introduction of Change by several M.S.C. staff, is an analysis of technological assistance rendered to rural people in the village trade centers in Costa Rica.

John and Ruth Useem authored The Social Roles of the Foreign Educated in India, and John Useem is also the author of Power, A Study in Cross-Cultural Relations.

Also to be published are: The Sociology of Education by Wilbur Brookover, Patterns of Community Involvement by Christopher Sower and co-authors Kenneth Tiedke, John B. Holland and Walter F. Freeman; and Readings in Latin American Social Organizations and Institutions, edited by Olen E. Leonard and Charles P. Loomis.

Faculty Achievements

Michigan State professors have been active in making outstanding contributions to the realm of literature and music in the past few months.

The premier of a new recorded work by Dr. H. Owen Reed, professor of music at M.S.C. was performed on the American Broadcasting Company network this fall. The composition, "La Fiesta Mexicana," is in three movements: "Prelude and Aztec Dance," "Mass" and "Festival."

Dr. Austin L. Moore, associate professor of humanities, is the author of the newly published book "Farewell Farouk." The book is a true story of the extraordinary events which occurred in Egypt during the last year of King Farouk's reign.

Just off the press is a book on "Fruits, Vegetables, Flowers" written by horticulturist Dr. George M. Kessler. It was written primarily as a supplementary text for a course in horticulture.

Dr. Dale E. Hathaway, agricultural economist, received the top award for the best farm economics article of 1953. Selected from about 80 articles, the winning essay is called, "Agricultural Policy and Farmers' Freedom: A Suggested Framework."

Dr. David Potter, associate professor of speech, has contributed to two newly published speech books. Dr. Potter wrote a paper entitled "The Literary Society" which will appear in the book "History of Speech Education in America."

Press Box Report on SPARTAN SPORTS

By FRED STABLEY and TED EMERY

LONG BEFORE the 1954 football season began, Coach Hugh Duffy Daugherty said that the Spartans would probably start slow, gain momentum and finish strong.

The first five games of the year have made Daugherty's prediction correct. But the Spartans dropped four of their first five games by a total of only 25 points.

Actually not a slow start when it is considered that the Spartans have met Iowa, Wisconsin, Purdue and Notre Dame, four of the nation's finest, and a rugged Indiana eleven.

When Michigan State began defense of its co-Big Ten championship, it did so with the knowledge that the squad had lost three fine linemen in Larry Fowler, Jim Neal and Don Dohoney, and that replacing backs like Tom Yewcic, Evan Slonac and Billy Wells would be a difficult task.

The loss to Iowa pointed out that inexperience was State's biggest weakness. The close, 6-0 defeat at the hands of Wisconsin showed that Michigan State had begun to fill those inexperience gaps. The win over Indiana and the 20-19 loss to Notre Dame showed that Michigan State was on its way up the ladder, and that the new men were becoming old hands.

Even in the 27-13 loss to Purdue the coaches found bright spots as LeRoy Bolden returned to form.

The early season loss of Co-Capt. and left halfback LeRoy Bolden was a severe loss to the team. Bolden had been counted on to provide the spark for the running attack. But Johnny Matsock, who starred in the Rose Bowl game, came off the bench to fill in for Bolden, and Matsock turned in two of the finest performances of the season against Indiana and Notre Dame.

Perhaps the brightest development of the early season was the passing attack. With junior ends John Lewis and Jim Hinesly on the receiving end, and quarterback Earl Morrall on the throwing side, the Spartans added a dangerous punch to their offense.

With each game providing more experience for the new men, the Spartans appear certain to finish the year strongly, as Coach Daugherty predicted.

Basketball, Hockey Set for Openers

New head basketball Coach Fordy Anderson has a 22-game schedule for his netters, including 14 Big Ten matches, while Coach Amo Bessone will direct his hockey men against 27 opponents, the biggest schedule ever.

Basketball: Dec. 1, Marquette; Dec. 4, Detroit; Dec. 17-18, Pennsylvania and Princeton at Philadelphia; Dec. 22, DePaul; Dec. 30, Penn State; Jan. 3, at Ohio State; Jan. 8, Wisconsin; Jan. 10, at Iowa; Jan. 15, Michigan; Jan. 17, at Indiana; Jan. 22, Minnesota; Jan. 29, at DePaul; Jan. 31, Purdue; Feb. 5, at Wisconsin; Feb. 7, at Notre Dame; Feb. 12, at Northwestern; Feb. 14, at Illinois; Feb. 19, Iowa; Feb. 21, Northwestern; Feb. 28, Indiana; March 5, at Michigan.

Hockey: Nov. 26, at Rensselaer; Nov. 27, at Clarkson; Nov. 29, at St. Lawrence; Dec. 3-4, North Dakota; Dec. 17-18, at Denver; Dec. 21-22, at Colorado; Dec. 31-Jan. 1, Michigan Tech; Jan. 7, Michigan; Jan. 8, at Michigan; Jan. 21-22, at Michigan Tech; Jan. 28-29, Western Ontario; Feb. 4-5, at Minnesota; Feb. 11, Michigan; Feb. 18-19, at North Dakota; Feb. 21, at Michigan; Feb. 25-26, Minnesota; March 4-5, Ontario.

Championship Meets Next for Spartans

Michigan State's cross-country squad defends its two championships this month, although the prospects for retaining either crown are very slim.

The Spartans defend their Big Ten title Nov. 12 at Chicago, and the IC4A crown Nov. 15 at VanCortlandt Park, N. Y. In addition, there are the NCAA Championships at East Lansing, Nov. 22.

Inexperience and the loss of Capt. John Cook have hurt the Spartans considerably, but Coach Karl Schlademan has said all season that the squad will give a good showing in the championship matches.

Schlademan scheduled dual meets with Ohio State, Penn State, Wisconsin and Western Michigan for the regular season, and all have strong teams.

"Our new men gained experience during these meets," Schlademan pointed out. "And experience is all this squad needs to make it a tough one in the championships."

With a squad composed almost entirely of sophomores and juniors, and a reportedly strong freshman team, big things may be in store for the harriers during the next few years.

The November schedule: Nov. 6 Michigan AAU (tentative); Nov. 12, Big Ten Championships at Chicago; Nov. 15, ICAAAA Championships at VanCortlandt Park, N. Y.; Nov. 22, NCAA Championships at East Lansing.

HOMECOMING

Perfect weather hailed the homecoming alumni who basked in the warm sun at Macklin stadium and watched the football clash between the Spartans and the boilermakers of Purdue. Welcomed everywhere by the traditional Homecoming decorations on the dormitories, fraternities and sorority houses, old grads started off the two-day program with general registration Friday afternoon. An eventful weekend closed with the Homecoming Ball Saturday evening when Joyce Cosmann was officially crowned M.S.C.'s Homecoming queen. Alumni club presidents and representatives spent a busy two days attending sessions of the Club Presidents's workshop and their banquet Friday evening at which President John A. Hannah spoke. Following the dinner the men went to the Stag Smoker at the Olds Hotel and the alumnae attended a Mixer.

COVERING THE CLUBS

ROBERT C. TOLL '49

Class of 1949

Selects Class Project

A feeling of really wanting to do something for Michigan State College permeated the first class reunion of the '49ers last June. Several ideas were mentioned at the reunion; however, Bob Maldegan, class president, appointed a committee to give this matter some real thought. This committee was further charged with seeking advice as to what project would be most worthy of the class effort. Mae Wieneke, committee chairman, revealed that at the first meeting of the committee it was decided that the class should promote 100 per cent participation in the ROLL CALL in order that the class might be the first to hold this distinction.

A dollar from every '49er is more important than large contributions from a few. Keynote of the campaign will be 100 per cent participation. Class members are asked to watch for special notices in their ROLL CALL letters pertaining to this '49ers project. The committee and the class agents will ask for the dollar "gold nuggets". However, larger gifts will be encouraged.

Should the class not reach the 100 per cent participation goal, the final percentage of participation should still be higher than any other class, as the '49ers are the first class to undertake such a project. With the 1949 class being the fourth largest graduating class, the committee hopes that next year's total gift from the class will greatly enhance the work accomplished by the ROLL CALL.

All '49ers are encouraged to consider the worthwhileness of the ROLL CALL and when the call comes to respond with their dollar "gold nuggets".

Stag Smokers

Michigan State College's Alumni Club of Saginaw joined with the Saginaw U. of M. Club for a Fall Kick-Off Smoker late in September. Over 100 alumni of the two schools turned out at Rolling Green Country Club for the event. Athletic Director Biggie Munn, Big Ten official Jack Bauer, and U. of M. Freshman Coach Wally Weber discussed the football situation as it exists today with some specific remarks about the two teams. Movies of the M.S.C.-Iowa game were shown by Biggie Munn.

Jackson High school basketball coaches and members of the Jackson Alumni Club gathered September 14 to hear new basketball coach Forddy Anderson at the annual club smoker. Charles Willbee, '45, acted as toastmaster, he introduced Forddy to get the program underway. Coach Anderson discussed modern style basketball and told the group something about the M.S.C. team for the coming year.

Over 50 Kent County alumni gathered for a stag smoker Tuesday, October 12. Steve Reynolds, '48, club president, discussed an amendment to the club constitution before the M.S.C.-Iowa and M.S.C.-Indiana football films were shown to the group by Bob Toll, assistant alumni director.

Genesee County men held their annual smoker in October with over 100 of the members turning out. Dusty Rhodes, '50, club president, reviewed the club projects, and appealed for more participation by Genesee County alumni before a football ticket drawing was held. The group saw the M.S.C.-Wisconsin football game before they disbanded for the evening.

College Speakers Visit Clubs

Dean Edgar L. Harden, of the Continuing Education Service and faculty representative to the Western Conference, described the service rendered to the people of Michigan by the Continuing Education Service when he spoke at the year's first meeting of the Saginaw Alumni Club. Joe Storm, '49, club president, introduced William L. Davidson, M.S.C. fund director, who told of the ROLL CALL after Dean Harden had concluded his remarks.

The Wayne County, Northwest Suburban Alumni Club meeting in Northville for their first meeting of the year heard Alvie L. Smith, Centennial director, describe the plans for the Centennial activities at the College. Mr. Smith emphasized the importance of alumni participation during the Centennial year. Many alumni clubs are planning large Founders' Day celebrations during February and March of 1955. Ralph Kotila, '43, club president, introduced Bob Toll, of the Alumni Office, who narrated the M.S.C.-Iowa football film.

High school students and members of the Midland Quarterback Club were guests of the Gladwin-Midland Alumni Club at the club's October 11 meeting. Starr H. Keesler, '41, director of alumni relations, was introduced by Bill Markle-

TO GATHER GOLD NUGGETS: The Class of '49 at its first reunion in June 1954 voted to attempt a class project. Members of the project committee above are: (l. to r.) Bob Gregor, '49, Mrs. Muriel Read McGuire, '49, Mae Wieneke, '49, committee chairman, and Bob Maldegan, '49, alumni class president.

John McGoff, '50, assumed a new position as Coordinator of the Cap and Gown series in September. For the past four years John has served as assistant alumni director and as author of this column, and in so doing has made many friends during his calls to alumni clubs around the state. John, as originator of the Cap and Gown series, has witnessed its growth until now a full time position has been created. The Cap and Gown series is designed to bring student entertainment and cultural programs to the communities of the state. The Alumni Relations staff wish him the best with his new undertaking.

Arao Itano writes from N.E. Agri. Sci. Research Institute, Kungchuling, N.E. China: "With my heartiest thanks and sweet recollection of my days by the Red Cedar, I wish to acknowledge the receipt of two copies of the RECORD and letters, recently forwarded to me from Japan. The photo of the ground breaking ceremonies for enlargement of Macklin Stadium appealed to me much, as I served as the captain of the 1911 tennis team under Macklin's directorship. I gave him much trouble to give better recognition for tennis, although tennis itself was primitive then, and in some sense it was parasitic on the major sports, playing only a few intercollegiate matches without any income. Again in 1927, when I attended the 1st International Congress of Soil Science held in Washington, D. C., representing Japan, Prof. Macklin surprised me in the hotel lobby by grabbing my shoulder with his big hand and saying 'Hello Tano' as he used to call me. He was there then to welcome Lindbergh who just returned from his Atlantic flight. I doubt if many of my old professors and colleagues still survive. I wish to send my best regards to those who are still on map."

Dr. Herman S. Forest, who received his M.S. with the class and his Ph.D. in '51, writes of "two minor but splendid MSC reunions that took place in Europe last summer. In Paris, at the International Botanical Congress, I encountered Clark Bowen, '49, and we did the town together, from Folies to Opera. Then both went down to Normandy where Bob LeBrec, '51, operates a large and modern farm and dairy. The countryside (within a long walk of Omaha Beach) and Bob's 15th Century chateau were dreamy surroundings, so the most sentimental MSC booster would have been moved by seeing us these, three Spartans, after a delicious French dinner and about four sorts of local beverages, standing as the twilight faded and a record of 'M.S.C. Shadows' played, toasting MSC—it was great. The other reunion almost didn't happen. I was flying from Haifa to Zurich, when the plane was delayed in Athens for several hours. It was 11:00 p.m., the hotel was ten miles from the city and I knew no Greek. Over on the other side of Athens was MSC alumnus George Vayonis, '49, and the Spartan spirit must prevail. So, with the aid of an Israeli plane passenger who spoke ten languages (not including Greek), two Greek youths who knew only their native language and sign language, an ice cream store operator who spoke French, and several thousand Drachmas (30,000 to a dollar) George was located at midnight, and reunion ensued. George had returned to Greece to discharge his army obligation, and still has some months of service remaining. After that he would like to return to the U.S. as a plant physiologist." 3rd or 4th Generation?

It would be interesting to know some of the third and fourth generation families to attend Michigan State College. Perhaps some of you have as unique a story to tell as Mrs. Fred Morse whom we wrote about in the September issue of THE RECORD. If you have, please write and tell us. Recently we received a phone call from Annie Laurie McElroy who said that her husband's father, Edward M. McElroy was a graduate of the class of '93; her husband, James Kerr McElroy, class of '28; and son Edward Bruce, class of '56.

There must be other families who have attended Michigan State for three, or possibly four generations.
